Tobit 13:16–18: “For Ierusalem shall be built vp with Saphires, and Emeralds, and precious stone: thy walles and towres, and battlements with pure golde. And the streets of Ierusalem shal be paved with Berill, and Carbuncle, and stones of Ophir. And all her streets shall say, Halleluiah, and they shall praise him, saying, Blessed be God which hath extolled it for euer” (KJV 1611).

12 And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones.

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And I will place thy timbers with gems, and thy gates shall be of carbuncles, and all thy borders with precious stones.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And for thy battlements I will lay jasper; and crystal, for thy gates; and for thy circumambient walls, precious stones.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓟ) has, “And I will make your walls of jasper and your gates of crystal and your borders of precious stones. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) renders it, “And I will make thy bulwarks of jasper: and thy gates of graven stones, and all thy borders of desirable stones.” ¶ Govett writes: “Following this gracious promise is the description of the new Jerusalem, agreeing beautifully with that in the Revelation. ‘I will prepare sapphires as thy foundations,’ saith Isaiah. ‘The second’ (foundation) saith St. John, ‘a sapphire.’ ‘And thy gates of crystal.’ ‘And the twelve gates,’ saith the beloved disciple, ‘were twelve pearls: every several gate was one pearl.’ It need scarcely be noticed how well the ‘crystal’ of Isaiah agrees with ‘the pearl’ of St. John, the pearl being of a crystalline semi-transparent texture. ‘And the circumference of precious stones.’ Even so St. John: ‘And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones’ (Revelation 21:19–21).” Slotki/Rosenberg, leaning on Rashi and Kimhi, explain for שַׁמֶּשׁ תִּי, “The Hebrew noun denotes windows through which the sun (שֶׁשֶׁשׁ) shines.” One exegete suggested that each stone, similarly to those on the breastplate of the High Priest, stands for each tribe of Israel.

13 And all thy children [shall be] taught of the LORD; and great [shall be] the peace of thy children.

And all thy children shall be taught of the LORD. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “learn the law” instead of taught. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Even thy sons, all instructed of God.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) renders it, “And all thy children shall learn of me.” ¶ Henderson explains that by לְמוֹדֵי יְהוָה (see also Gesenius) we literally have disciples of Jehovah. Leeser translates “And all thy children shall be disciples of the Lord,”

וְכָל-בְּנֵיךָ לְמוֹדֵי יְהוָה. Alexander renders it: “And all thy children disciples of Jehovah ... The promise is not one of occasional instruction, but of permanent connection with Jehovah as his followers, and partakers of his constant teaching.” Govett says: “But its [the New Jerusalem] chief bliss shall not be the splendor of its decorations, but the fact ‘that they shall be all,’ as the Savior remarked, ‘taught of God.’” In Jeremiah 31:33–34 we read: “But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more” (emphasis added). This verse is quoted by our Redeemer: “No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me” (John 6:44–45). Faussett also points to these New Testament references: 1 Corinthians 2:10; Hebrews 8:10; 10:16; and 1 John 2:20. While the most complete fulfillment of this prophecy may point to the Millennium, I feel that in the Lord’s Church this already happens, that we are continually instructed from on high. ¶ President Gordon B. Hinckley taught mothers that despite the challenges they might be facing, to make sure to teach the children in the way of the Lord: “But if when they are very small there is much of affection, there is shown much of love, there is prayer together, then there will more likely be peace in the hearts and strength in the character of your children. Teach them the ways of the Lord. Declared Isaiah, ‘All thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children’ (ISAIAH 54:13).¹³ Furthermore, “I hope you keep nurturing and loving your children, leading them in light and truth. They are the most precious things you have in all the world. Among all the assets you possess nothing is so precious as your children.”¹⁴ And also: “If you want to see peace in the lives of your children, then teach them the ways of righteousness and truth ... Peace comes of living the gospel of Jesus Christ.”¹⁵ ¶ And great shall be the peace of thy children. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And thy children in great prosperity.” ¶ As disciples of Christ permit themselves to be taught by the Spirit, and have continual communication with God, truly, great shall be their peace. Once again, while some of these scriptures will be fulfilled more fully as righteous spirits move on to Paradise in the Spirit world, and come forth in the morning of the Millennium, I testify that this peace is available today, even in the midst of the chaos we live in.

¹³ Hinckley, President Gordon B., Stand Strong against the Wiles of the World, Ensign (CR), November 1995, p. 98.

¹⁴ Messages of Inspiration from President Hinckley, LDS Church News, 1996, 3 February 1996.

14 In righteousness shalt thou be established; thou shalt be far from oppression for thou shalt not fear, and from terror for it shall not come near thee.

In righteousness shalt thou be established. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And with righteousness thou shalt be rebuilt.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And thou shalt be founded in justice.” ¶ The Lord expects us to move forward in righteousness for in doing right there is safety and peace. But note that this righteousness is of me, our Lord (ISAIAH 54:17). To be established means to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise and prepared to come forth in the morning of the first resurrection as candidates for the Celestial Kingdom. ¶ Thou shalt be far from oppression for thou shalt not fear, and from terror for it shall not come near thee. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Abstain from injustice and thou shalt not be affrighted; and as for terror, it shall not approach thee.” Instead of terror, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has destruction (Lamsa) / devastation (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “Depart far from oppression, for thou shalt not fear; and from terror, for it shall not come near thee.” ¶ Luther suggests that we ought not fear “slander and injury.” Once again, the Lord is offering the enduring peace of discipleship; a peace that will give comfort and diminish fear. The promise is that terror will be kept from the disciples. This is not a promise that disciples will be protected in a bubble from the vicissitudes of life (for as the next verse shows, such challenges shall gather together), but rather, that the companionship of the Holy Ghost will provide unending comfort.

15 Behold, they shall surely gather together, [but] not by me; whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake.

Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Behold, the captivity of thy people shall surely be gathered unto thee.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Behold proselytes shall come to thee for my sake.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) has something like, “All who are brought back by my hand shall enter into you; and they shall be as a place of refuge to your inhabitants.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “Behold, an inhabitant shall come, who was not with me.” Birks has: “All enemies, however mighty, who fight against this city of God, shall ‘stumble, and fall, and not be found,’ (Daniel 11:19). There seems a special reference to the last revealed gathering of God’s enemies (Revelation 20:7–9 [at the end of the Millennium—GB]), and to the solemn issue which is there foretold.” There also seems to be an allusion to Jerusalem surrounded by her enemies in the last days, at the time of Christ’s Second Advent. So also Keith: “The previous allusion to the righteous manner of the re-establishment of the nation in their own land, and to their liberty and peace there, introduces a notice of the destruction of their enemies. The gathering together of all the nations against Jerusalem, so often referred to, will be followed by their downfall.” Nägelsbach explains: “First [Isaiah] does not deny that there may be hostile conspiracies against Israel. Behold, they shall surely gather ... in a hostile sense ... But though that may happen it is not from Me, says the LORD.” Young has: “God Himself does not instigate the gathering of enemies against His people.” So also Ibn Ezra who has: “The meaning of the whole verse is accordingly: ‘Is it possible, that any alliance should be made except [i.e., contrary to—GB] with my permission?’ (The alliance between Gog and Magog is here referred to).” Henderson suggests that there are cases when those who have turned against Zion have been permitted to succeed, but that this would not be the case at the times spoken of in these verses: “The meaning of this verse is, that whatever enemies might assault the church, they were not to be viewed as commissioned by God to execute wrath upon her, as the Assyrians and Babylonians had been, and consequently should not succeed in their attempts to remove her.” ¶ Whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “In the end, the kings of the nations, who are gathered together to oppress thee, O Jerusalem, shall be cast down in the midst of thee.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And they shall sojourn with thee and fly to thee.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) is missing this clause. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “He that was a stranger to thee before, shall be joined to thee.” ¶ JUB renders it, “shall fall before thee.” Those who fight against Zion are fighting against God and kicking against the pricks. They will not succeed. Luther reminds us that “If God be for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31).

¹⁵ Messages of Inspiration from President Hinckley, LDS Church News, 1998, 3 January 1988.

16 Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy.

Behold, I have created [בְּרָאתִי] the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work. The LXX (6) reads, “Behold I have created thee, not like a coppersmith blowing coals and using a tool for the work.” ¶ Better, I formed, בְּרָאתִי. Birks suggests: “The pronouns are emphatic. The great Creator permits the plots of evil men to prosper for a season, but condemns them at last to disappointment and utter shame.” The essence of this verse is explained by Skinner: “No weapon formed against Zion shall prosper, because both the makers of weapons [the smith] and those who use them [the waster] are alike created by Jehovah, and all their activity is under His control.” Alexander also: “The general meaning evidently is, that God can certainly redeem his pledge, because all instruments and agents are alike at his disposal and under his control. He is not only the maker of the weapons of war, but the maker of their maker, as well as of the warrior who wields them.—The pronoun in both clauses is emphatic. It is I (and not another) who created them.” The idea seems to be that the activity against Jerusalem or against Zion will be limited in its ability to do harm. ¶ And I have created the waster to destroy. The LXX (6) reads, “But I have created thee, not for destruction.” Instead of waster, the Peshitta (5) has ravager (Lamsa) / destroyer (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (1) has killer instead of waster. ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Redak, explains this as an allusion to the great battle of Gog and Magog against Jerusalem. In it, a large number shall fall before the Lord will make His appearance in great majesty and power.

17 No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue [that] shall ~~rise~~ revile against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This [is] the heritage of the servants of the LORD, and their righteousness [is] of me, saith the LORD.

No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper. The Targum (2) adds, “O Jerusalem,” after against thee. The LXX (6) reads, “Perish every weapon formed against thee! I will not prosper it.” ¶ Elder Packer eulogized President Ezra Taft Benson, and said that the latter had much opposition during his mission to England and ‘always kept this verse from the Book of Mormon in his wallet: “No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall revile against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord’ (3 Nephi 22:17).”¹⁶ Indeed, no weapon made can triumph against the Lord and His disciples. Also see notes on ISAIAH 7:12, “The Standard of Truth.” ¶ And every tongue that shall revile against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. The LXX (6) reads, “Though every voice should rise up against thee for judgment, thou shalt overcome them all and in the trial they shall be condemned.” The Douay-Rheims (1) has resisteth thee instead of revile against thee. ¶ Govett writes: “The next promise of Isaiah, that ‘every tongue which riseth against them in judgement they shall condemn,’ receives a glorious illustration from the words of Paul, ‘Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God’s elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?’ (Romans 8:33–35).” Rabbi Rosenberg, leaning on Redak, beautifully explains: “they will harm you neither with their deeds nor with their speech.” Elder Robert D. Hales spoke exquisitely about the need for Church members to respond to attacks with love, and further, that the Church does not feel a need to defend herself from verbal assaults from others: “Paul reminded the Corinthians that his preaching was ‘not with the enticing words of man’s wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power’ (1 Corinthians 2:4). Because that power resides in the Spirit of the Lord, we must never become contentious when we are discussing our faith. As almost every missionary learns, Bible bashing always drives the Spirit away. The Savior has said, ‘He that hath the spirit of contention is not of me.’ More regrettable than the Church being accused of not being Christian is when Church members react to such accusations in an un-Christlike way! May our conversations with others always be marked by the fruits of the Spirit—‘love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, [and] temperance.’ To be meek, as defined in Webster’s dictionary, is ‘manifesting patience and longsuffering: enduring injury without resentment.’ Meekness is not weakness. It is a badge of Christian courage. This is especially important in our interactions with members of other Christian denominations. Surely our Heavenly Father is saddened—and the devil laughs—when we contentiously debate doctrinal differences with our Christian neighbors. This is not to suggest that we compromise our principles or dilute our beliefs. We cannot change the doctrines of the restored gospel, even if teaching and obeying them makes us unpopular in the eyes of the world. Yet even as we feel to speak the word of God with boldness, we must pray to be filled with the Holy Ghost (see Acts 4:29, 31). We should never confuse boldness with Satan’s counterfeit: overbearance (see Alma 38:12). True disciples speak with quiet confidence, not boastful pride.”¹⁷ ¶ This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “There is an inheritance for them who serve the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has inheritance instead of heritage. Nägelsbach writes: “This (זאת) refers back to the rich promise of blessing of the chapter. This is given to the servants of Jehovah [עֲבָדֵי יְהוָה]. Isaiah intentionally speaks here for the first and only time of servants of Jehovah. Manifestly there is intended an antithesis to the Servant of Jehovah that plays so prominent a part in ISAIAH 53. After that chapter the Prophet has nothing more to say concerning the Servant of Jehovah. But he has still to indicate how the salvation from the Saviour will be conveyed to those that need and are worthy of salvation.” And what is this heritage that the Prophet speaks about here? Exaltation in the Celestial Kingdom of God. ¶ And their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore you are to be just for me, saith the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “And their justice with me, saith the Lord.” It is clear to me that the Lord lends us His righteousness and helps us to improve and become better persons little by little as we progress through life. It is indeed a job for a lifetime and “it will be a great while after you have passed through the veil,” that this effort will continue, as taught by the Prophet Joseph Smith.¹⁸ ¶ Saith the Lord. Several translators used the expression declares the LORD. Young points out that the final saith the LORD, or oracle of the LORD, אָמֵן־יְהוָה, stands as a “strong affirmation, an Amen, to the truth of this assertion.”

¹⁶ Avant, Gerry. President Benson Eulogized. Church News, 11 June 1994.

FIRST POSTED: 14 June 2016

¹⁷ Hales, Elder Robert D. “Christian Courage: The Price of Discipleship,” October 2008 General Conference.

¹⁸ Smith, Joseph & Roberts, B.H. History of the Church, Volume 6.

Isaiah 55

All are invited to come unto Christ, partake of the living and cleansing waters of the Gospel, and be healed by the atoning sacrifice of our Redeemer. If we turn unto Christ, He will pay the price for us, else, we will have to suffer anguish untold. We are often hard in our judgment of others and of ourselves and assume that God will likewise treat us. Christ assures us that His ways are higher than ours and that He has His arms stretched out toward us and bids us come to Him. This earth will once again take upon herself her paradisiacal glory which she possessed while Adam and Eve were in the Garden of Eden.

vv. 1–5. Come and partake of the waters of the Gospel. Do not spend your efforts for things that do not lead to joy in this life and life eternal. Heed the invitation to partake of the Gospel and enter into the new and everlasting covenant. Christ is a witness to the people. Israel shall one day realize that many of dispersed of the children of Jacob from the nations of the world have joined her in her love for the Lord.

1 ¶ HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.

HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second clause, “let him come and learn.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “HO! ye who are thirsting, come to water!” ¶ This is the same הוֹ Ho or cheerful salutation we saw in ISAIAH 18. It is at times used as an exclamation of threat. Oswalt has: “Ho is the same word translated elsewhere as “Woe!” or “Alas!” ... most [commentators suggest it is a] general call for attention. Its presence here along with the five imperatives in this verse gives a strong sense of urgency and importance to what follows.” Jennings well says: “[ISAIAH 55] begins with a cry of a ‘Ho!’ for now the glad tidings of what those sufferings have effected must go to the furthest bounds of human dwelling, and wherever there is a burdened, a sorrowing, a dissatisfied heart, there this silvery invitation is welcomed. Is it not beautifully appropriate that such a call should be broadcast with trumpet-strength that it may reach afar to all, awaken the attention of all? Thus the ‘Ho’ must not be overlooked.” Rashi, in Rosenberg, explains that הוֹ can be an “expression of calling, inviting, and gathering.” ¶ Alexander interestingly notes (though he has a different perspective) that “some of the Fathers [see a] reference to the water of baptism ... in this verse.” It is interesting because in ISAIAH 48:1 we have that wording in the Book of Mormon (see 1 Nephi 20:1, “and are come forth out of the waters of Judah, or out of the waters of baptism, who swear by the name of the Lord” emphasis added). ¶ Abarbanel, according to Rabbis Slotki-Rosenberg well suggest that the thirst is for the “word of God.” Barns says, “The word thirst often indicates intense desire.” Redak, in Rosenberg, explains that “just as the thirsty yearn for water, so does the soul yearn for Torah and wisdom ...” Also see Amos 8:11. Ibn Ezra has: “With these words the Lord will address those who will then be desirous to accept the Law.” ¶ Ironside says: “If it were not for the truth set forth in chapter 53 of ISAIAH, there would be no possibility of this gracious invitation ... So Isaiah, after having set forth so clearly the atoning death the Anointed of God was to die, called upon all needy, troubled souls to appropriate by faith the gracious provision thus depicted. His message to thirsty souls was identical with that proclaimed by the Lord Jesus at a later date (John 7:37),¹ and it is with a similar proclamation that the New Testament draws to a close (Revelation 22:17).² ... We may be reminded of our Lord’s words to the Samaritan woman, ‘Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but it ... shall be in him a well [or fountain] of water springing up into everlasting life’ (John 4:14).” Jenour says: “These blessings [of the gospel covenant] are figuratively represented by the terms, water, wine, and milk; and those who are invited to partake of them are the thirsty ...” ¶ And he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And he that hath no silver, come, hear and learn.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And ye who have no money, come buy and eat.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has “and you that have no money make haste, buy, and eat.” ¶ Jenour notes: “They have no money ... no merits to offer in exchange for the promised mercies. These therefore are offered freely; without money, &c. There is a peculiar emphasis in the original, which can scarcely be conveyed in a translation. It implies not only that the promised blessings are to be had without money, &c.; but that they cannot be had with it; ‘not for money nor for price.’ And that is because no one can say that the blessings have been merited. We are all beggars before the Lord. Kay has: “They must come (John 6:35, 45), and procure it; though it be given away without price (ISAIAH 52:3, ‘For thus saith the LORD, Ye have sold yourselves for nought; and ye shall be redeemed without money.’).” ¶ Yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Come, hear and learn, without price and money, doctrine that is better than wine and milk.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Without money and without price, wine and the choicest bread.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Ta’anith 7a; also see Seder Nezikin, Baba Kama 17a, 82a and so on) has: “Rabbi Hanina ben Ida said: Why are the words of the Torah likened unto water—as it is written, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye for water’? This is to teach you, just as water flows from a higher level to a lower, so too the words of the Torah endure only with him who is meekminded. Rabbi Oshaia said: Why are the words of the Torah likened unto these three liquids, water, wine and milk — as it is written, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water’; and it is written, Come ye, buy and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk without money, and without price? This is to teach you, just as these three liquids can only be preserved in the most inferior of vessels, so too the words of the Torah endure only with him who is meekminded” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Ibn Ezra asserts regarding וַיִּבְרַח אֶת־הַלֵּב: “Wine and milk are mentioned because the Law is compared with them.” Rashi, in Slotki-Rosenberg, suggests that “learning ... is better than wine and milk.” Cowles has: “The central idea is, the best and most needful things for the body made the symbols of the best and most vital blessings for the soul. The abundance and freeness of the former represent the yet richer abundance and free ness of the latter.” As Wordsworth mentions: “Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled” (Matthew 5:6). ¶ Elder Moses Thatcher shared: “... the standards of value are established by the cost of things received, and by this rule we know that no good thing has ever come into this world without having cost the equal of its value. Nor has any great thought or noble idea ever been introduced that had not to fight its way inch by inch. Think of what the principles of the everlasting Gospel, that are freely given, has without money, without price, cost? Agony that caused the Son of God to sweat great drops of blood. And that being too little, He must needs be insulted, spat upon, scourged, adjudged to die ... and finally He was ignominiously crucified by those whom He came to save. Humiliated, deprived of judgment and sacrificed, the Lamb of God descended beneath all things that He might arise above all things, leading captivity captive and giving gifts to men, while holding the keys of death, hell, and the grave.”³ ¶ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland invited: “I do not know who in this vast audience today may need to hear the message of forgiveness inherent in this parable, but however late you think you are, however many chances you think you have missed, however many mistakes you feel you have made or talents you think you don’t have, or however far from home and family and God you feel you have traveled, I testify that you have not traveled beyond the reach of divine love. It is not possible for you to sink lower than the infinite light of Christ’s Atonement shines. Whether you are not yet of our faith or were with us once and have not remained, there is nothing in either case that you have done that cannot be undone. There is no problem which you cannot overcome. There is no dream that in the unfolding of time and eternity cannot yet be realized. Even if you feel you are the lost and last laborer of the eleventh hour, the Lord of the vineyard still stands beckoning. ‘Come boldly [to] the throne of grace,’ and fall at the feet of the Holy One of Israel. Come and feast ‘without money and without price’ at the table of the Lord.”⁴

¹ “In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink” (John 7:37).

² “And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely” (Revelation 22:17).

2 Wherefore do ye spend money for [that which is] not bread? and your labour for [that which] satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye [that which is] good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness.

✓ weigh

Wherefore do ye spend money for [that which is] not bread? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Wherefore do ye weigh out your silver for that which is not food?” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Why are you expending money.” The Hebrew for spend money literally means, according to the margin ׁ, to weight out money (or silver), thus “Why do ye weigh out silver?” or לָמָּה תִּשְׁקֹלֶנּוּ כֶּסֶף. So also the Targum (Ⲯ). In Spanish we also use the word silver, plata, when speaking about money. For instance, do you have money? ¿Tienes plata? Henderson explains: “to weigh, to weigh out money, in reference to the custom of weighing uncoined gold and silver in mercantile transactions, which anciently obtained, not only among the Hebrews, but among other nations; and still [Henderson’s book was printed in 1857] obtains in Turkey and other parts of the East.” As Wordsworth mentions: “Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed” (John 6:27).

³ Moses Thatcher, “The Speaker’s Pleasure, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, 26: 208b–209a, 13 April 1885.

⁴ Holland, Elder Jeffrey R., “The Laborers in the Vineyard,” Ensign, May 2012, p. 31.

¶ Not bread, לֹא־לֶחֶם. Cowles explains: “‘No-bread’ as here used is a compound word, like ‘no-wood’ (ISAIAH 10:15), and ‘no-God’ and ‘no-spirit’ (ISAIAH 31:3), meaning the opposite of bread, i.e., ... whatever is not life-sustaining but life-destroying. The ‘no’ prefixed carries the sense beyond the mere negation of bread, over to the opposite idea.” It points to that which is no-life, that is, does not lead to exaltation. ¶ This verse is an invitation to not get distracted with poor choices in life. Ibn Ezra suggests this relates to the philosophies of men: “Wherefore will you labour in profane science.”⁵ Horsley speaks of the “the laborious researches of human philosophy.” Gill says it of those who “Lavish away time, opportunities, and strength, in reading and hearing false doctrine, which is not bread, but chaff; is not wholesome, does not nourish, but is harmful and destructive; eats as does a canker, instead of feeding and refreshing; such as the vain philosophy of the Gentiles, the traditions of the Jews, and the errors and heresies of false teachers.” ¶ And your labour for [that which] satisfieth not? The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And your wealth (literally, ‘and that gotten by fatigue’) for that which satisfieth not?” The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “And labour for that which will not satisfy?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, “Doth not satisfy you?” instead of satisfieth not? Oswalt points us to Proverbs 9:5–6: “Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled. Forsake the foolish, and live; and go in the way of understanding.” Skinner has: “... worldly life is a continual spending without lasting profit or satisfaction.” ¶ Elder Spencer J. Condie applied these words of Isaiah to our temporal occupations: “Happy is the man who can truthfully say: ‘I never went to work a day in my life—I have always enjoyed my job so much.’ More commonly we are likely to hear of fathers and mothers who love each other and their family so much that they do what it takes to support and sustain them. Occupational pursuits are seen as part of a greater plan, not as the means to immediate self-gratification. It would be well to initially define the problem in terms of its eternal consequences for the family. Isaiah asked the provocative question in this regard: ‘Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not?’”⁶ I was truly blessed in my lifetime to have occupations which I absolutely loved. I was fortunate enough to have jobs that permitted me plenty of time with my family, Church callings, and that were fulfilling at the same time. Now years have transpired since I retired and I still have nightmares in which I am retiring. I think that whether a job is satisfying, is partly, dependent on our mindset. Also, we decide, to a great extent, how happy we are with retirement. I believe I am just as busy with productive happy work now as before I retired. ¶ Hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye [that which is] good. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Hearken diligently to my Word, and ye shall eat that which is good.” The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “Hearken to me and you shall eat good things.” Cowles says that instead of no-bread and that which does not satisfy, we here have a “repetition [in the original שְׂמַעְנִי שְׂמַעְנִי] expressing the earnestness of the call” to hearken. ¶ The Savior Himself taught: “Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal” (Matthew 6:19–20, also see 3 Nephi 13:19–20). ¶ And let your soul delight itself in fatness. The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “And your soul will be regaled with delicacies.” Instead of fatness, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) also has delicacies. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, “And your soul shall be delighted in fatness.” ¶ Kimhi in Slotki-Rosenberg explains that fatness represents “spiritual satisfaction.” So also Cowles who explains: “‘Fatness’ represents the choicest spiritual good.” See notes on ISAIAH 25:6: “And in this mountain shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.” This is also an invitation to the nations to come unto the banquet of the Lord. ¶ Your soul, נַפְשְׁכֶּם. It is interesting here, to LDS, that regarding the soul, Oswalt explains that to the Hebrews, the soul: “It is not the ‘flesh’ or the ‘heart’ or the ‘spirit.’ In some ways it is the sum of all these [and then again of the use of נַפְשְׁכֶּם in ISAIAH 55:3] Again, the use of ‘soul’ here is not in contrast to the body or the spirit. It is speaking about the fullest reality of human life.” The LDS definition is: “The scriptures speak of souls in three ways: (1) spirit beings, both premortal and postmortal (Alma 40:11–14; Abraham 3:23); (2) a spirit and a body united in mortality (Abraham 5:7); and (3) an immortal, resurrected person whose spirit and body have become inseparably connected (Alma 40:23; D&C 88:15–16).”

3 Incline your ear, and come unto me:
hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, [even] the sure mercies of David.

⁵ Friedländer suggests that for Ibn Ezra profane science means “speculative philosophy, metaphysics.”

⁶ Spencer J. Condie, Your Agency, Handle with Care, p.78

Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Incline your ear and receive instruction of my law, obey my Word and your soul shall be quickened.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Incline your ears and follow in my paths; hearken to me and your soul shall live on good things.” ¶ Your soul shall live is an allusion to exaltation in the Celestial Kingdom of God. ¶ Elder Eduardo Gavarret invited: “You who are not yet members of the Church will receive this invitation through the voice of the missionaries with the words, ‘Will you read the Book of Mormon? Will you pray? Will you attend church? Will you follow the example of Jesus Christ and be baptized by those who have authority?’ How will you answer this invitation today? I invite you to listen to and accept the message by saying, ‘Yes, Lord, I will follow Thee!’”⁷ Then Elder Russell M. Nelson taught us to listen: “To all of God’s children, either able to hear or deaf to mortal sound, He offers this reward: ‘Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live.’ Your soul will be blessed as you learn to listen, then listen to learn from children, parents, partners, neighbors, and Church leaders, all of which will heighten capacity to hear counsel from on high. Carefully listen to learn from the Lord through the still small voice—the Holy Spirit—which leads to truth. Listen to learn by studying scriptures that record His holy mind and will. Listen to learn in prayer, for He will answer the humble who truly seek Him.”⁸ ¶ Slotki-Rosenberg point to the Targum (ⲧ) in suggesting that inclining the ear to hear is intimately associated with obedience. Surely, the expression come unto me, is Christ’s frequent invitation to turn (שׁוּבוּ) from our ways and follow Him: “Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest” (Matthew 11:28). ¶ Ibn Ezra has: “That is, your soul shall live forever after the death of the body, or you will receive new life through Messiah, when you will return to the Divine Law.” Skinner has: “The condition imposed is simply the consent and submission of the heart to the divine will.” ¶ And I will make an everlasting covenant with you, [even] the sure mercies of David. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And I will make with you an everlasting covenant—the gracious promises to David which are faithful.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, for the second clause, “The faithful mercies of David.” ¶ Rawlinson points us to Hosea 2:18a, 19, where that Prophet speaks of this future covenant: “And in that day will I make a covenant for them ... And I will betroth thee unto me for ever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in lovingkindness, and in mercies.” And one of my favorites, from Jeremiah’s prophecies: “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD: But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more” (Jeremiah 31:31–34). ¶ NEW AND EVERLASTING COVENANT. The LDS Guide to the Scriptures explains: “The fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ (D&C 66:2). It is new every time it is revealed anew following a period of apostasy. It is everlasting in the sense that it is God’s covenant and has been enjoyed in every gospel dispensation where people have been willing to receive it. The new and everlasting covenant was revealed again to men on earth by Jesus Christ through the prophet Joseph Smith. It contains sacred ordinances administered by priesthood authority—such as baptism and temple marriage—that provide for man’s salvation, immortality, and eternal life. When people accept the gospel and promise to keep God’s commandments, God covenants to give them the blessings of his new and everlasting covenant.” ¶ The sure mercies of David, מְרַחֵם דָּוִד, make reference to Christ’s invitation to come unto Him. This is the Second David or Jesus Christ. Henderson points us to Psalm 89:1–4: “I will sing of the mercies of the LORD [מְרַחֵם יְהוָה] for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever: thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah” (emphasis added).

⁷ Gavarret, Elder Eduardo, “Yes, Lord, I Will Follow Thee,” Ensign, November 2014, p. 37. In that same talk I was struck by the story of 14 year old Norma—who would one day become his wife—as she felt prompted to stop adding coffee to her milk after hearing the missionaries speak of the Word of Wisdom. When my friend Randy Homrig shared with me that coffee was against the Word of Wisdom, the Spirit likewise prompted me to stop drinking it long before I read the Book of Mormon and became baptized. These are examples of how the Spirit places a stamp of approval on the words we speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

⁸ Nelson, Elder Russell M., “Listen to Learn,” Ensign, May 1991, p. 22.

Henderson explains: “The benefits, therefore, or mercies promised to David, were those of the everlasting reign of his Illustrious Descendant; and, as such, sure and permanent.” We can clearly see, also, that חֲסִדֵי יְהוָה is put for חֲסִדֵי יְהוָה, that is, the tender mercies of David stand for the tender mercies of the Lord. Ibn Ezra similarly observes: “It is also possible, that by ‘David’ in this verse Messiah is meant, who will be of the family of David.” Wordsworth has: “I have appointed Christ, Who was in David, and came forth from him, and Who is called ‘David’ (by Jeremiah 30:9; Ezekiel 34:23; 37:24; Hosea 3:5) ...” Rabbi Rosenberg also explains it of ‘the Messiah, a scion of David’s family ...’ Cheyne has: “The loving-kindnesses of David] Not ‘the mercies of David’ (Auth. Vers.) ... ‘Of David’ means ‘promised to David;’ ‘the loving-kindnesses of Jehovah’ is the more natural phrase, comp. ISAIAH 63:7, Psalm 89:49, 107:43, Lamentation 3:22 (‘the loving-kindnesses of David’ occurs elsewhere only in 2 Chronicles 6:42).” Cheyne offers some possibilities but prefers that proposed by Hengstenberg: “Hengstenberg thus admits that the historical covenant with David is primarily referred to, but, as the covenant extended to David’s seed, he maintains that it only attained complete fulfilment in the Messiah.”

4 Behold, I have given him [for] a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people.

Behold, I have given him [for] a witness to the people. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Behold, I have appointed him a prince, a king.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold for a testimony to nations I gave him.” Horsley notes that in both cases in ISAIAH 55:4, the word is peoples (also nations), לְאֻמִּים, לְאֻמִּים, from the root לָאָם. The Second David, or Messiah, has been given for a witness to the people. Cowles explains: “The word ‘witness’ contemplates the Messiah as testifying to the great truths of God, revealing them and confirming them as true, even as he said of himself before Pilate; ‘I am a king,’ and my empire is that of truth. ‘To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness to the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice,’ and so proves himself to be one of my subjects (John 18:37) ... This descriptive term appears among the attributes of the Messiah in Revelation 1:5, and 3:14: ‘Jesus Christ, the faithful Witness;’ ‘the faithful and true Witness.’” ¶ A leader and commander to the people. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And a ruler over all the kingdoms.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “A chief and a lawgiver to nations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “For a leader and a master to the Gentiles.” ¶ Cowles says: “... a ‘leader and commander to the people,’ requires us to refer it to the Messiah.” Brothers McConkie and Parry point out that Christ was also known as the “Lord of Sabaoth,” or “Lord of Hosts.”⁹ Barnes suggests a lawgiver. This reminds us of, “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh [Christ] come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be” (Genesis 49:10).

5 Behold, thou shalt call a nation [that] thou knowest not, and nations [that] knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the LORD thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.

Behold, thou shalt call a nation [that] thou knowest not. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Behold, a people which thou knowest not shall serve thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nations which knew thee not will fly to thee.” ¶ Israel is the focus of this verse. Because of the Messiah, even the Holy One of Israel, all the nations of the world will turn to Zion to receive the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This verse alludes to the theme in ISAIAH 54:1 and 49:21. Judah will be surprised that she is not alone, but that her sister tribes of Israel also love the LORD. I believe that ISAIAH 55:5, then, speaks of Israel as she is restored back beginning with Ephraim and encompassing all the tribes until Judah. ¶ Rabbis Slotki-Rosenberg, representing the Jewish perspective, say, thou, “God is addressing Israel.” Skinner has, “Thou (Israel) shalt call a nation &c.] i.e. many a nation hitherto unknown to thee.” Wade has: “Israel, by its exceptional experiences and the evidence it supplied of the Lord’s supremacy over human fortunes, is destined to receive the homage of the heathen, who will seek to attach themselves, as servants, to the favoured people of so potent a Deity (cf. 45:14, 49:7).” May I suggest it is not that Israel itself is the homage of the nations, but rather, the Gospel of Jesus Christ which is associated with Israel. ¶ And nations [that] knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the LORD thy God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And a people which hath not known thee shall run to offer tribute unto thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For the sake of the Lord thy God.” ¶ Baltzer says, “‘Your God’ here (אֱלֹהֶיךָ) corresponds to ‘my people’ (עַמִּי)” in ISAIAH 40:1. Also see Rain in Due Season. Israel will come to the knowledge of her God through the Book of Mormon (see Ezekiel 37:15 ff., see especially 37:23b:

⁹ Joseph Fielding McConkie and Donald W. Parry, A Guide to Scriptural Symbols.

וְטַהַרְתִּי אֹתָם וְהָיִי-לִי לְעָם וְאֲנִי אֶהְיֶה לָהֶם
(לְאֱלֹהִים).

Leeser renders the Ezekiel verse: "... and I will cleanse them, and they shall be unto me for a people, and I will be to them for a God. The AV has: "... and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God." ¶ And for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "The Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee." ¶ The Holy One of Israel has glorified Zion. All the nations of the earth will place their attention on the restored Church who sends out missionaries to both sides of the veil.

vv. 6–13. Seek the Lord in prayer. Turn unto the Lord who is ready to forgive. God's thoughts are higher than man's. God's words will be fulfilled. Their joy when we repent and turn unto God. During the Millennium, the earth will take upon itself its paradisiacal glory. While I was first working on this chapter some weeks ago, I applied these words of Isaiah when speaking to a person who was combating feelings of unworthiness—I believe that we are only made worthy as Christ lends us of His worthiness and as His atoning sacrifice is applied to our lives. ¶ Can someone who is unworthy be a partaker of revelation in order to improve his or her life? While it is true that the constant guide and companionship of the Holy Ghost is based on having been confirmed a member of the Church, having accepted and received the Holy Ghost and living righteously, may I suggest that the Holy Ghost may be imparted to others who do not meet all of these criteria? I believe the Book of Mormon has healing influences as the word brings us closer to Christ and that everyone who reads that book with a seeking heart can feel the Spirit. I was not a member of the Church when the Holy Ghost bore a strong witness of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. I was not even seeking for the truth at the time! ¶ We must pray to the Father and be filled with confidence that the Lord will answer—He will let us know we have been heard and give guidance as needed. We must put aside the thought that we cannot pray to the Father because we are unrighteous. In April 1982 General Conference, Elder Gene R. Cook warned: "May I share a few of Satan's cunning illusions which undermine spirituality. Satan, with an illusion, leads a man to puff himself up with pride to say, 'I am my own man. I know the Lord lives, but he expects me to handle this particular matter on my own and not bother him with any details.' Not being familiar with the scriptures, the man may not know that Satan teaches the world there is no God. But to the Saints he simply says, 'There is a God, but he is only generally involved in your life.

He would not specifically help you today.' Or he teaches the world not to pray, but to the Saints he simply says, 'Don't pray now. You don't feel like praying right now' (see 2 Nephi 32:8–9.) The net effect is the same." It is, then, not a proper thought for a man to think that he cannot approach God in prayer or seek help in repenting. We can refuse to listen to that voice that teaches us not to pray. The Lord is there, with stretched out arms inviting, beckoning, pleading with us to come unto Him that He may bless and heal us. Indeed, He will abundantly pardon. ¶ Why does not the Lord heal us immediately of our unrighteous behavior? The Lord gives us weaknesses for a wise purpose; perhaps the most important of all is to fight our natural prideful tendencies. Surely, His thoughts are not our thoughts, for His thoughts and His ways are higher than ours. I can testify that the Lord has reasons for what He does. His timing is truly perfect and He always keeps His promises. None of His promises go unfulfilled. In other words, His words never return to Him void, nor do they fall to the ground without being accomplished. If we put our trust in our Father, He will abundantly bless us. The day will come when we will burst out in joy and be filled with peace—that is, salvation. Even the trees of the fields will clap their hands in joy for us.

6 ¶ Seek ye the LORD while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Seek ye the fear of the Lord whilst ye are alive, supplicate before His presence whilst ye remain." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Seek ye the Lord; and when you find him call upon him. And when he draweth near to you." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like, "Seek the LORD while he may be found, call upon him while he is near." ¶ Elder Eyring taught: "As the risen Savior, He is this day and forever the Light of the World. It is He who invites us to come unto Him and serve Him, without delay. His encouragement to you and to me is this: 'I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me ... There is a danger in the word someday when what it means is 'not this day.'"¹⁰ Elder Eyring also quotes Alma 34:33–34: "And now, as I said unto you before, as ye have had so many witnesses, therefore, I beseech of you that ye do not procrastinate the day of your repentance until the end; for after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed. Ye cannot say, when ye are brought to that awful crisis, that I will repent, that I will return to my God. Nay, ye cannot say this; for that same spirit which doth possess your bodies at the time that ye go out of this life, that same spirit will have power to possess your body in that eternal world.” Rabbi Rosenberg points to Targum (Ⓢ) suggesting that we need to call upon the Lord while we live. Keith warns that otherwise, if we do not turn to the Lord, we might be one of the unwise virgins: “Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh” (Matthew 25:11–13, emphasis added). ¶ Calvin has: “We ought to draw high consolation from being assured that it is not in vain for us to seek God. ‘Seek,’ says Christ, ‘and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened; ask, and it shall be given to you’ (Matthew 7:7).” Nyman points us to the Doctrine and Covenants: “And again, verily I say unto you, my friends, I leave these sayings with you to ponder in your hearts, with this commandment which I give unto you, that ye shall call upon me while I am near—Draw near unto me and I will draw near unto you; seek me diligently and ye shall find me; ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you” (D&C 88:62–63). ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “... there are no limitations placed upon any of us. Revelations are not reserved for a limited few or for those called to positions of importance in the Church. It is not position in the Church that confers spiritual gifts. It is not being a bishop, a stake president, or an apostle that makes revelation and salvation available. These are high and holy callings which open the door to the privilege of great service among men. But it is not a call to a special office that opens the windows of revelation to a truth seeker. Rather it is personal righteousness; it is keeping the commandments; it is seeking the Lord while he may be found. God is no respecter of persons. He will give revelation to me and to you on the same terms and conditions.”¹¹ Elder Delbert L. Stapley quoted ISAIAH 55:6–7 and counseled: “Man cannot afford to forsake God, depending solely upon his own intelligence. Such a course can only lead to utter confusion and ultimate destruction. Not knowing the mind, will, and purpose of an infinite God, man does not have, regardless of his advanced knowledge, the wisdom and judgment, nor the correct answers to solve all world problems. With implicit faith we must all turn to the God of our fathers in humility and sincere prayer for counsel and guidance.”¹² President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Have we not forgotten to pray and to thank the Lord for His mercies and for His guidance in all that we do?

¹⁰ Eyring, Elder Henry B., "This day." April 2007 General Conference.

If at times we have been requested to seek the help of the Lord in this great struggle which has deluged the world, have we prayed in the true spirit of prayer? What good does it do for us to petition the Lord, if we have no intention of keeping His commandments? Such praying is hollow mockery and an insult before the throne of grace. How dare we presume to expect a favorable answer if such is the case? ‘Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.’ So said Isaiah. But is not the Lord always near when we petition Him? Verily no! He has said, ‘They were slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God; therefore, the Lord their God is slow to hearken unto their prayers, to answer them in the day of their trouble. In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me.’ If we draw near unto Him, He will draw near unto us and we will not be forsaken; but if we do not draw near to Him, we have no promise that He will answer us in our rebellion.”¹³ So also Elder Richard R. Lyman, who taught: “‘Seek ye the Lord while he may be found.’ Today is the time to call; tomorrow may be too late. O youth of our nation, ‘Seek ye the Lord while he may be found. Call ye upon him while he is near.’ ... The following familiar words from the Holy Book explain briefly and clearly what I mean: ‘If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.’ If we are losing faith, if it seems our prayers are unanswered, let us reflect upon these words which the Lord has given to us in D&C 101: ‘In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me. They were slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God; therefore, the Lord their God is slow to hearken unto their prayers, to answer them in the day of their trouble.’”¹⁴

7 Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. ✓ ✓

- ✓ the man of iniquity
- ✓ ✓ multiplicity to pardon

¹¹ McConkie, Elder Bruce R., “The Rock of Salvation,” Conference Report, October 1969, pp. 80–84.

¹² Delbert L. Stapley, “The Path to Eternal Glory,” Ensign, July 1973, p. 99.

¹³ Smith, President Joseph Fielding, “Blessed Is the Nation whose God Is the Lord,” Conference Report, April 1943, pp. 11–16.

¹⁴ Elder Richard R. Lyman, General Conference, April 1934, pp. 111–112.

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “the man of violence” for unrighteous. The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Let the wicked man forsake his ways, and the unrighteous man his counsels.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has unjust instead of unrighteous. ¶ Certainly, ways and thoughts are intimately connected. We must forsake the vain imaginations and thoughts of the heart (see Moses 8:22). No wonder we read in Mosiah that we will be judged not only by our deeds and by our words, but also by our thoughts (Mosiah 4:30). It is easy to think that our thoughts are somehow disassociated from our words and acts. That perhaps we can entertain unkind feelings, and that this is somehow natural. It has now become clearer than ever to me that surely, “For as [man] thinketh in his heart, so is he” (Proverbs 23:7). While we often excuse our unrighteous thoughts, we take these excuses even further when we give ourselves permission to say something that is unkind rather than tame our tongue. “I probably shouldn’t say this, but....” Indeed, it is a good thing when we can rule our tongue and not excuse ourselves for our thoughts, our words, and our deeds are inseparably connected.¹⁵ ¶ And let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, for the first clause, “And let him return to the worship of the Lord.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “And turn to the Lord and he shall find mercy.”

¶ And he return to Jehovah, יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ. Alexander has: “We are here taught that the seeking of Jehovah, and the calling upon him just enjoined, involve an abandonment of sin, and a return to righteousness of life. The imperative version of the futures is warranted, if not required, by the abbreviated form יְיָ.” ¶ And to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, for the first clause, “And unto the fear of our God.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “For he will abundantly pardon your sins.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And to our God: for he is bountiful to forgive.” ¶ Faussett points us to the margin||, “Literally, ‘multiply to pardon.’” Cheyne directs us to Jeremiah 29:11 (I also include verse 12), where we similarly find: “For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end. Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you.” Our hearkening and inclining our ear to the Lord means that He also, will listen to us. “Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts” (Zechariah 1:3).

¹⁵ For more information on how our thoughts determine our actions, see Party-Directed Mediation, a free on-line PDF book that may be downloaded from the University of California, especially see Chapter 4.

Alexander, speaking of mercy, adds a reminder from Matthew 19:26: “But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.” ¶ President James E. Faust testified: “As Isaiah wrote, if we will return unto the Lord, ‘he will abundantly pardon.’ We are commanded to remember the singular events of the mediation, Crucifixion, and the Atonement by partaking of the sacrament weekly. In the spirit of the sacramental prayers, we partake of the bread and water in remembrance of the body and the blood sacrificed for us, and we are to remember Him and keep His commandments so that we may always have His Spirit to be with us. Our Redeemer took upon Himself all the sins, pains, infirmities, and sicknesses of all who have ever lived and will ever live. No one has ever suffered in any degree what He did. He knows our mortal trials by firsthand experience.”¹⁶

8 For my thoughts [are] not your thoughts, neither [are] your ways my ways, saith the LORD.

For my thoughts [are] not your thoughts. The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “For my counsels are not as your counsels” (also see Abraham 3:19). In my handwritten journal on Isaiah I wrote about an experience I had when I belonged to the Modesto, California High Council. A decision was to be made about whether a member needed to be disfellowshipped or excommunicated. I was so sure it was the latter. But the Lord’s love and compassion for this individual were higher thoughts than mine. I was the only one to feel that excommunication was called for. As the evening progressed I aligned my thoughts with the rest of the brethren in attendance but felt greatly embarrassed. The Stake President asked me to give the closing prayer where I wept openly for being so far off the will of the Lord. Those in attendance tried to console me and explained that in these councils it is important to hear all perspectives in love, but once a decision has been made, to get squarely behind the decision. At that time I wrote, “I hope I will never pursue an idea with so much strength and be so far off the mark.” Years have passed since that awful day, and I feel I have yet a long way to go as I still seem to argue too vehemently for points I believe in. While it is true that I completely get behind the decision made by my leaders, I am embarrassed to say that I am still way too harsh in my judgments. It is Ok to give an opinion in love, but I must remember that: “For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again”

¹⁶ Faust, President James E., The Atonement: Our Greatest Hope, Ensign (CR), November 2001, p.18.

(Matthew 7:2, or 3 Nephi 14:2, where I have been repeatedly reading this verse lately). ¶ Ibn Ezra suggests: “You thought that I should punish you even after your return to me; but your thoughts are not mine; my intention is to do good to you.” Such thoughts remind us of Joseph in Egypt and his kind dealings with his brothers. Ibn Ezra suggests that turning to the Lord will bring us joy. Indeed, He will abundantly pardon. ¶ Elder Theodore M. Burton quoted ISAIAH 55:7–11 and warned: “We are trying to solve our problems by man’s philosophy and learning and by human wisdom ... What the world then needs is direction from a true prophet who, knowing the mind and the will of God, can speak in his name with power and authority and say, ‘Thus saith the Lord!’”¹⁷ Elder Bernard P. Brockbank admonished: “Religions and doctrines originating with men cannot bring salvation to a child of God. The Lord counsels man in the Holy Bible that God’s ways did not come from man or from this earth ... The thoughts and ways of God provide for man the greatest opportunities and blessings of this life ... To know and love God are sacred blessings.”¹⁸ ¶ President S. Dilworth Young testified: “As with me, it will thrill you that the Lord takes a pure boy and teaches him the truth before he can be taught what uninspired men conceive to be truth. Perhaps you will remember that the Lord puts into the minds and hearts of his prophets what he wants them to think and say rather than the thoughts of philosophical men. Remember what he said to Isaiah: ‘For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.’”¹⁹ Also, Elder George A. Smith, “... we are told that the Savior, when he visited the earth, selected as his ministers and messengers fishermen and other individuals from the lower orders of the people—men with but little learning, and less reputation, to proclaim the Gospel, testify of the truth, and be witnesses of his advent into the world—of his miracles and resurrection from the dead. So it was in the present generation ... He passed over the learned institutions of the day, and went into a field and laid his hand on the head of Joseph Smith, a ploughboy—upon one who cultivated the earth, and had scarcely education enough to read his Bible—whom he inspired, appointing him to translate the Book of Mormon, and authorizing him to proclaim the Gospel and administer the plan of salvation. Ere long, this young man became the scoff, the by-word, and hiss of all the learned Christians on the earth. But the Lord said, ‘My ways are not as your ways, nor my thoughts as your thoughts.’”²⁰ ¶ Neither [are] your ways my ways, saith the LORD. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And your ways are not right, as the ways of my goodness, saith the Lord.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Nor are my ways as your ways, saith the Lord.” Elder Delbert L. Stapley admonished: “Every individual in the Lord’s church is entitled to the sure knowledge, received by personal revelation through the Holy Ghost, that the Church is true. Personal revelation to the individual is the strength of the church of Jesus Christ in any age. We must learn the truth for a surety and not merely suppose we are right. It is our responsibility to know—and by the aid of the scriptures and the Holy Ghost one can know without any doubt. One cannot prayerfully study the scriptures without gaining the knowledge and testimony that there is only one way to exaltation. The scriptures point the way very clearly. It must be God’s way and not man’s way, for God has said: ‘For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.’”²¹

9 For [as] the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

For [as] the heavens are higher than the earth. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “But distant as the heaven is from the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “For as the heavens are exalted above the earth.” ¶ Wade points us to Psalm 103:11: “For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.” Elder Lance B. Wickman spoke about the “Why” questions that we ask ourselves, “... do not ever doubt the goodness of God, even if you do not know ‘why.’ The overarching question asked by the bereaved and the burdened is simply this: Why? Why did our daughter die, when we prayed so hard that she would live and when she received priesthood blessings? Why are we struggling with this misfortune, when others relate miraculous healing experiences for their loved ones? These are natural questions, understandable questions. But they are also questions that usually go begging in mortality. The Lord has said simply, ‘My ways [are] higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.’ As the Son’s will was ‘swallowed up in the will of the Father’ so must ours be.”²² Then Elder John Taylor testified: “... the kingdom of God can only be

¹⁷ Theodore M. Burton, “Thus Saith the Lord,” Ensign, Dec. 1971, p. 78.

¹⁸ Brockbank, Elder Bernard P., “Prayer to Our Heavenly Father,” Ensign, Nov. 1979, p. 58.

¹⁹ Young, President S. Dilworth, “For Thy Servant Heareth,” Ensign, November 1974, p. 90.

²⁰ George A. Smith, “Divine Origin, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 7:111, 10 January 1858.

²¹ Delbert L. Stapley, “What Constitutes the True Church,” Ensign, May 1977, p. 21.

²² Wickman, Elder Lance B., “But If Not,” Ensign, November 2002, p. 30.

comprehended by the spirit of revelation and the principle of eternal truth, unless men are in possession of this principle, and have the light of revelation, they do not appreciate, neither can they understand correctly the work in which we are engaged.”²³ President Brigham Young, Jr. testified: “We know, brethren, that it is impossible to please the Lord by following the counsels of our own minds, unless they are enlightened by the Spirit of the Almighty. The wisdom of man is not the wisdom of God, and to be successful in extending and strengthening the cause of God on the earth, we must have his Spirit to guide us. If our ways were as God’s ways, we would do as he would have us do; but it is evident to all who are acquainted with the actions of the human family, not excluding the Latter-day Saints, that the mind of man is not as God’s mind. A verse of Scripture, which now occurs to my mind, will illustrate this. It will be found in the 11th verse of the 2nd chapter of the 1st epistle to the Corinthians—‘For what man knoweth the things of man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.’”²⁴ ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught: “Since knees often bend long before minds, holding back this ‘part’ deprives God’s work of some of mankind’s very best intellects. Far better to be meek like Moses, who learned things he ‘never had supposed.’ Yet, sadly, brothers and sisters, in the subtle interplay of agency and identity, there is so much hesitation. The surrender of the mind is actually a victory, because it then introduces us to God’s stretching and ‘higher’ ways!”²⁵ ¶ President Thomas S. Monson explained: “A patriarchal blessing literally contains chapters from your book of eternal possibilities. I say eternal, for just as life is eternal, so is a patriarchal blessing. What may not come to fulfillment in this life may occur in the next. We do not govern God’s timetable. ‘For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.’”²⁶ ¶ So are my ways higher than your ways. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “So is my way distant from your ways.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “So are my ways exalted above your ways.” ¶ Elder David A. Bednar explained: “The limitations that are the natural consequence of advancing age can in fact become remarkable sources of spiritual learning and insight.

²³ Taylor, Elder John, “Men’s Learning,” Journal of Discourses 11: 314–320, 24 February 1867.

²⁴ Young, President Brigham, “God’s Ways not as Man’s Ways,” Journal of Discourses 15:139–145, 25 August 1872.

²⁵ Maxwell, Elder Neal A., “Consecrate Thy Performance,” Ensign (CR), May 2002, p.36.

²⁶ Monson, President Thomas S., “Your Patriarchal Blessing: A Liahona of Light,” Ensign, November 1986, p. 65.

The very factors many may believe limit the effectiveness of these servants can become some of their greatest strengths ... I have observed in my Brethren at least a part of the Lord’s purpose for having older men of maturity and judgment serve in senior leadership positions of the Church. These men have had a sustained season of tutoring by the Lord, whom they represent, serve, and love. They have learned to understand the divine language of the Holy Spirit and the Lord’s patterns for receiving revelation. These ordinary men have undergone a most extraordinary developmental process that has sharpened their vision, informed their insight, engendered love for people from all nations and circumstances, and affirmed the reality of the Restoration. I have witnessed repeatedly my Brethren striving diligently to fulfill and magnify their responsibilities while struggling with serious physical problems. These men are not spared from affliction. Rather, they are blessed and strengthened to press forward valiantly while suffering in and with affliction.”²⁷ So, the Lord at times chooses the very young and sometimes the old—but whoever He chooses He qualifies. ¶ And my thoughts than your thoughts. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And your thoughts from my understanding.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And my thoughts above your thoughts.” ¶ Elder Sam K. Shimabukuro observed: “The greatest of all achievements that we can attain in our long and challenging journey through immortality is when our claim to discipleship of the Lord Jesus Christ reaches the stage where we can say, with all honesty, His ways are our ways and His thoughts our thoughts.”²⁸

10 For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater:

For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, for the third clause, “And it is impossible (in the Chaldee, ‘impossible for it’) that it should return thither.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For as the rain when it descendeth, or snow, from the heavens, doth not return thither, till it hath watered the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And as the rain and the snow come down from heaven, and return no more thither, but soak the earth, and water it.” ¶ The earth is watered by the life-sustaining moisture that comes from the clouds. There is a cycle, for these waters evaporate and form new clouds. ¶ And maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And maketh it to sprout, and to be fruitful, that it may give sufficient (literally, ‘according to the sufficiency’) grain of seed to the sower, and food sufficient for the eater.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And caused it to generate and bloom and yield seed for the sower and bread for food.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And make it to spring, and give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater.” ¶ In much of ancient agriculture, part of the harvest was used as seed to plant again, and the rest for food that had to last until next harvest. Famines would put people’s self-discipline to the test, as they were tempted to eat the seed, and thus make matters worse. Where crops grew solely on that year’s rain, having rain in due season was imperative. Just like having plentiful rain for good crops just about guaranteed sufficient seed for planting as well as foodstuff for eating, even more so, God’s word would never be poured out for naught but His purposes would be accomplished. Just as water comes down in the form of rain provides plants and people with the needed moisture, so also, in a more perfect way, God’s word would never go forth without accomplishing its purpose.

²⁷ David A. Bednar, ““Chosen to Bear Testimony of My Name”,” Ensign, November 2015, p. 128.

²⁸ Shimabukuro, Elder Sam K., “What Doest Ye for Christ?,” Ensign, May 1992, p. 84.

11 So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper [in the thing] whereto I sent it.

So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thus shall the word of my kindness, which proceeds from my presence, it is not possible that it shall return to my presence void.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “So shall it be with my word: when it hath proceeded from my mouth, it shall not be reversed.” ¶ Kay brilliantly observes and applies this verse to Christ: “... the final application of the parable is to Him who came down from heaven and gave life unto the world (John 6:33); who said, “I came down from heaven ... to do the will of Him that sent me” (ib. 38; cp. 39, 40; Matthew 26:39; cp. also Psalm 72:6).” ¶ Ibn Ezra summarizes as: “I shall fulfil all I spake to the prophets.” Oswalt, leaning on Muilenburg, has: “It is not rain that is the source of life but the word of God.” ¶ Then Elder Wilford Woodruff shared: “If we had correct understanding, we should all see as the Lord does, and should understand how his purposes will be accomplished; but we are to walk by faith, and not by sight. I feel to rejoice in knowing that the kingdom of God is established on the earth, and that it will spread itself abroad, become like a great mountain, and finally fill the earth. The words of the Lord will not return to him void; but whether he speaks by his own voice or the voice of his servants, those words will have their fulfillment.”²⁹ ¶ But it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper [in the thing] whereto I sent it. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Till all are accomplished which I willed; and till I prosper thy ways and my commandments.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “But it shall do whatsoever I please, and shall prosper in the things for which I sent it.” ¶ President Brigham Young taught: “In the progress of the age in which we live, we discern the fulfillment of prophecy, and the preparation for the second coming of our Lord and Savior to dwell upon the earth ... The word has gone forth from the Almighty, and will not return unto Him void. It becomes us, therefore, one and all, to have on our wedding garments, to have our lamps trimmed and burning, well filled with oil, lest we also be taken unawares, and share the fate of the foolish virgins. May the Lord bless us with the inspiration of His Holy Spirit, that our minds may be enlightened, our understandings enlarged and strengthened; and may His grace, wisdom, and intelligence be given unto us for our preservation and sanctification according to our day and generation, for the Redeemer’s sake.”³⁰ As our minds are enlightened, we will surely see eye to eye (ISAIAH 52:8).

12 For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap [their] hands.

For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “For ye shall go out with joy from among the nations, and with peace ye shall be carried to your land.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For with gladness you shall go forth; and with joyfulness you shall be taught.” ¶ Cowles suggests that this verse makes an allusion to the Exodus from Egypt. We can also speak of the removal from mystic Babylon. ¶ The mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The mountains and the hills shall rejoice before you with praise.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For the mountains and hills shall leap for joy, expecting you.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “The mountains and the hills shall sing praise before you.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt testified: “We shall roll down from the mountains, and though we may be considered but a little stone cut out of the mountains without human ingenuity, without mankind undertaking to carry on this work of their own accord, the time will come when God will cause the stone of the mountains to roll, and then it will roll down and build up the central city of Zion, and that, too, long before this gathering from the distant nations shall cease. I do not know how much before the ten tribes will come from the north; but after Zion is built in Jackson County, and after the Temple is built upon that spot of ground where the cornerstone was laid in 1831; after the glory of God in the form of a cloud by day shall rest upon that Temple, and by night the shining of a flaming fire will fill the whole heavens round about; after every dwelling place upon Mount Zion shall be clothed upon as with a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by day, about that period of time, the ten tribes will be heard of, away in the north, a great company, as Jeremiah says, coming down from the northern regions, coming to sing in the height of the latter-day Zion ... In that day the trees of the field will clap like hands, says the Prophet, and in that day the Lord will open waters in the wilderness, and streams in the desert, to give drink to his chosen, his people Israel.”³¹ ¶ And all the trees of the field shall clap [their] hands. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And all the trees of the field shall clap with their branches.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And all the trees of the field will clap with their branches.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And all the trees of the country shall clap their hands.” ¶ This is one of my father’s favorite scriptures. We spoke again about this verse shortly after he turned 90. Sister Elaine L. Jack shared: “We will climb our spiritual mountains rejoicing. Our hearts will resonate to Isaiah’s words, ‘For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.’ Each insight, each spiritual view should fill us with a spirit of thanksgiving that spills over into the lives of those around us. We sisters in Zion have the best reasons to thank the Lord. Thank the Lord for your testimony. Thank Him for being alive now. When your challenges come, thank the Lord for your knowledge that He lives, and feel peace knowing He loves you ... With each new lesson learned and each answer to personal prayer, say, ‘I rejoice exceedingly that [my] Lord Jesus Christ hath been mindful of [me].’”³² ¶ Elder Orson Pratt speaks of the gathering of Israel: “Now I will quote a parallel prophecy, delivered to Joseph Smith, one of the greatest Prophets who has lived on the earth in any generation, save it be our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Some forty-three years ago, in speaking of the lost ten tribes of Israel, the Lord says— ‘They who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord; and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves; and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence. And an highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep. Their enemies shall become a prey unto them, And in the barren deserts there shall come forth pools of living water; and the parched ground shall no longer be a thirsty land. And they shall bring forth their rich treasures unto the children of Ephraim, my servants. And the boundaries of the everlasting hills shall tremble at their presence.’ To show that they come with power, they come on a highway cast up for them; the ice feels the power of God and flows down, making room for them; and the barren deserts of the north, wherever they may go and need water, will yield forth pools of living water to quench their thirst. As they come to sing in the height of Zion, the everlasting hills, this great Rocky Mountain range, extending from the arctic regions south to the central portions of America, will tremble beneath the power of God at the approach of that people. Then will be fulfilled the saying of David, that the mountains shall skip like rams, and the little hills like lambs, before his people. The very trees of the field will clap like hands, as the Psalmist David has said.”³³ Elder Pratt, a few years earlier, also associated the clapping of hands to the return to Jackson County: “We shall go back to Jackson County. Not that all this people will leave these mountains, or all be gathered together in a camp, but when we go back there will be a very large organization consisting of thousands, and tens of thousands, and they will march forward, the glory of God overshadowing their camp by day in the form of a cloud, and a pillar of flaming fire by night, the Lord’s voice being uttered forth before his army. Such a period will come in the history of this people, and when it arrives the mountains and the hills will be ready to break forth with a loud voice before the Lord’s army, and the very trees of the field will wave to and fro by the power of God, and clap like hands. The everlasting hills will rejoice, and they will tremble before the presence of the Lord; and his people will go forth and build up Zion according to celestial law.”³⁴ ¶ Rashi, in Slotki-Rosenberg, suggest that “The bare mountains and desolate hills will be clothed with luxuriant vegetation and all the trees of the field will produce rich fruits.” This, indeed, fits well

²⁹ Woodruff, Elder Wilford, “Testimony of the Spirit of Truth, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 8: 261–267, 22 April 1860.

³⁰ Young, President Brigham, “The Constitution of the United States, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 2:170–178, 18 February 1855.

³¹ Pratt, Elder Orson, “Resurrection of the Saints, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 18: 57–69, 25 July 1875.

³² Elaine L. Jack, “Look Up and Press On,” Ensign, May 1992, p. 98.

³³ Pratt, Elder Orson, “Gathering of Israel, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 18:24–29, 11 April 1875.

³⁴ Pratt, Elder Orson, “Consecration, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 15: 354–366, 9 March 1873.

with context of the earth's transformation into its paradisiacal glory that we see in ISAIAH 55:13.

13 Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the LORD for a name, for an everlasting sign [that] shall not be cut off.

Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Instead of the wicked the righteous shall rise up.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And instead of the briar, shall spring up the cypress.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) renders it shrub rather than thorn. The earth shall once again enter into its terrestrial glory, and become like the Garden of Eden. ¶ Wade says: “The treeless waste, where nothing but desert plants grow, will be changed into a park.” Margalioth, as mentioned in ISAIAH 3, considers the thesis and antithesis of this verse, using the words instead of / and instead of, תַּחַת / תַּחַת, “And it shall come to pass, that INSTEAD OF sweet smell there shall be stink; AND INSTEAD OF a girdle a rent; AND INSTEAD OF well set hair baldness; AND INSTEAD OF a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning INSTEAD OF beauty,” and contrasts it to several like verses in these later chapters of Isaiah. Whereas in ISAIAH 3 the comparison was of something good turned into something bad through תַּחַת / תַּחַת, the same words are inverted so that instead of difficulties there would be something better. “INSTEAD OF the thorn shall come up the fir tree, AND INSTEAD OF the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the LORD for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off” (ISAIAH 55:13). See also ISAIAH 60:17 and 61:3. ¶ And instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And instead of sinners shall rise up those that fear sin.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And instead of the thistle, shall come up the myrtle.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) renders it nettle rather than brier. ¶ Cowles explains: “Another figure conceives of the thorns and briars that came upon the earth, the curse for man’s fall (Genesis 3:17–19), as now giving way to growths alike beautiful and useful ... making this sin-cursed earth again a paradise of moral purity and beauty.” ¶ Elder Charles W. Penrose taught regarding the Millennial renewal of this orb: “The earth itself shall feel the influence of that divine spirit [when ‘the Spirit of God shall be poured out upon all flesh’ as mentioned in Joel 2:28], and cease to bring forth thorns and briars, and in the place thereof ‘shall spring up the fir and the myrtle tree;’ and ‘the earth shall be full of the knowledge of God, as the waters cover the sea.’”³⁵ ¶ And it shall be to the LORD for a name, for an everlasting sign [that] shall not be cut off. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And it shall be before the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign, that shall not cease.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And the Lord shall be for a name, and for an everlasting sign which shall not fail.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And the Lord shall be named for an everlasting sign, that shall not be taken away.” ¶ Whitehouse has: “These transformations in nature shall be the everlasting sign of Yahweh’s new covenant with His Redeemed People (cf. the ‘new heaven and new earth’ of ISAIAH 65:17; 66:22) which convey the same idea of an ‘everlasting sign.’”

FIRST POSTED: 15 July 2016

³⁵ Penrose, Elder Charles W., “Prophecies Relating to Our Day, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 24:203–217, 18 May 1883. Also see, “The Work of the Restitution, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 20: 293–299, 17 August 1879.

Isaiah 56

Most exegetes apply this chapter to ancient Israel, a valid application. Yet there are numerous modern-day usages that seem even more fitting. The restoration of the Gospel is the ideal setting for understanding this chapter. The Lord invites us to hold on to righteousness. Keeping the Sabbath is put for a greater number of righteous activities. All those who partake of the new and everlasting covenant will have eternal increase. False pastors are reprimanded.

vv. 1–2. This is an invitation to turn unto the Lord and be righteous. Two measures of righteousness include avoiding evil and delighting in the Sabbath.

1 ¶ THUS saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, ✓ and do justice: for my salvation [is] near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed.

✓ or, equity

THUS saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, Keep judgment and practise righteousness.” ¶ Bishops’ Bible renders it: “Thus saith the Lorde, Kepe equitie, and do right [יִצְדִּיקָהּ]: for my sauyng health shal come shortlye, and my righteousness [יִצְדִּיקָתִּי] shalbe opened.” Skinner explains: “The exhortation to righteousness is based on the nearness of Jehovah’s salvation. Righteousness occurs twice in ISAIAH 56:1 but in different senses. In the first case righteousness means conformity to the law of God (cf. ISAIAH 58:2), in the second it is, as often, equivalent to salvation. The thought that salvation is near is as characteristic of the later chapters of this book ...” ¶ Horsley suggests: “Keep ye judgment] Judgment, מִשְׁפָּט, signifies here, as in many other places, the entire rule of faith and practice as laid down in the Gospel.” The words righteousness, judgment and justice are also associated with the scriptural injunction to bless the lives of the foreigner, the widow, the orphan and the poor. ¶ For my salvation [is] near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “For my salvation is near, just ready to come, and my saving kindness to be revealed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has justice instead of salvation. ¶ Govett writes: “On the first verse of this prophecy Jerome remarks, ‘Isaiah is speaking to the listeners of that time that they should do all things which are right, and prepare themselves for the advent of the Saviour, for he is the justice and mercy of God.’ The context shows that this advent of the Lord is his second advent; and the interpretation is confirmed by a similar warning from the pen of St. John, just before the time of Christ’s second appearing. ‘Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame’ (Revelation 16:15).” Faussett also applies these verses to the second coming.

2 Blessed [is] the man [that] doeth this, and the son of man [that] layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil.

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “every one that shall keep the Sabbath,” for keepeth the sabbath. The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “Happy the man who doth these things and the mortal who adhereth to them; and who is careful not to profane my sabbaths, and who restraineth his hands from doing evil.” ¶ Wordsworth has: “Blessed—the man—the son of man] Blessed is every one, every child of Adam (בְּנֵי-אָדָם}, as the original has it, in whatever Nation), however feeble he may be (every אָנוּשׁ, see Psalm 8:4¹, מִהָאָנוּשׁ כִּי-תִצְדִּיקֶנּוּ וּבֶן-אָדָם כִּי תִפְקְדֶנּוּ}, that keeps right, and does righteousness, for My salvation is near to come to him who was once afar off, and to he revealed to him who once sat in darkness and in the shadow of death, in heathen lands.” Whitehouse writes: “We note here the characteristic use of the expression man and son of man. The word ‘man’ (אָנוּשׁ) is a man in his frailty and limitation—‘mortal.’

‘Son of man’ [בֶּן-אָדָם] also designates man as a member of the human race in his relation to God. It is the constantly recurring term of address by God to Ezekiel.” As LDS we also understand that Son of Man is a title of Christ because the Father is the Man of Holiness. “Wherefore teach it unto your children, that all men, everywhere, must repent, or they can in nowise inherit the kingdom of God, for no unclean thing can dwell there, or dwell in his presence; for, in the language of Adam, Man of Holiness is his name, and the name of his Only Begotten is the Son of Man, even Jesus Christ, a righteous Judge, who shall come in the meridian of time” (Moses 6:57, see also Moses 7:35). ¶ Several translators and exegetes prefer to translate שָׂרָא, as does the LXX (Θ), “Happy is the man &c.” Leeser has: “Happy is the mortal that ever doth this.” AMP renders it: “Blessed, happy, and fortunate is the man who does this.” In Alma 41 we read: “Behold, I say unto you, wickedness never was happiness” (Alma 41:10b). Here we have the same rendered positively; we will find joy in serving the Lord and sanctifying His Sabbaths. Indeed, in 2 Nephi 2:25b, 27–28 we read: “men are, that they might have joy ... Wherefore, men are free according to the flesh; and all things are given them which are expedient unto man. And they are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great Mediator of all men, or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the devil; for he seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself. And now, my sons, I would that ye should look to the great Mediator, and hearken unto his great commandments; and be faithful unto his words, and choose eternal life, according to the will of his Holy Spirit.” ¶ Alexander testifies: “A great variety of reasons have been given for the special mention of the Sabbath here. It has especially perplexed those writers who regard the Sabbath as a temporary ceremonial institution. Some of these endeavour to evade the difficulty, by supposing that the Sabbath here meant is a mystical or spiritual Sabbatism, a repose from suffering, sin, or ceremonial impositions. But how could such a Sabbath be observed, or how could they be called upon to keep it, as a condition of the divine favour?” Oswalt explains: “Isaiah declares that the ‘happy’ person, the person who is experiencing the true blessings of life, manifests an attitude that expresses itself in two behaviors. This person is careful or watchful to avoid two things: profane the Sabbath, and do any evil.” Keeping of the Sabbath is an outer reflection of an inner commitment of our love for the Savior (see also ISAIAH 58). Both here and in Rain in Due Season (Leviticus 26:2), the Lord gives the observance of the Sabbath day as one of the keys to righteous living. For many Christians the importance of the Sabbath has been diminished, but not for the members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. With the resurrection of our Savior on the first day of the week the Law was fulfilled and the Sabbath day observance (under the name, Day of the Lord) was now celebrated on the first day of the week, or Sunday.² Cowles has: “Remarkably, revelation that the Sabbath day, for most nations, is to be kept on the first day of the week, or Sunday, I will limit my comments here to those which might be of interest to our friends from other Christian faiths who may desire additional proof. ¶ Remember that Χριστοῦ (Christ) came to fulfill the Law, “Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil” (Matthew 5:17). ¶ Χριστοῦ was crucified on Friday, before the setting of the Shabbat. As Shabbat approached, and not just any Shabbat, there was a concern about leaving His body on the cross: “The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away” (John 19:31). Χριστοῦ died on Friday, then, and on the third day He rose from the dead. So, His spirit left His soul part of Friday [יום ששי] before the onset of שבת, all of Saturday [שבת] and part of Sunday [יום ראשון]. ¶ The third day, then means we count each day, Friday [יום ששי] before the onset of שבת, Saturday [שבת] and Sunday [יום ראשון] as a day. This is the way the Hebrews counted their days. ¶ Χριστοῦ resurrects on the first day of the week. When did Mary Magdalene come to the sepulchre? “The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre” (John 20:1); “... toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene” (Matthew 28:1); “And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun” (Mark 16:2). ¶ Before continuing I must again testify of the truthfulness of this resurrection. I solemnly testify that He is risen! I was overcome by the Spirit as I read John 20:1–18 to Linda (7 September 2012) only a few meters from what is believed to be Christ’s tomb, at the Garden Tomb site outside the city walls of Jerusalem. ¶ Returning to the σάββατον, let us look at the Greek text which is more literal and correct than the AV: Matthew 28:1 has: “In the end of [the] sabbath [σάββατον], as it began to dawn toward [the] first [day] of [the] week [σάββατον], came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre (οψε δε σάββατον τη επιφωσκουση εις μιαν σάββατον ηλθεν μαρια η μαγδαληνη και η αλλη μαρια θεωρησαι τον ταφον).” ¶ Note that the word Sabbath or σάββατον appears twice in the Greek? The word “day” does not even appear in the Greek but is an elliptical interpretation. Several translations are more literal than the AV and have: “Now well along on the sabbath, as it began to dawn on the first of the sabbaths, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre” (JUB); “But late in sabbaths, at the dawning into first of sabbaths, Mary the Magdalene and the other Mary came to gaze upon the grave” (LITV); “And on the eve of the sabbaths, at the dawn, toward the first of the sabbaths, came Mary the Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre” (YLT). ¶ In Mark 16:1 we likewise have: “1. και διαγενομενου του σάββατου μαρια η μαγδαληνη και μαρια η του ιακωβου και σαλωμη ηγορασαν αρωματα ινα ελθουσιν αλειψωσιν αυτον. 2. και λιαν πρωι της μιας σάββατον ερχονται επι το μνημειον ανατειλαντος του ηλιου.” Note that Ιησού Χριστού appears to His disciples on the day of resurrection when they were gathered together: “Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you” (John 20:19). ¶ Let us return to the idea that for the Hebrews, days were counted including the present day, so that we have: “And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you” (John 20:26). This way of speaking exists even today among the Mexican people. When in California I used to frequently visit non-member Mexican families with the missionaries and who would often say, no asisto a la iglesia cada ocho días (I don’t attend church every eight days). They counted the present day as day one. (This way of speaking existed in Chile over a century ago but has been lost.) So then, just as we counted each day when we say that Χριστοῦ resurrected on the third day, so also we count each day

¹ “What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?” (Psalm 8:4).

² We will pay special attention to the Sabbath of the Lord (שְׁבֻעַת יְיָ) or Sabbath Day in contrast to other Sabbath celebrations or times of rest, such as the Sabbath Year [שְׁבֻעַת שָׁנִים] or the Year of Jubilee [יְיָבֵל]. While we know from modern-day keeping the Sabbath sacred is put here in one clause, and in its parallel clause, withholding the hand from every moral evil, as if the observance of the Sabbath were designed to comprehend all religious observances, the entire external worship of God. This prominence give to the Sabbath must certainly imply that God holds its observance in specially high esteem ...” This is especially evident also in Rain in Due Season, particularly in Leviticus 26:1–4, before all the promises are made to Israel if she would be faithful.

¶ Then Elder Joseph Fielding Smith admonished the Saints to keep the Sabbath day Holy: “My dear brethren and sisters: It is my privilege in standing before you to present a very old doctrine and one that has come down through the ages, but one that has not been very well observed and is not being observed today. To fortify my position I am going to present my authority. ‘Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work. But the seventh day is the

when we use the expression ‘after eight days.’ I particularly prefer the names of the days in Hebrew, first day, day two, day three, day four, day five, day six, Shabbat, instead of our days as we have them in English and Spanish, named after the planets. But I digress again.

¶ The disciples partook of the Sacrament on the Lord’s Day, or the first day of the week, the new Sabbath: “And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight” (Acts 20:7). ¶ Barnes explains: “To break bread – Evidently to celebrate the Lord’s Supper. Compare Acts 2:46. So the Syriac understands it, by translating it, ‘to break the eucharist’; that is, the eucharistic bread. It is probable that the apostles and early Christians celebrated the Lord’s Supper on every Lord’s day.”

¶ Cambridge Bible has: “And upon the first day of the week] Which had now, in memory of the Resurrection, begun to be observed as a holy day by Christians. In an Epistle written before this visit to Troas (1Co 16:2) the day is appointed by St Paul as the special time when the Christian alms should be laid aside.” ¶ Adam Clarke: “Upon the first day of the week – What was called κυριακή, the Lord’s day, the Christian Sabbath, in which they commemorated the resurrection of our Lord; and which, among all Christians, afterwards took the place of the Jewish Sabbath.” There are more scriptures of interest, but this will suffice. ¶ George W. Crockwell wrote (Improvement Era 1915, pp. 339–340): “Our Seventh Day Advent friends contend vigorously for the seventh day, boldly asserting that Constantine, Emperor of Rome, changed the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week, by an edict in the fourth century. This is most certainly an error as the following excerpts from the writings of theological historians will prove [Crockwell then includes quote after quote proving that the Lord’s day was kept by Christians well before Constantine. I only include one of these as interested readers have easy access to Elder Crockwell’s talk.] ‘Epistle to the Magnesians, 101 A. D., Chap. 9, Ignatius said: “Those who were brought up in the ancient order of things, have come to the possession of a new hope, no longer observing the Sabbath (Jewish or seventh day), but living in the observance of the Lord’s day (first day) on which also our life was sprung by him and his death.’ ... From the foregoing excerpts, we learn that the first day of the week was observed as the Sabbath, Sunday, or the Lord’s day, long before the birth of Emperor Constantine, even from the day of the resurrection of Christ; and from New Testament scriptures, it is very clear that the first day was observed by the apostles, beginning with the day on which Jesus arose from the dead; and if a correct translation of the scriptures had been made, there would have been no occasion or opportunity for a dispute about the matter.”

sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it.’ That is the law, a law that was pronounced by Moses, but it is much older, it was in existence from the beginning of the earth. Again, the Sabbath for the land was to be observed as well as for man, and also for the beasts. You will find that recorded in the 25th chapter of Leviticus. Again, failure to observe this law would bring suffering, the people would be scattered, and the land would then observe its Sabbath. You will find that in Leviticus 26th chapter [Rain in Due Season—GB]. The Lord says: ‘And I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste. Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies’ land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths. As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest: because it did not rest in your sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it’ (Leviticus 26). [Elder Joseph Fielding Smith then reads ISAIAH 56:1–2; 58:13–14; Jeremiah, 17:21–27; and Ezekiel, 20:5–12]. I have a good many more passages of scripture here, but I am not going to take time to read more from the Bible, for this will suffice. On the 25th day of July, 1847, the day after the pioneers entered this valley, it being the Sabbath day a meeting was held, President Brigham Young spoke to the assembly as follows: He told the brethren that they must not work on Sunday; that they would lose five times as much as they would gain by it. None were to hunt on that day; and there should not any man dwell among us who would not observe these rules. They might go and dwell where they pleased, but should not dwell with us. The same day President Heber C. Kimball, first counselor in the Presidency said: ‘I advise you to keep the sabbath day holy, whether others do or not ... Again from President Brigham Young, this time at a conference of the Church, April 7, 1850: ‘We have tried it [breaking the Sabbath day] in traveling since we left Nauvoo, and not one time having traveled on that day have we gained by it, but we have lost a day or two the next week to pay for it. What is the harm? It proves that we treat lightly the rules of the God ...’ I have a quotation here from President Joseph F. Smith that I want to read to you, mainly because it has never been put in print ‘... The things of God are discovered by the Spirit of God, not by the spirit of man or of the world. Those who seek shall find, and to those who knock at the door it shall be opened, and those who ask shall receive, and not otherwise. He that has the spirit discerns by the spirit and loves the works of the spirit, for they give delight and joy ... We learn a principle by coming in close contact with and studying it, and admitting it into our minds and hearts. There is no house that was not built, no tree that did not grow, no knowledge that was not or is not acquired. But truth is eternal—it was not created or made, it is as a precious gem. It lies hidden from us and we must find it, and apply it, and make it ours ... ‘Honor the sabbath day and keep it holy,’ and you will know more about it.’ This letter was written May 10, 1897 ... Now, I am going to be bold enough to say something ... We have got to repent and turn from this evil [of breaking the Sabbath day] lest the same troubles come upon us that came upon old Israel, as I have read them to you. Time will not permit me to say more. May the Lord bless the Latter-day Saints, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.”³

vv. 3–8. We learned in ISAIAH 55 that God’s thoughts are higher than our thoughts. Here the Lord continues to clarify these things. All who are faithful will be blessed; whether it be the stranger or the eunuch. Those who are faithful will have eternal increase, even those who have no children upon this earth. Once again, the Sabbath is given as a measure of such faithfulness—along with the partaking of the everlasting covenant in the temples of the Lord. In the last days, temple sacrifices will be restored for a period. The Lord will gather Israel, and further, all are invited to come unto Christ.

3 ¶ Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I [am] a dry tree.

The LXX (6) reads, “Let not the stranger who cleaveth to the Lord say, ‘The Lord will separate me from his people.’ Nor let the eunuch say ‘I am a dry tree.’”

Instead of that hath joined himself to the LORD, the Peshitta (5) has who follows the LORD. The Douay-Rheims (2) has, for the first half, “And let not the son of the stranger, that adhereth to the Lord, speak, saying: The Lord will divide and separate me from his people.”

¶ Wordsworth writes: “the son of the stranger] They, who were foreigners under the Law, but attached themselves to the Lord under the Gospel, are not to be separated from the Jews, in the Church of Christ.” Elder Bruce R. McConkie explains ISAIAH 56:3–8 in the context of the gathering of Israel, including the Gentile nations (emphasis added): “Prophecies about the gathering of Israel by the same prophet might seem to be repetitive. In part they are, for repetition is sound pedagogy, but they also tell of gatherings that will occur by stages and in different locations. Israel was not scattered at one time; indeed, the main phases of the scattering went forward for a thousand years. And Israel will not be gathered all at one time ... ‘And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart.’ (Jeremiah 24:7) ... The prophetic word speaks of Israel, of the remnants of that once-favored people who are now scattered in all the nations of the earth of the literal seed of the bodies of the prophets of old; it says that these—the descendants of the ancients—shall be gathered. Of this there is no question. But what of the Gentiles in the last days? ... In most pointed and precise language, Isaiah says, concerning the gathering of the Gentiles in the last days [and here quotes ISAIAH 56:3–8].”⁴ Indeed, the Gospel would go first to the Gentile Nations and then to Israel. ¶ The eunuch, עֲבָדִים. Shalom Paul explains: “Hebrew עֲבָדִים is a loanword from the Akkadian expression ša rēši (‘of the head’), which is the title of high-level functionaries in the royal court, some of whom, but not all, were castrated.” In ISAIAH 39:7 we read: “And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.” This was not done by their choice. Skinner explains: “the eunuch] Such persons are excluded from the congregation by Deuteronomy 23:1. On that passage Prof. W. R. Smith remarks that ‘Presumably the original sense of this rule was directed not against the unfortunate victims of Oriental tyranny and the harem system, but against the religious mutilation of the Galli’ &c. (Driver’s Deuteronomy, p. 259).” ¶ Luther, in speaking about eunuchs—whether physically or metaphorically—correctly warns that celibacy is not a better state than holy matrimony. Rather, the point of this verse is that the eunuch who serves the Lord and is obedient to His covenants is better off than a person who does not. The faithful eunuch will not be denied any blessings in eternity, including those of eternal increase. Alexander has: “The whole class of personal disqualifications is represented by the case of the eunuch ... It is possible, however, that the eunuch may be mentioned, simply because it stands at the beginning of the list of prohibitions in the law. In either case, the expression is generic, or representative of more particulars than it expresses.” ¶ Govett quotes a scripture I have been meditating upon of late: “The consolation offered to the eunuch was most probably that which the Lord had in view when he said, ‘For there are some eunuchs which were so born from their mothers' womb; and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men; and there be eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it' (Matthew 19:12). Revelation 14:1–5, and Matthew 19:29, confirm this opinion.” I have been pondering the possibility that the term סְרִיס is here also used as a metaphor for those faithful Latter-day Saints who have taken upon themselves—and been faithful to—temple covenants despite feelings of same-sex attraction (by the way, the word סְרִיס in Hebrew means faithful, see Gesenius). In The Family: A Proclamation to the World we read: “All human beings—male and female—are created in the image of God. Each is a beloved spirit son or daughter of heavenly parents, and, as such, each has a divine nature and destiny. Gender is an essential characteristic of individual premortal, mortal, and eternal identity and purpose ... The divine plan of happiness enables family relationships to be perpetuated beyond the grave. Sacred ordinances and covenants available in holy temples make it possible for individuals to return to the presence of God and for families to be united eternally We further declare that God has commanded that the sacred powers of procreation are to be employed only between man and woman, lawfully wedded as husband and wife ... The family is ordained of God. Marriage between man and woman is essential to His eternal plan.”⁵ It is clear that in eternity no blessings of family, increase or exaltation shall be denied to the faithful. Elders Oaks and Wickman explained that: “Every blessing—including eternal marriage—is and will be [theirs if faithful] in due course ...”⁶ We also read: “The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints acknowledges that same-sex attraction is a sensitive issue which requires kindness, compassion, and understanding ... The Church’s doctrinal position is clear: Sexual activity should only occur between a man and a woman who are married. However, that should never be used as justification for unkindness.”⁷ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland spoke in General Conference: “There is room for those who speak different languages, celebrate diverse cultures, and live in a host of locations. There is room for the single, for the married, for large families, and for the childless. There is room for those who once had questions regarding their faith and room for those who still do. There is room for those with differing sexual attractions. In short, there is a place for everyone who loves God and honors His commandments as the inviolable measuring rod for personal behavior, for if love of God is the melody of our shared song, surely our common quest to obey Him is the indispensable harmony in it.”⁸ ISAIAH 56:3–5, then, is to be of comfort to both the foreigner and the faithful—regardless of their ability to have posterity in this world. None of the faithful will be dry trees in eternity. ¶ Separate, בָּרַל. Wade has: “A technical expression for the severance of Israel from the heathen (Ezra 6:21, 9:1, 10:11, Nehemiah 9:2, 10:28, 13:3, Leviticus 20:24).” ¶ Cowles has: “Behold, I am a dry tree” childless (this being the oriental sense of this proverbial expression), and therefore held in the lowest esteem.” Henderson has: “The phrase, ‘a dry tree,’ is still used in the East of a person of either sex who has no children.”

³ Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, October 1938 General Conference, pp. 36–40.

⁴ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985, pp. 545–551.

4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths, and choose [the things] that please me, and take hold of my covenant;

For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths. The Targum (ܬ) has, “Sabbath days,” יְמֵי שַׁבָּת. The LXX (Ϝ) reads, “For thus saith the Lord to the eunuchs, Whoever of them shall keep my sabbaths.” Alexander has: “According to Joseph Kimhi, the plural Sabbaths is intended to include the Sabbatical year, and that of jubilee.” As we have noted, the Lord give importance to His Sabbath. I love the Sabbath and find that in that day I can forget the world and dedicate myself fully to the work of the Lord. ¶ And choose [the things] that please me, and take hold of my covenant. The Targum (ܬ) has, for the first clause, “And delight in what I desire.” The LXX (Ϝ) reads, “And choose the things in which I delight and adhere to my covenant.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) has, for the second clause, “And shall hold fast my covenant.” ¶ Henderson well says: “The covenant referred to here and ISAIAH 56:6, is doubtless the everlasting, or New Covenant, the establishment of which is promised, ISAIAH 55:3.” President Brigham Young taught that “All Latter-day Saints enter the new and everlasting covenant when they enter this Church.”⁹ President Joseph Fielding

⁵ The Family: A Proclamation to the World, “This proclamation was read by President Gordon B. Hinckley as part of his message at the General Relief Society Meeting held September 23, 1995, in Salt Lake City, Utah.” URL accessed 4 August 2016: <https://www.lds.org/topics/family-proclamation?lang=eng>

⁶ Interview with Elder Dallin H. Oaks and Elder Lance B. Wickman: “Same-Gender Attraction” URL accessed 4 August 2016. <http://www.mormonnewsroom.org/article/interview-oaks-wickman-same-gender-attraction>

⁷ Same-sex attraction. URL accessed 25 July 2016: <https://www.lds.org/topics/same-gender-attraction?lang=eng>

⁸ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, “Songs Sung and Unsung,” April 2007 General Conference.

⁹ Discourses of Brigham Young.

Smith explained: “The new and everlasting covenant is the fulness of the gospel (D&C 66:2). It is composed of ‘All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations’ that are sealed upon members of the Church by the Holy Spirit of promise, or the Holy Ghost, by the authority of the President of the Church who holds the keys (D&C 132:7).”¹⁰ Honoring the Sabbath, along with the rest of what it entails to be a disciple of Jesus Christ, is what is called for here.

5 Even unto them will I give in mine house and within my walls a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.

Even unto them will I give in mine house and within my walls a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: The Targum (ܬ) has, “Even unto them will I give in the house of my sanctuary, and in the land of the place of my Shekinah a place, and a name that is better than that of sons and daughters.” The LXX (6) reads, “I will give them, in my house and within my walls, an honourable place better than sons and daughters.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “I will give to them in my house, and within my walls, a place, and a name better than sons and daughters.” ¶ Cowles has: “If this representative class [eunuchs], outcasts from human sympathy, will only keep my Sabbaths, choose what pleases me, and take firm hold of my covenant, in all honesty and diligence obeying my precepts, I will give them in my house a better place and higher honor than that of mere sons and daughters.” ¶ Hand and name, יד ושם, LITERALLY, hand (but also a place or memorial) and name. Also, this is the name of the Holocaust Museum (Yad Vashem, יד ושם), which Linda & I had the opportunity to visit in Jerusalem. The Jewish people prefer the term Shoah rather than holocaust. Wordsworth has: “A place [Heb. יד, lit. a hand; or it may mean a memorial, a monument (see on 2 Samuel 18:18, ‘Absalom’s place’ [יֵד אֲבִשָׁלֹם]).” Although he himself does not believe this verse is about the temple, Cowles makes several comments that are of interest to us in this regard and the promises of eternal increase made in the Holy Temple: “In mine house and within my walls] cannot be restricted to the ancient temple though the language adapts itself to the old economy and refers to the exclusion of this class [eunuchs] from the temple [yet] they shall be at home in the Christian church and in the spiritual communion with God. The Hebrew word for ‘place,’ joined with ‘name,’ means properly, ‘hand,’ [but used of Absalom’s place]. To have a hand there in God’s house and within his walls might naturally in our English idiom mean, a work to do there, a sphere for one’s free activities. ‘Hand,’ is a Hebrew emblem for power, but I am not aware that it is used in the sense of work, a sphere for exertion.—Gesenius thinks the word refers to the uplifted hand and arm which is found on many ancient sepulchral monuments.” Skinner has: “An illustration of what is meant is found in 2 Samuel 18:18, where we read that Absalom, in the prospect of dying childless, erected the pillar to his own memory which was known as ‘Absalom’s hand’ (cf. also 1 Samuel 15:12, R.V. margin||). The case of those here spoken of is precisely similar.” Whitehouse has: “The Revised Version here correctly renders the Hebrew original yad [יד] by ‘memorial.’” And that is what most exegetes say about the translation of this expression. But there are other possibilities. Alexander says: “The use of the word יד in this connection is obscure, although the essential meaning is determined by the context.” Similarly, Young, says: “The hand and name are difficult to interpret.” LITV translates: “I, even I will give to them in My house and in My walls a hand and a name” (see also MKJV). Rotherham translates as “A sign and a name.” Perhaps both of these terms have to be considered in the context of the temple. Regarding the hand יד, Alexander notes, in part: “Umbreit follows Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, in adhering to the usual sense hand, which he seems to think is mentioned as the natural instrument of seizure, and metaphorically applicable to the thing seized ...” And regarding name שם: These words [name, everlasting name] especially remind us of the new name of ISAIAH 62:2b: “and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the LORD shall name,” which very well may be what is here meant by a name [שם], especially when one thinks of an everlasting name [שֵׁם עוֹלָם]. Furthermore: “Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name” (Revelation 3:12). And further: “Then the white stone mentioned in Revelation 2:17, will become a Urim and Thummim to each individual who receives one, whereby things pertaining to a higher order of kingdoms will be made known; And a white stone is given to each of those who come into the celestial kingdom, whereon is a new name written, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it. The new name is the key word” (D&C 130:10–11, emphasis added). Elder McConkie wrote: “Revelation 19:12; A name written, that no man knew] As with all glorified beings, our Lord has a new name in celestial exaltation, a name known to and comprehended by those only who know God in the sense that they have become as he is and have eternal life. See Revelation 2:12–17. Thus, Christ’s ‘new name’ shall be written upon all those who are joint-heirs with him (Revelation 3:12), and shall signify that they have become even as he is and he is even as the Father (3 Nephi 28:10).” All of these blessings are associated with eternal increase. ¶ I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off. The LXX (6) reads, “I will give them an everlasting name which shall not fail.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “Which shall never perish.” ¶ The word everlasting is associated with everlasting life, eternal life, or exaltation. President Joseph Fielding Smith, in relation to eternal increase taught: “Those who are married in the temple for all time and eternity obtain the blessing of eternal lives. I put stress on eternal lives. Eternal life is God’s life, that is, to be like him. Eternal lives means eternal increase—the continuation, as the revelation says, of the seeds forever.” For these blessings to take place, we must take hold of our covenants and have the Holy Spirit of Promise seal such a marriage. ¶ Shalom Paul has: “Note the chiasmic frame: The verse begins: ‘I will give them ... a name’ (נָתַתִּי לָהֶם שֵׁם), and concludes: ‘An everlasting name I will give them’ (שֵׁם עוֹלָם אֶתֵּן לָהֶם).” Shalom Paul also notes the play on words between those who have their testicles cut off [once again, see כָּרַיתָם—GB] (כָּרַיתָם, see Leviticus 22:24; Deuteronomy 23:2) and “an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off” (לֹא יִכָּרֵת).

¹⁰ Smith, President Joseph Fielding. Answers to Gospel Questions.

6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant;

Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD. The Targum (T) has, for the first half, “And the sons of the Gentiles, that are joined unto the people of the Lord.” The LXX (6) reads, “And with regard to the strangers who cleave to the Lord to serve him, and love the name of the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And the children of the stranger that adhere to the Lord, to worship him, and to love his name.” ¶ McFadyen has: “In the temple, the sacrifices of these devout foreigners shall be accepted, and their prayers heard (1 Kings 8:43). For all peoples, not without qualification, but on condition of obedience ...” Alexander suggests: “To love the name of Jehovah, is to love his attributes as manifested in his word and works.” As we serve the Lord, we become His disciples. ¶ To be his servants. The LXX (6) reads, “To be his man servants and maid servants.” To be a servant of the Lord is a title of honor. As we put ourselves in a position to be of service to the Lord, we borrow from His title, and also become servants of the Lord. ¶ Every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it. The LXX (6) reads, “Even all who are careful not to profane my sabbaths.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has profaning rather than polluting. ¶ We can truly rejoice in keeping the Sabbath day holy and thus rejoice in our Heavenly Father and in His Beloved Son. President Russell M. Nelson taught: “... the Sabbath was given as a perpetual covenant, a constant reminder that the Lord may sanctify His people ... I learned from the scriptures that my conduct and my attitude on the Sabbath constituted a sign between me and my Heavenly Father ... Faith in God engenders a love for the Sabbath; faith in the Sabbath engenders a love for God. A sacred Sabbath truly is a delight.”¹¹ The way we keep the Sabbath day is a reflection—not the only one, of course—of the love we have for the Father and the Son. ¶ And taketh hold of my covenant. The LXX (6) reads, “And who adhere to my covenant.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And that holdeth fast my covenant.” ¶ Taking hold of the new and everlasting covenant is what is meant, learning to love our Father in Heaven and His children, for this, we know, is the law and the prophets.

7 Even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer: their burnt offerings and their sacrifices [shall be] accepted upon mine altar; for mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people.

Even them will I bring to my holy mountain. The LXX (6) reads, “Them I will bring to my holy mountain.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “I will bring them into my holy mount.” ¶ Cowles, continuing with the temple theme, has: “‘Strangers,’ of Gentile birth, are here made welcome under the gospel reign to God’s house of prayer and to his temple and altar ... ‘The holy mountain,’ ‘my house of prayer,’ ‘burn offerings and sacrifices upon mine altar,’ all come from the Jewish age.” And we might add, from the Temple service. Cowles continues: “The broad scope of the passage promises divine welcome and audience to the truly obedient of every race and all conditions.” Wade has: “my holy mountain, i.e. the Temple hill (ISAIAH 27:13, cf. 65:11, 66:20, Joel 2:1, 3:17, Ezekiel 20:40, Zephaniah 3:11, Obadiah 1:16, Psalm 2:6, 3:4, 48:1).” The Holy Mountain stands for the Temple of the Lord. Here both gathered Israel and all others are seen as coming to the temple and partaking of the new and everlasting covenant. ¶ And make them joyful in my house of prayer: The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And make them joyful in my house of prayer.” ¶ Wade notes: “The passage was cited by our Lord on the occasion of His cleansing the Temple (Mark 11:17, Matthew. 21:13, Luke 19:46).” Skinner explains: “make them joyful” ‘cause them to rejoice.’ The phrase is formed from a common Deuteronomic expression for taking part in the Temple ritual: to ‘rejoice before Jehovah’ (Deuteronomy 12:7, 12, 18, &c.).” Driver, of the Deuteronomic command, says: “The Israelite, when he brings his offerings to the sanctuary, and partakes of the sacrificial meal which a bounteous year has enabled him to provide, is to thank Jehovah with a joyous heart for the success with which his labours have been blessed.”¹² And truly, we can find joy when serving in the temple. Elder Franklin D. Richards shared: “I have witnessed the joy and satisfaction that come to those who serve in the temple. I recall on one occasion a sister coming through the temple door, her face bright with anticipation and her step quickened. She was a temple worker who had been back home for a visit. She grasped my hand and said, ‘It’s so good to be back. I love my service in the temple, and know I cannot be happy, really happy, away from it. It brings me a joy and satisfaction that is found in no other place. I feel a sense of accomplishment in doing something of eternal value. It’s a little like the work of the Savior, who did for mankind what they could not do for themselves. This work brings peace to my soul—yes, the peace that passeth understanding.’”¹³ ¶ Their burnt offerings and their sacrifices [shall be] accepted upon mine altar. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Their burn offerings and their holy sacrifices shall be offered up with acceptance upon mine altar.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Their burnt offerings, and their sacrifices shall be acceptable on mine altar.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “Their holocausts, and their victims shall please me upon my altar.” ¶ Govett speaks about a doctrine that LDS believe in (and that was also taught by the Prophet Joseph Smith): “The seventh verse introduces a new, and to many, I doubt not, a startling topic. ‘Their burnt-offerings and sacrifices shall be accepted on mine altar.’ The restoration of sacrifices is a truth which many will not receive. Yet, Ezekiel distinctly affirms it, and is corroborated by the Psalms. Not that they shall be regarded as possessing inherent efficacy to take away the guilt of sin—far from it. This the apostle, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, denies by the full bearing of his argument; but no passage of Scripture contradicts the supposition that they may be restored again with a commemorative intention, looking back to the past Great Sacrifice, as of old they looked forward to it, as yet to come.” So also Keith: “The passage, however, taken in its natural significance, appears to warrant the supposition of a restored temple and temple service in Jerusalem, adapted to the circumstances of Israel and the world ... That the application of the whole to the first coming of Christ is impracticable, is evident from such expressions as the temple being called a house of prayer for all people, and from what is said of the Lord gathering the outcasts of Israel—events which have not occurred yet—and from the whole scope of the context.” ¶ Brother Joseph taught: “Thus we behold the keys of this Priesthood consisted in obtaining the voice of Jehovah that He talked with him [Noah] in a familiar and friendly manner, that He continued to him the keys, the covenants, the power and the glory, with which he blessed Adam at the beginning; and the offering of sacrifice, which also shall be continued at the last time; for all the ordinances and duties that ever have been required by the Priesthood, under the directions and commandments of the Almighty in any of the dispensations, shall all be had in the last dispensation, therefore all things had under the authority of the Priesthood at any former period, shall be had again, bringing to pass the restoration spoken of by the mouth of all the Holy Prophets; then shall the sons of Levi offer an acceptable offering to the Lord. ‘And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord’ (see Malachi 3:3). It will be necessary here to make a few observations on the doctrine set forth in the above quotation, and it is generally supposed that sacrifice was entirely done away when the Great Sacrifice [i.e., the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus] was offered up, and that there will be no necessity for the ordinance of sacrifice in future: but those who assert this are certainly not acquainted with the duties, privileges and authority of the priesthood, or with the Prophets. The offering of sacrifice has ever been connected and forms a part of the duties of the Priesthood. It began with the Priesthood, and will be continued until after the coming of Christ, from generation to generation. We frequently have mention made of the offering of sacrifice by the servants of the Most High in ancient days, prior to the law of Moses; which ordinances will be continued when the Priesthood is restored with all its authority, power and blessings. Elijah was the last Prophet that held the keys of the Priesthood, and who will, before the last dispensation, restore the authority and deliver the keys of the Priesthood, in order that all the ordinances may be attended to in righteousness ... These sacrifices, as well as every ordinance belonging to the Priesthood, will, when the Temple of the Lord shall be built, and the sons of Levi be purified, be fully restored and attended to in all their powers, ramifications, and blessings. This ever did and ever will exist when the powers of the Melchisedic Priesthood are sufficiently manifest; else how can the restitution of all things spoken of by the holy Prophets be brought to pass? It is not to be understood that the law of Moses will be established again with all its rites and variety of ceremonies; this has never been spoken of by the Prophets; but those things which existed prior to Moses' day, namely, sacrifice, will be continued."¹⁴ ¶ For mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people. The Targum (Ⲯ) specifies for the first mention of house, "house of my sanctuary." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "For my house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations." Instead of for all people, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has for all peoples. So also the Masoretic text (ⲙ), for all the peoples, לְכָל-הָעַמִּים. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, "For my house shall be called the house of prayer, for all nations," although the Latin just as well means for all people (cunctis populis, Vulgate, Ⲳ). ¶ Truly, all people are invited to partake of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the saving ordinances, including those which are carried out in the Temple of our Lord.

¹¹ Nelson, President Russell M. The Sabbath is a Delight, April 2015 General Conference.

¹² Driver, Reverend S.R. A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on Deuteronomy (3rd Edition, 1895, reprinted 1973). The International Critical Commentary (ICC). Printed in Great Britain by Morrison and Gibb, Limited. For T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh.

¹³ Richards, Elder Franklin D., Happiness and Joy in Temple Work. October 1986 General Conference.

8 The Lord GOD which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather [others] to him, beside those that are gathered unto him. ✓

✓ to his gathered

The Lord GOD which gathereth the outcasts of Israel [גִּדְּחִי יִשְׂרָאֵל, root גִּדַּח] saith. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "The LORD who gathereth the dispersed of Israel said." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has scattered rather than outcasts. The Masoretic text (ⲙ) reads אֲדֹנִי יְהוָה, Lord LORD, or Adonai Jehovah, rather than Lord GOD. As I pointed out earlier, the AV follows the Jewish tradition of rendering the expression Adonai Elohim. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explains that "the ten tribes" are the outcasts.¹⁵ Whitehouse opines: "It would be better, in place of outcasts, to read dispersed (i.e., those driven forth into exile). The verb is used in the same sense in Jeremiah 40:12, and the expression seems to have been derived from ISAIAH 11:12." HCSB (and several others also prefer dispersed): "This is the declaration of the Lord GOD, who gathers the dispersed of Israel: 'I will gather to them still others besides those already gathered.'" Also, we see גִּדְּחִי in Rain in Due Season, "whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee [גִּדְּחִי, root גִּדַּח]" (Deuteronomy 30:1b). NVI uses "por donde el Señor tu Dios te haya dispersado" (emphasis added). Most translators prefer driven in that place, however. The Hebrew seems to have a very forceful tone to גִּדְּחִי, as that of thrusting an axe (see Gesenius). ¶ Yet will I gather [others] to him, beside those that are gathered unto him. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "I will again gather their captivity, by collecting them together." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Because I will gather a congregation for him." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, "I will still gather unto him his congregation." ¶ Skinner writes: "Yet will I gather others &c.] Literally. 'I will yet further gather to him, to his gathered ones.' 'His gathered ones' is the antithesis to the 'dispersed' above. The language certainly suggests (though it may not absolutely prove) that a partial gathering has taken place: the promise is that yet more shall be gathered, and, amongst these, men from 'all peoples.'" Wordsworth has (as similarly Cheyne, Wade, McFadyen, Jennings and others): "Yet will I gather others to him] As the good Shepherd says, 'Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear My voice; and there shall be one fold, and One Shepherd' (John 10:16)." The Savior taught the Twelve in the American continent: "Ye are my disciples; and ye are a light unto this people, who are a remnant of the house of Joseph. And behold, this is the land of your inheritance; and the Father hath given it unto you. And not at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I should tell it unto your brethren at Jerusalem. Neither at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I should tell unto them concerning the other tribes of the house of Israel, whom the Father hath led away out of the land. This much did the Father command me, that I should tell unto them: That other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. And now, because of stiffneckedness and unbelief they understood not my word; therefore I was commanded to say no more of the Father concerning this thing unto them. But, verily, I say unto you that the Father hath commanded me, and I tell it unto you, that ye were separated from among them because of their iniquity; therefore it is because of their iniquity that they know not of you. And verily, I say unto you again that the other tribes hath the Father separated from them; and it is because of their iniquity that they know not of them. And verily I say unto you, that ye are they of whom I said: Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. And they understood me not, for they supposed it had been the Gentiles; for they understood not that the Gentiles should be converted through their preaching. And they understood me not that I said they shall hear my voice; and they understood me not that the Gentiles should not at any time hear my voice—that I should not manifest myself unto them save it were by the Holy Ghost. But behold, ye have both heard my voice, and seen me; and ye are my sheep, and ye are numbered among those whom the Father hath given me” (3 Nephi 15:12–24). ¶ Wade has: “For similar predictions of the adhesion of strangers to the Lord’s people cf. Ezekiel 47:22, Zechariah 2:11, 8:22, Psalm 47:9). Certainly, all are invited to come unto Christ, both Jew and Gentile. I feel to shout יהוה לְנוּ when I think of the Lord’s tender mercies: “Now my brethren, we see that God is mindful of every people, whatsoever land they may be in; yea, he numbereth his people, and his bowels of mercy are over all the earth. Now this is my joy, and my great thanksgiving; yea, and I will give thanks unto my God forever. Amen” (Alma 26:37, emphasis added).

¹⁴ History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 4:210–212.

¹⁵ Orson Pratt, "Restoration of the Gospel, Etc." Journal of Discourses, 18:185a, 26 March 1876.

vv. 9–12. The shepherds and watchmen here referred to seem to be those who represent the old bottles that will reject the new wine of the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ (also see ISAIAH 5:2). Cowles notes that we can observe an “abrupt change of subject, from gospel promise made to outcasts, foreigners, and men deemed unclean, to the announcement of devouring ruin upon a class whose watchmen are blind and whose shepherds are ignorant, sensual and selfish.” False preachers are compared to lazy, indulgent dogs.

9 ¶ All ye beasts of the field, come to devour, [yea], all ye beasts in the forest.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “All the kings of the nations, who are assembled together to oppress thee, O Jerusalem, shall be cast down in the midst of thee; they shall be for food to the beasts of the field, the beasts of the forest shall be satisfied with them.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “O, all ye beasts of the field come! all ye beasts of the forests.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, for the second clause, “All ye beasts of the forest.” ¶ It does not mean, as some have misunderstood, that the beasts of the field will devour the beasts of the forest, but rather, that all the beasts of the field, and even the beasts of the forest are here predicted as taking advantage of the people under the figure of a defenseless flock of sheep (see, e.g., Skinner, Rabbis Slotki/Rosenberg). JUB has the correct sense: “All ye beasts of the field, all ye beasts of the forest; come to devour.” AMP has: “All you beasts of the field, come to devour, all you beasts (hostile nations) in the forest.” Henderson has: “wild beasts] a metaphor not unusual in the prophetic writings, when reference is made to persecuting powers.” In Rain in Due Season we read, among the punishments: “I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number; and your high ways shall be desolate” (Leviticus 26:22). While once again we have a literal fulfillment, we also have a figurative one in terms of robbing the children from the true faith in the Lord. Much of this would take place through apostasy and the preaching of false prophets, watchmen or pastors. ¶ Samuel Smith, brother of the Prophet Joseph Smith, quoted ISAIAH 56:9–11 to preachers who made attempts to convince Lucy Mack Smith and Hyrum Smith to give up their testimonies of the Book of Mormon, for they “[feared] ... the Book of Mormon was ‘destined to break down everything before it, if not put a stop to,’ and that it was ‘likely to injure the prospects of their ministers.’”¹⁶

10 His watchmen [are] blind: they are all ignorant, they [are] all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, y lying down, loving to slumber.

✓ or, dreaming, or, talking in their sleep

His watchmen [are] blind: they are all ignorant. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Devour! you see that they are all blind. That they have not knowledge.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has something like, “All the blind see, but perceive not.” Wordsworth has: “This is their punishment for being ravenous wolves, who devour God’s flock instead of feeding it (see Jeremiah 12:10).” Whitehouse has: “The term ‘watchmen’ is so frequently employed in prophecy to designate the prophets (cf. Jeremiah 6:17; Ezekiel 3:17; 33:7, &c.).” Henderson explains: “Most commentators consider both civil and ecclesiastical rulers to be meant by the צִפִּים, watchmen; but I do not find the term ever applied figuratively to any but prophets, or religious teachers. Those here introduced were destitute of spiritual perception,—consequently, could not see the impending danger, and give warning of it.” In Ezekiel the Lord speaks against false shepherds: “Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD unto the shepherds; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks?” (Ezekiel 34:2). ¶ They [are] all dumb dogs, they cannot bark. The LXX (⚡) reads, “They are dumb dogs, they cannot bark.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Dumb dogs not able to bark.” Lowth notes that the Vulgate (⚡) “seems to have read, videntes vana.” This is confirmed by one¹⁷ of my two Vulgate editions, and translated as seeing vain things by the Douay-Rheims (⚡). ¶ A dog barks to warn his master of impending danger. So it is that a dog who will not bark is useless—he can offer no protection or salvation. Alexander (and several others) explains: “The dogs particularly meant are shepherds’ dogs (Job 30:1), whose task it was to watch the flock, and by their barking give notice of approaching danger.” Cowles writes: “The description drops the figure of the dog after the first clause, and speak of the same religious leaders as themselves shepherds who are void of just understanding.” ¶ Sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber. The LXX (⚡) reads, “They are asleep in bed, they love to slumber.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Seeing vain things, sleeping and loving dreams.” Alexander paints a picture of a dog who growls in his dreams while he sleeps. Wordsworth [also see Wade] has: “Sleeping] Rather, dreaming||. Instead of watching: and giving notice of the approach of the enemy, they sleep and are dumb; and instead of being chozim (חֲזִיִּים, seers of visions from God, and preachers of His truth to the People), they are hozim, dreamers (חֲזִיִּים, see Gesenius 200), like men in a fever, who see strange visions, (aegri somnia), and rave wildly in their sleep; so the heretical teachers are called ‘dreamers’ by St. Jude (5:8) ... Since this solemn warning is uttered against the blind watchmen, dumb dogs, and ignorant shepherds of God’s people, and since their sins brought woe on Jerusalem, let the Christian Pastor beware lest he imitates them, and is the cause of ruin to those whom he is appointed to teach.” So also Luther: “... There are those who preach for the sake of their own belly ... who are dumb too, since they speak what is agreeable and look out for their own welfare ... they pile up wealth for themselves, they look out for nothing but their own interests and the strength of their body, and meanwhile they neglect the church. The dogs can never be satisfied; they are always hungry.”

¹⁶ The History of Joseph Smith by His Mother, Preston Nibley, Lucy Mack Smith, Chapter 31.

¹⁷ Biblia Sacra, Vulgate Editions, Sixti V. Et Clementis VIII, Jussu Recognita Atque Editā, Editio Nova, Versiculis Distincta, Londini, 1857. A different translation is offered by my La Sacra Bibbia, the Giovanni Diodati translation, printed by Cambridge in London (no date).

11 Yea, [they are] greedy dogs [which] can never have enough, and they [are] shepherds [that] cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter

- ✓ strong of appetite
- ✓ ✓ know not to be satisfied

Yea, [they are] greedy dogs [which] can never have enough. The LXX (⚡) reads, “Yet these dogs are of untamed appetite; they can never have enough.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has impudent instead of greedy. ¶ Elder Marvin J. Ashton taught, “There are some who would have us believe there is no right or wrong—that everything is relative. We must never allow ourselves to think proper conduct and decision making are found in a convenient path somewhere between right and wrong ... How do we become victims of dishonesty? There are many ways ... A potent statement from Isaiah sheds light on one reason: ‘Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter.’ Greed can make a person both dishonest and gullible ... A friend recently confided that he had lost heavily in a get-rich-quick scheme because he couldn’t turn off his greed valve. Wanting more and more—living beyond one’s income—makes many of us susceptible to the dishonest promoter. The plan that offers exorbitant rewards or gives you and only you a once-in-a-lifetime deal is to be avoided.”¹⁸ Elder McConkie said of these verses: “Perhaps the most scathing denunciation of greediness ever written is found in Isaiah’s excoriation of the wickedness of apostate ministers.”¹⁹ ¶ And they [are] shepherds [that] cannot understand: The Targum (⚡) has, “They are evildoers, they know not how to become wise.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “They are indeed mischievous, they have no consideration.” Instead of shepherds, the Peshitta (⚡) has wicked (Lamsa) / vile (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “The shepherds themselves knew no understanding.” ¶ They all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter. The Targum (⚡) has, “All of them go their own way (literally, ‘each and all of them’), to rob the treasures of Israel.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “They all followed their own courses, every one according to his own purpose.” The BPE (⚡) has, “They all have returned to their own ways, every one to his side and where he has chosen.” The Lamsa Peshitta (⚡) has, “They all have turned aside

¹⁸ Ashton, Elder Marvin J., “This Is No Harm,” Ensign, May 1982, p. 9.

¹⁹ Bruce R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p.241,341,658.

to their own way, every one for his own gain and his own advantage.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “All have turned aside into their own way, every one after his own gain, from the first even to the last.” ¶ Cowles has: “They turn themselves to their own way, which further explained as being ‘each one for his own gain,’ the word for ‘gain’ usually signifying wealth, profit.” Wade has: “turned to their own way] i.e., neglected their charge and pursued their own interest (cf. ISAIAH 58:13) ...from every quarter] Better, one and all, without exception (cf. Genesis 19:4).” Alexander explains: “Most of the modern writers have adopted the opinion of De Dieu, that מְקַיְּרֵהוּ means ad unum omnes, all without exception, i.e. all within a given space or number, from its very end or remotest limit.” Does this not remind us of the words of the Lord to the Prophet Joseph Smith? “My object in going to inquire of the Lord was to know which of all the sects was right, that I might know which to join. No sooner, therefore, did I get possession of myself, so as to be able to speak, than I asked the Personages who stood above me in the light, which of all the sects was right (for at this time it had never entered into my heart that all were wrong)—and which I should join. I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong; and the Personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt; that: ‘they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me, they teach for doctrines the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof.’ He again forbade me to join with any of them” (JS—History 1:18–20a, emphasis added). ¶ President John Taylor taught: “I think we [men holding the holy priesthood] ought to occupy a more elevated and honorable position; I think we ought to be governed by other influences, and be actuated by other motives. I think that our lives, our desires, our feelings and our acts ought to be to try to build up Zion and establish the kingdom of God upon the earth; that we should be united in our temporal as well as in our spiritual affairs, for God says: ‘If you are not one you are not mine.’ Do you believe it? You elders of Israel, do you believe that saying? And if we are not the Lord’s then whose are we? We have our own plans, our own notions and our own theories; and as one of old expressed it, we are seeking for gain, everyone from his own quarter. And we are governed to a very great extent by selfishness, and too much by our own personal feelings, and allow these things to influence us instead of being governed by those high, noble, dignified and glorious principles that dwell in the bosom of God, which emanated from him, and which dwell also in the bosoms of those who in sincerity fear God and keep his commandments.”²⁰

12 Come ye, [say they], I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to morrow shall be as this day, [and] much more abundant.

Come ye, [say they], I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink. The Targum (T) has, “we” rather than I, and then, “we will be inebriated with old wine.” This verse has fallen off in the LXX (G). Instead of I will, the Peshitta (S) has let us (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Come, let us take wine, and be filled with drunkenness.” ¶ Cowles explains: “The last verse describes them by giving their own words [i.e., the words of these false shepherds].” Luther suggests: “By their teaching they do nothing but fatten their own belly.” Calvin says: “In another passage the Prophet quoted the words of scorners, who, when the servants of God exhorted them to sackcloth and ashes, invited each other to feasting and drinking. ‘Let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we shall die’ (ISAIAH 22:13). Westermann well notes that the word מָנַח for come used here, as in come and carouse, is the same that is used in ISAIAH 56:9, where “the day is coming when the wild beasts will be summoned to ‘come and devour.’” ¶ And to morrow shall be as this day, [and] much more abundant. The Targum (T) has, “And tomorrow our banquet shall be better than today, great, very great.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And it shall be as to day, so also to morrow, and much more.” Faussett explains: “Their self-indulgence was habitual and intentional: not merely they drink, but they mean to continue so.” They say, let us continue to live as we are living and leaning on false teachings—rather than the truth.

FIRST POSTED: 5 August 2016

²⁰ John Taylor, “Cooperation and the United Order, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, 21:57a, 21 September 1878, pp. 53–61.

Isaiah 57

While the righteous shall enter into peace, there is no rest for the disobedient.

vv. 1–2. These verses seem to address both the martyrs as well as others who are righteous yet die young.

1 ¶ THE righteous perisheth, and no man layeth [it] to heart: and merciful men[✓] [are] taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil [to come].^{✓✓}

✓ men of kindness, or, godliness

✓ ✓ or, that which is evil

THE righteous perisheth, and no man layeth [it] to heart: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The righteous die, and no man layeth my fear to heart.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “You see how a righteous one was destroyed, and no one layeth it to heart.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “The righteous perishes and none will give it importance.” ¶ Tertullian and Cyprian, in Alexander, suggest that the righteous refers to Christ; men of mercy, His apostles. Certainly this is so, but we will look at a number of additional applications. ¶ The word perish, אָבַד, was at times used of herd animals who wandered off or strayed and were left exposed to the elements or to predators. The term was also used of people who perished (Gesenius, DCH, TDOT). Some exegetes have suggested that the word implies a violent death. While the death may be violent—such as in the case of the martyrs—this should not be assumed in every case. So also Rawlinson who has: “The righteous perisheth” The word translated ‘perished’ does not imply any violence; but the context implies a premature death. The righteous disappear — are taken from the earth before their natural time.” ¶ Cheyne says, “The righteous perish” A concise and vigorous expression, fitted to stimulate thought. That the bad pastors [see ISAIAH 56] should live long and see good days, while the righteous (especially among the pastors or prophets) are prematurely cut off, is a contradiction peculiarly great¹ from the Old Testament point of view (comp. Ecclesiastes 7:15).” Nägelsbach notes, “The context seems to me to demand that the mournful fate of the true and righteous servants of Jehovah be contrasted with the lazy, jovial doings of the dumb dogs.” ¶ King Josiah of Judah has been considered one of the great and pious ones. When he was a young man, Hilkiah the High Priest found the Book of the Law (i.e., the Torah, Pentateuch or five books of Moses) in the Temple. After the book was read to Josiah, it had such a forceful positive effect on his heart, that he rent his clothes (i.e., he tore them) in sign of repentant mourning. Josiah instituted massive religious reforms in Judah in order to better conform with the law of God (see 2 Kings 22–23; 2 Chronicles 34–35). The book of 2 Chronicles speaks about his death in less flattering words (2 Chronicles 35:20 ff.) wherein Josiah involved himself in a war that did not directly pertain to Israel. I generally tend to defend the pious when others speak of their apparent weaknesses. But in this case I had my doubt for years.² Then I read Rawlinson’s comments about 2 Kings 22:20, wherein: “Josiah is promised that he shall be gathered to his fathers (prematurely), in order that he may escape the sight of the evil that was coming on Jerusalem soon after his decease.” Indeed, the Scriptures say: “Because thine heart was tender, and thou hast humbled thyself before the LORD, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become a desolation and a curse, and hast rent thy clothes, and wept before me; I also have heard thee, saith the LORD. Behold therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace; and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place” (2 Kings 22:19–20a). When the Lord says Josiah would be gathered in peace, He is speaking of that eternal peace that comes to the righteous—rather than the violent way in which Josiah would die—of which we will say more below. ¶ Whitehouse explains: “The ‘righteous’ here corresponds to the ‘men of devoted piety’ in the following parallel clause, who in the later days of the Maccabees (168 B.C. and after) meet us under the name of the Hasidim [חסידים], the forerunners of the Pharisees. The rendering ‘merciful’ is misleading, and the alteration supplied in R.V. margin ‘godly’ is certainly an improvement. The original properly means

¹ Cheyne is alluding to the fifth commandment, “Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.” (Exodus 20:12).

² I had also been guilty of misjudging Captain Moroni for the letter he wrote Pahoran (Alma 60), until I read Sister OraLyn Moran’s thoughtful article several months ago, “Moroni and Pahoran” at <https://rsc.byu.edu/archived/re-15-no-3-2014/moroni-and-pahoran-0>. URL accessed 20August 2016.

‘men of piety’ (hesed). Hesed [חֶסֶד] is frequently used in the O. T. in the sense of loving-kindness. When used in reference to God it expresses somewhat the same thing as the Latin pietas, viz. man’s attitude of loving devotion to his God.” So also Wade: “The HEB. word is the original of the term Hasideans in 1 Maccabees 2:421.” Although the term Hasidic can apply to a number of Jewish sects in history, one branch of Ultra-Orthodox Jews also derives their name from חסידים, the merciful, pious, or Godly. This movement is called Hasidic Judaism. In contrast, the Sadducees derive their name from the word righteous, tzaddek, צַדִּיק. The first word of this verse begins with the word Ha-tzedek, the righteous. One of my favorite explanations comes from a Kay, a man I have come to love through my studies: “merciful men] Or, gracious men: who having felt the lovingkindness of God, deal kindly with their fellow-men (cp. Micah 7:2, where ‘good,’ or, ‘godly’ man is substantially the same term).” ¶ There seem to be two categories of individuals spoken of in this verse. The first are those who die and comparatively few seem to care or take it to heart. Certainly our Savior could be included, as well as the martyrs such as Abel, Zechariah the son of Jehoiada,³ John the Baptist, Stephen, Abinadi, Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith and many others who lived for Christ and died for Christ. ¶ And merciful men [are] taken away. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the men who shew (literally, ‘recompense’) mercy are taken away.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And righteous men are taken away.” Instead of merciful, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has pious (Lamsa, for BPE, see next clause). ¶ The second category includes the righteous in general, especially those who die at a young or tender age. We all know individuals who simply seem too good to be among the living. Those who move on among the righteous have accomplished what they had to do in this life. They have obtained their tabernacle and have faithfully kept their second estate. The faith of those who are left behind is sometimes tested. The Lord tenderly tells us to trust in Him (ISAIAH 55:8–9). Next, we see yet another reason to consider God’s mercy. ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith’s death is one that can fit well in both descriptions given: “Knowing his mortal ministry would soon come to a close, the Prophet met frequently with members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles to instruct them and to give them the priesthood keys necessary to govern the Church. These preparations culminated in a meeting with the Apostles and a few other close associates in March 1844. In this extraordinary council, the Prophet charged the Twelve to govern the Church after his death, explaining that he had conferred upon them all the ordinances, authority, and keys necessary to do so. ‘I roll the burden and responsibility of leading this church off from my shoulders on to yours,’ he declared. ‘Now, round up your shoulders and stand under it like men; for the Lord is going to let me rest awhile.’”⁴ This rest, of course, has to do with a rest from earthly afflictions and persecutions. When the righteous cross the veil they are extremely busy: “Wilford Woodruff ... told of a vision he received in which he spoke with Joseph Smith [after his death]: ‘I saw him at the door of the temple in heaven. He came to me and spoke to me. He said he could not stop to talk with me because he was in a hurry. The next man I met was Father Smith [Joseph Smith Sr.]; he could not talk with me because he was in a hurry. I met half a dozen brethren who had held high positions on earth, and none of them could stop to talk with me because they were in a hurry. I was much astonished. By and by I saw the Prophet again and I got the privilege of asking him a question. “‘Now,’ said I, ‘I want to know why you are in a hurry. I have been in a hurry all my life; but I expected my hurry would be over when I got into the kingdom of heaven, if I ever did.’ Joseph said: ‘I will tell you, Brother Woodruff. Every dispensation that has had the priesthood on the earth and has gone into the celestial kingdom has had a certain amount of work to do to prepare to go to the earth with the Savior when he goes to reign on the earth. Each dispensation has had ample time to do this work. We have not. We are the last dispensation, and so much work has to be done, and we need to be in a hurry in order to accomplish it.’”⁵ ¶ None considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil [to come]. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And they consider not that the righteous are taken away on account of the evil which shall come.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “The righteous men are piled together without consideration, because the just lay before the evil.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And no one observeth, that on account of iniquity the righteous one was taken away.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For the just man is taken away from before the face of evil.”

³ Son or descendant of, possibly the grandson.

¶ ⲛⲁⲙⲁ with the root ⲛⲁⲙ, is here translated as taken away. YLT, LITV, LEB, ERV and RV1865 recogidos [gathered in Spanish], use the word gathered, or withdrawn (Rotherham). The idea is that they are gathered back into the presence of God. Gesenius explains: “ⲛⲁⲙⲁ (Numbers 20:26), ‘to be gathered to one’s people, to one’s father;’ used of entering into

⁴ Teachings: Joseph Smith. Chapter 46: The Martyrdom: The Prophet Seals His Testimony with His Blood. Also see the declaration of the Twelve Apostles (undated draft), reporting Mar. 1844 meeting; in Brigham Young, Office Files 1832–78, Church Archives, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Salt Lake City, Utah.

⁵ Teachings: Wilford Woodruff. Chapter 3: The Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. Also see The Discourses of Wilford Woodruff, sel. G. Homer Durham (1946), 288–89.

Hades, where the Hebrews regarded their ancestors as being gathered together.” That is, gathered together into Paradise in the Spirit World. So also, נִאֲסָר is used of those who die (Gesenius). ¶ Birks has: “From the evil to come] Before the face of the evil [פְּנֵי הָרָעָה], that is, before its arrival, and that he may be spared its actual endurance.” An example of this is given by Rabbi David Kimhi, in Rosenberg, who cites 2 Kings 22:20a (but see 2 Kings 22:15–20), the words of Huldah the prophetess [חִלְדָּה הַנְּבִיאָה] regarding King Josiah: “Behold therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace; and thine eyes shall not see all the evil⁶ which I will bring upon this place.”

2 He shall enter[✓] into peace: they shall rest in their beds, [each one] walking [in] his uprightness.[✓]

✓ or, go in

✓ ✓ or, before him

He shall enter into peace: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall enter into peace.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “His sepulture shall be in peace.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “And when peace comes.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “But peace will come.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Let peace come.” Birks has: “... the righteous shall enter into peace, and his soul be kept safe in the hand of the Lord; and merciful men shall rest peacefully in the Paradise of the departed, awaiting a joyful resurrection. The last clause [i.e., the one which follow below—GB] is a weighty caution, restricting this blessed promise to the upright alone.” As LDS we like the employment of the word Paradise, used by Birks (see note 57:2a, TG Paradise, in the LDS edition). Lowth suggests, “He shall go in peace ||] יְבוֹא שְׁלוֹם: the expression is elliptical, such as the Prophet frequently uses. The same sense is expressed at large and in full terms, Genesis 15:15. וְאַתָּה תָּבוֹא אֶל אֲבוֹתֶיךָ בְּשָׁלוֹם, “And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace.” ¶ They shall rest in their beds, [each one] walking [in] his uprightness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall rest in the place of their beds, those that do His law.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He is taken from among you.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “They shall relax, and make progress.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “They shall rest on their beds and continue forward.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Let him rest in his bed that hath walked in his uprightness.” ¶ The bodies of the righteous rest in their graves while their spirits go forth into Paradise in the Spirit world. There they await a glorious resurrection. Cowles well says: “The passage shows conclusively that the prophets of Isaiah’s age knew of an afterlife of blessedness for the righteous, but for the righteous only. It is marvelous that the Bible critic should dare to deny their possession of this knowledge.” Also, in Jenour we read: “Vitranga understands this to refer to the rest of the souls of the righteous in the place of departed spirits, until the resurrection.” ¶ We know the spirits of the departed righteous do rest from the sorrows of this world even though they are actively engaged in the Spirit World. They are partakers of true Peace. Jenour further notes: “Those who walk aright, or in the way of rectitude, are they who live according to the revealed will of God, and keep the path he has pointed out.” ¶ Barnes has: “The word נָכַח means straight, right, and is used of one who walks straight forward. It here means an upright man, who is often represented as walking in a straight path in opposition to [those] who are represented as walking in crooked ways.” Henderson says of the righteous: “Theirs was a straight forward, undeviating course.”

vv. 3–12. Apostasy and idolatry is compared to spiritual adultery. “Now the address changes,” says Jennings, “from the persecuted to the persecutors.”

3 ¶ But draw near hither, ye sons of the sorceress, the seed of the adulterer and the whore.

But draw near hither, ye sons of the sorceress. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But ye, come nigh hither, O people of a generation whose works are evil, whose plant was of a holy plant.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But as for you, draw near hither, ye lawless sons!” Instead of sorceress, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has afflicted one (Lamsa) / humiliated one (BPE). ¶ Cowles explains: “The Hebrew reads literally; ‘And you—draw ye near hither; the word ‘you’ being made emphatic.” The you is plural, thus we have, but ye, אַתֶּם. The Targum (Ⲯ) also makes the same idea emphatic with its אַתֶּן. Leeser translates it: “But ye draw near hither, sons of the sorceress, the seed of the adulterer and the harlot.” Birks notes: “The pronoun here is emphatic. It marks a strong contrast between the righteous and merciful who have been taken from the evil, and the corrupt and sensual survivors who have to fear the stroke of coming judgment.” Whitehouse explains: “Magic went hand in hand with idolatrous ritual, and, since these practices of magic and necromancy were largely carried on by women (Hastings’ Dictionary of the Bible, art. ‘Magic,’ p. 208, left-hand column ad fin), the devotees of magical or, more properly, soothsaying practice are called in accordance with Semitic idiom sons of the sorceress [בְּנֵי עֲנָנָה].” The word עֲנָנָה is feminine. Rashi (in Rosenberg) is probably correct in saying that בְּנֵי עֲנָנָה means that they were sorcerers, not just the children of sorcerers. Fausset says, “No insult is greater to an Oriental than any slur cast on his mother.” ¶ Keith points out: “The nation is charged first with sorcery, what is otherwise described as seeking unto them that have familiar spirits, a custom universal among eastern nations, which was often practiced by [the people of Israel], and which formed a crime as inexcusable as it was heinous ... for it was the substitution of false prophets for the one Prophet—of the enchantments of wretched men for the oracles of the living God,—a sin of parallel magnitude with that of substituting idols for the one King.” ¶ The seed of the adulterer and the whore. Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But they are adulterers, and fornicators.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Ye seed of adulterers and of fornication!” ¶ Ibn Ezra suggests: “זֶרַע מִנְּאִף, The seed of the adulterer, that is, of the adulterous father. וְתִזְנֶה And the whore, the adulterous mother.” Once again, Rashi points (in Rosenberg) that the seed [זֶרַע] is simply an expression, and that the people themselves are guilty of adultery and whoredom. The Savior in the New Testament uses a similar type of language: “And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your sons cast them out?” (emphasis added, Luke 11:19a). Birks points out the apostasy, “The sorceress, the mystic Jezebel, is the company of the idolaters, the apostate church or synagogue. Her children are the corrupt and sensual among the people of God’s covenant, whether of the Old or New Testament. They are called ‘an evil and adulterous generation.’” ¶ Birks feels it particularly applies to apostate Christianity. McFadyen has: “The verse simply means that the people themselves were adulterous, i.e. unfaithful to Jehovah and devoted to other gods, apostate and idolatrous, sorcery being one of the consequences or aspects of this apostasy (cf. ISAIAH 2:6). In the Old Testament idolatry is frequently described, as here, in terms of adultery.” ¶ There also seems to be a correlation between spiritual adultery and a physical one, especially of those who ask for a sign. Brother Joseph wrote: “When I was preaching in Philadelphia, a Quaker called out for a sign. I told him to be still. After the sermon, he again asked for a sign. I told the congregation the man was an adulterer; that a wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and that the Lord had said to me in a revelation, that any man who wanted a sign was an adulterous person. ‘It is true,’ cried one, ‘for I caught him in the very act,’ which the man afterwards confessed, when he was baptized.”⁷

⁶ See ISAIAH 30:2, רָעָה evil in the sense of misfortune.

4 Against whom do ye sport yourselves?
against whom make ye a wide mouth, [and] draw out the tongue? [are] ye not children of transgression, a seed of falsehood,

Against whom do ye sport yourselves? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Of whom do ye make your sport? The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “In what have you indulged yourselves?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Upon whom have you jested?” ¶ Skinner explains that sport yourselves [תִּשְׂתַּחֲוּ] root שָׂחַ means “Lit. ‘take your delight’ (ISAIAH 55:2; 58:14; 66:11; Psalm 37:4, 11, etc.); only here used of malevolent satisfaction.” ¶ Birks says, regarding ISAIAH 57:4–5, “Two sins are here described, contempt for the true servants of God, and zeal for idolatrous rites in groves and valleys, and especially for Moloch worship.” The first of these sins is described in ISAIAH 57:4; the second in ISAIAH 57:5. When two of the righteous martyrs in Jerusalem are removed in the last days, there will be a general mocking and rejoicing on the part of the wicked. We read that this will take place after their death: “And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth” (Revelation 11:10). Similar patterns of rejoicing also took place after the martyrdom of the prophet Joseph Smith, and while our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ was on the cross (Matthew 27:42, Mark 15:29–30). ¶ Against whom make ye a wide mouth [תִּפְתָּחֶיבָהּ], [and] draw out the tongue? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And before whom do ye open your mouth? do ye continue speaking (literally, ‘multiply to speak’) great things?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And at whom have you opened your mouth, and at whom lolled your tongue?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Upon whom have you opened your mouth wide, and put out your tongue?” ¶ Draw out the tongue. Today we would say, stick out the tongue. Kimhi, in Rabbis Slotki/Rosenberg, says: “Scornful facial contortions.” Barnes has: “Contempt was sometimes shown also by protruding the lips (Psalm 22:7), ‘they shoot out the lip.’”⁸ ¶ There are those who mock the Church thinking they do God a favor, and misjudging the truth. Each one of us has to be careful how we judge others. I came across this wonderful quote from Rabbi Menachem Mendel about not judging. When one of his students found fault with another, Rabbi Mendel taught: “By qualifying in sanctity [and furthermore, if we find wrong with others it is because] not everything is in order with us, too. Let us bring our thoughts, speech and deeds to a degree of holiness and then victory will come.”⁹ In other words, we are to remove the beam from our own eye first. The Savior teaches us that we will be judged according to how we judge others (Matthew 7:1–3). In D&C 1:10 we can understand that “... the Lord shall come to recompense unto every man according to his work [but also] measure to every man according to the measure which he has measured to his fellow man” (emphasis added). If this is the case in general, how much more true it is to those who judge with unrighteousness: “Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!” (ISAIAH 5:20). ¶ [Are] ye not children of transgression, a seed of falsehood. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Are ye not rebellious children, a lying seed?” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Are you not children of destruction—a lawless race?” Instead of transgression, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has iniquity. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Are not you wicked children, a false seed.” ¶ McFadyen points out: “The contempt with which the pious Jews and their efforts were treated by their opponents is well illustrated by Nehemiah 4:1–3.” Is it not interesting how in every age the enemies of the Church spend so much effort in trying to destroy what the Saints build under God’s tutelage? Fausset has: “Not merely children of transgressors, and a seed of false parents, but of transgression and falsehood itself, utterly unfaithful to God.” Gill has: “Are ye not children of transgression] given up to all manner of sin and wickedness; or children of the wicked one, as the Targum, either of Satan, or of the man of sin; or, as the Septuagint and Arabic versions render it, ‘children of perdition’; of the same character, complexion, and religion, as the son of perdition is: ‘a seed of falsehood’; or a lie, given to lying; to believe a lie, and to speak lies in hypocrisy; professing a false religion; embracing false doctrines; a spurious breed, and not the sons of the true church of Christ.” Barnes well says: “Are ye not children of transgression?” That is, in view of the fact that you make a sport of sacred things, and deride the laws and the prophets of God.” The Savior said: “But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in” (Matthew 23:13, emphasis added).

⁷ Smith, Joseph & Roberts, B.H. History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Volume 5.

⁸ “All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, He trusted on the LORD that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him” (Psalm 22:7–8).

⁹ Mayzlish, Saul and Charney, Leon. Battle of the Two Talmuds: Judaism’s Struggle with Power, Glory, & Guilt. Audible edition.

¶ Instead, we are invited to become the children of Christ. “And now, because of the covenant which ye have made ye shall be called the children of Christ, his sons, and his daughters; for behold, this day he hath spiritually begotten you; for ye say that your hearts are changed through faith on his name; therefore, ye are born of him and have become his sons and his daughters.” (Mosiah 5:7).

5 Enflaming yourselves with idols under every green tree, y^slaying the children in the valleys under the cliffs of the rocks?

✓ or, among the oaks

Enflaming yourselves with idols under every green tree. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who worship idols beneath every green tree.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Invoking idols under shady trees.” Instead of enflaming, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has comforting. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Who seek your comfort in idols under every green tree.” ¶ Cowles has: “The translation, ‘with idols,’ is not so well sustained as the English margin ||; ‘Among the oaks.’ The Hebrew word favors the latter sense. The thought is not directly of idol worship, but of one of its adjuncts—prostitution. ‘Inflaming yourselves,’ enkindling your libidinous passions among the oaks, and indeed, under every green tree.” Barnes has: “Burning, i.e., with lust. The whole language here is derived from adulterous intercourse.” Rashi, in Slotki/Rosenberg, has “With sexual lust, referring to the immorality which was part of idolatrous rites” (cf. Hosea 4:13). Regarding unfaithfulness, Monte Nyman has: “The message was condensed by the angel who announced the fall of Babylon; he declared that ‘all nations’ and the kings of the earth had committed fornication with Babylon (see Revelation 18:3). In other words, the nations honor the Lord with their mouths, but their hearts are far from him ...”¹⁰ Regarding temple prostitution, Parry, Parry and Peterson well say: “Israel seemed to go out of her way to offend the Lord by participating in religious practices that not only rejected him but also caused them to commit the very sins that were most abhorrent to him.”¹¹ This sexual theme is a common one in the book of Hosea, as Ephraim (i.e., the northern ten tribes) had fallen into this type of perversion. See especially A Commentary on the Book of the Prophet Hosea by Hans Walter Wolff (Hermeneia, Fortress Press, 1974). ¶ Slaying the children in the valleys under the cliffs of the rocks? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Who sacrifice the children in the valleys under the cliffs of the rocks.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Slaying your children in the valleys among the rocks?” The Peshitta (S) makes it clear that they are sacrificing children. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Sacrificing children in the torrents, under the high rocks?” ¶ Cheyne also believes this should be translated as “Who slay the children under the torrent-valleys under the rents of the crags!” See also ABP {LXX (G)}, HCSB, ISV, LITV, NASB, Rotherham, TLV. For נַחֲלִים, in torrents, see singular נַחַל (Gesenius, DCH), which would render נַחֲלִים torrents, wadis, etc.

¹⁰ Monte S. Nyman, Great are the Words of Isaiah.

¹¹ Donald W. Parry, Jay A. Parry, and Tina M. Peterson, Understanding Isaiah, pp. 499, 502.

TDOT explains: “A נַחַל is the valley cut by a stream, often quite deep. The water, which runs down the mountains with great force during the rainy season (cf. Deuteronomy 9:21), carves a channel in the soil.” Cheyne points out that those who believe in the unity of Isaiah “have with much reason pointed out that the topographical references in this verse suggest the prophecy was written in [Israel] rather than in Babylonia. ‘I need scarcely say,’ observes Dr. Payne Smith [Prophecy a Preparation for Christ, p. 319], ‘that as there are no torrents, but only canals, in the flat alluvial soil of Babylonia, so there are no torrent-beds there, but that these form a common feature of the landscape in [Israel] and all mountainous countries.’” ¶ Cowles has: “Orgies of lust and of blood go together; so the next point in the outline is the murder of children, burning them to death in honor of Moloch and Saturn—a thing often done in the valley of Hinnom and in the clefts of the rocks. The Scriptures repeatedly charge commission of this horrible crime (see Ezekiel 16:21; 23:39).” Jenour adds: “We are expressly told that Manasseh caused his children to pass through the fire to Moloch in this valley (2 Chronicles 33:6).” Regarding Hinnom, Fausset explains: “Fire was put brazen statue, and the child was put in his heated arms; kettle drums (Hebrew, תוף) were beaten to drown the child’s cries; whence the valley was called Tophet.” TDOT, based on the A. Neubauer, La géographie du Talmud (1868, תפחת, ‘music-grove’) also gives that explanation as one possible theory: “Ancient Jewish tradition has it that there were many drummers and musicians who drowned out the screams of the young consigned to the flames, so that the parents of these wretched children would not perceive their terror.” ISBE has: Topheth, תפחת, etymology uncertain; the most probable is its connection with a root meaning ‘burning – the ‘place of burning’; the King James Version, Tophet, except in 2 Kings 23:10): The references are to such a place: ‘They have built the high places of Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire’ (Jeremiah 7:31). On account of this abomination Topheth and the Valley of Hinnom should be called ‘The valley of Slaughter: for they shall bury in Topheth, till there be no place to bury,’ the Revised Version margin || ‘because there shall be no place else’ (Jeremiah 7:32).” Rawlinson writes: “Arguments have been brought forward to prove that the child was merely passed before a fire, or between two fires, and not burnt; but the evidence to the contrary is overwhelming (see the article on ‘Moloch’ in Dr. W. Smith’s Dictionary of the Bible, 11: 403, 401). The rite belonged especially to the worship of Chemosh and Moloch by the Moabites and Ammonites (2 Kings 3:27; Micah 6:7), from whom it was adopted by the Israelites (2 Kings 17:7) and Jews. The sacrifice was supposed to be expiatory (Micah 6:7).”

6 Among the smooth [stones] of the stream [is] thy portion; they, they [are] thy lot: even to them hast thou poured a drink offering, thou hast offered a meat offering. Should I receive comfort in these?

Among the smooth [stones] of the stream [is] thy portion; they, they [are] thy lot: The Targum (T) has, “valley” instead of stream. The LXX (G) reads, “This shall be thy portion—this thy lot.” The Peshitta (S) has, “Your portion and your heritage is in the parts of the valleys.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “In the parts of the torrent is thy portion, this is thy lot.” ¶ Note that the word stones [אֲבָנִים] is an elliptical expression that does not appear in the text. We will later consider the possibility that the meaning has nothing to do with stones. Cheyne says: “The large smooth stones referred to above were the fetishes¹² of the primitive Semitic races, and anointed with oil, according to a widely-spread custom. It was such a stone which Jacob took for a pillow, and afterwards consecrated by pouring oil upon it (Genesis 28:11, 18).” By the way, while in American English stones are smallish and rocks are large, the word אֲבָנִים seems to be more flexible. For instance, the boulders that form part of the Western Wall and the associated tunnels in Jerusalem are called stones in the book, The Western Wall Tunnels: Touching the Stones of our Heritage by Dan Bahat, or לַגֶּזֶת בְּאֵבְנֵי הַמִּוֶּרֶשֶׁת-מִנְהַרְוֹת הַכּוֹתֵל הַמַּעֲרָבִי. Birks has: “They chose out idols from among the smooth stones of the ‘brooks,’ the wadis, or dry watercourses, where they carried on their worship.” Cowles explains: “... commentators differ as to the precise sense of the word rendered ‘smooth stones.’ The point has only minor importance. I concur in the sense of the English version, ‘smooth stones;’ understanding by it, however, not the worn and round pebbles found in abundance in running water, but stones polished by art or made smooth with oil. The reader will remember the account twice recorded (Genesis 28:18; 35:14) of Jacob's setting up a stone for a pillar and pouring oil on the top of it." And then Cowles says something that must be truly underscored about imitations of holy things: "Idolaters were wont to copy the rites and usages of God's true worshipers, perverting them into idol worship." It seems that this has always been the case, such as the use of horoscopes as an imitation to patriarchal blessings; babbling instead of the true speaking in tongues; and soothsaying instead of revelation from God. McFadyen points out a paronomasia: "There is a play upon the words smooth and portion [בְּחֵלְקֵי-יִתְלָךְ] which it is impossible to reproduce in English ... but it is by no means certain that stones are meant at all; the allusion may be to smooth, i.e. flattering, deceptive, gods of the valley. Whatever they were, it was they (very emphatic) that were the people's lot and portion, whereas Jehovah should have been their portion (Psalm 16:5).¹³" The repetition of the word they [הֵם הֵם] is of special force. Especially when the word I is repeated, an elliptical even is added in some translations. I suspect the same might be found here, "they, even they." I found support for this point from the BBE and MKJV. Personally, I find it more striking the way it is in Hebrew, without the addition of the implied even. ¶ In 1913 the First Presidency, Joseph F. Smith, Anthon H. Lund and Charles W. Penrose warned: "From the days of Hiram Page ... at different periods there have been manifestations from delusive spirits to members of the Church. Sometimes these have come to men and women who because of transgression become easy prey to the Arch-Deceiver. At other times people who pride themselves on their strict observance of the rules and ordinances and ceremonies of the Church are led astray by false spirits, who exercise an influence so imitative of that which proceeds from a Divine source that even these persons, who think they are 'the very elect,' find it difficult to discern the essential difference. Satan himself has transformed himself to be apparently 'an angel of light.' When visions, dreams, tongues, prophecy, impressions or any extraordinary gift or inspiration, convey something out of harmony with the accepted revelations of the Church or contrary to the decisions of its constituted authorities, Latter-day Saints may know that it is not of God ... [As] directions for the guidance of the Church will come, by revelation, through the head. All faithful members are entitled to the inspiration of the Holy Spirit for themselves, their families, and for those over whom they are appointed and ordained to preside. But anything at discord with that which comes from God through the head of the Church is not to be received as authoritative or reliable. In secular as well as spiritual affairs, Saints may receive Divine guidance and revelation affecting themselves, but this does not convey authority to direct others ... Be not led by any spirit or influence that ... leads away from the direct revelations of God for the government of the Church. The Holy Ghost does not contradict its own revealings. Truth is always harmonious with itself."¹⁴ ¶ Even to them hast thou poured a drink offering, thou hast offered a meat offering. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Yea, there they shall be thy lot, even to them thou hast poured out drink-offerings." The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, "As thou hast poured out libations to them and to them offered up sacrifices." The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, "And thou hast poured out libations to them, thou hast offered sacrifice." ¶ Wade explains: "drink offering] The materials might be oil (Genesis 35:14, Micah 6:7), blood (Psalm 16:4), or wine (Bel and the Dragon, v. 3)." Whitehouse suggests "Here the drink-offering of which the deity was supposed to partake consisted of the blood of the slaughtered victim." That is, of the children mentioned in ISAIAH 57:5b. Barnes explains, regarding the so-called 'meat offerings': "The מִנְחָה was in fact an offering of meal, fine flour, &c., mingled with oil (Leviticus 14:10; Numbers 7:13), and was distinguished expressly from the bloody sacrifice. The word 'meal-offering' would much more appropriately express the sense of the original than 'meat-offering.'" Merriam-Webster (11th edition) explains of its former use of the word meat: "FOOD especially: solid food as distinguished from drink." ¶ Should I receive comfort [נִחָם] in these? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Thou hast offered sacrifices; ah! on account of these things my Word shall retribute." The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, "Shall I not for these things be incensed?" The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, "Shall I not be angry at these things?" ¶ This is similar to what we find in ISAIAH 1:11–16. Wade is probably correct in suggesting: "That the worship here described was not undiluted idolatry, but rather a syncretistic religion, in which the worship of idols was combined with that of the Lord (cf. 2 Kings 17:24–41, Ezra 4:2)." The Vulgate (ⲱ), says Barnes, has a clear rendering of what is meant, "On account of these things shall I not be enraged?" Birks has: "The last clause is an indignant irony. Could they hope that the anger of God for their social iniquities would be appeased by these idol offerings, which only doubled and heightened their sin?" Cowles explains: "The Lord says, Shall I comfort myself in these things? Or shall I not rather 'ease myself' by inflicting fearful vengeance on such idolaters? The word used admits this twofold sense, and was probably chosen purposely to convey it. Precisely the same expression occurs (ISAIAH 1:24), ‘Aha, I will ease [אַנַּחֵם] me of mine adversaries,’ etc.” Jenour notes: “So in Jeremiah 5:9, ‘Shall I not visit for these things? Shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?’”

¹² Fetishes: “an object (as a small stone carving of an animal) believed to have magical power to protect or aid its owner broadly: a material object regarded with superstitious or extravagant trust or reverence” Webster’s 11th Edition.

¹³ Rawlinson also mentions Psalm 119:57, in the same connection.

¹⁴ Joseph F. Smith, Anthon H. Lund, and Charles W. Penrose, "A Warning Voice," Improvement Era, September 1913, pp. 1148–49.

7 Upon a lofty and high mountain hast thou set thy bed: even thither wentest thou up to offer sacrifice.

Upon a lofty and high mountain hast thou set thy bed: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “hast thou set the place of the house of thy dwelling.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “On a high and lofty mountain thou hast made thy bed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has laid instead of set. ¶ Many of the wicked practices are aberrations of true principles, as we said earlier. Throughout history, mountains often were used for holy worship when Temples were not available. But that was corrupted. Birks explains: “Mountain-tops and high-places were the favourite scenes of Jewish idolatry.” Whitehouse has: “Here of course the reference is either to the idolatrous or to the syncretic worship on the mountains, regarded by this writer, as by Hosea, in the light of unfaithfulness to Yahweh, or harlotry. In accordance with this conception we may interpret the ‘bed’ in the first long line of this verse.” Barnes says the idea of the lofty and high mountain is that all this was done so that: “It was public and shameless.” Note the contrast made by Kay: “Instead of trusting in ‘the High and Lofty One’ (ISAIAH 57:15), who condescended to sanctify and guard lowly Zion, Judah has placed her hopes on that mighty empire, which towered so high above the kingdoms of the earth.” ¶ Even thither wentest thou up to offer sacrifice. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Even thither didst thou go up to sacrifice.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And caused thy sacrifice to ascend thither.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And hast gone up thither to offer victims.” ¶ These words seem to introduce the warnings against necromancy as we see in ISAIAH 57:9. Else it just means that rather than worshipping in the Temple that was nearby, they were going far, even to the high places, to worship no-gods. In either case, people were very diligent in doing that which was wrong in the sight of the Lord.

8 Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance: for thou hast discovered [thyself to another] than me, and art gone up; thou hast enlarged thy bed, and made thee [a covenant] with them; [✓] thou lovedst their bed where thou sawest [it]. [✓]

- ✓ or, hewed it for thyself larger than theirs
- ✓ ✓ or, thou providedst room

Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance: The Targum (Ⲯ) ends with, “remembrance of thy idols.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And behind the posts of thy doors thou hast set up thy memorial.” Instead of set up, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has inscribed. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And behind the door, and behind the post thou best set up thy remembrance.” ¶ One gets the sense that these words refer to the high places or vain places of idol worship. Cowles has: “The whole nation being in the marriage covenant with God, idolatry was precisely spiritual adultery—playing the harlot as to God, their Maker and their Husband. Hence the phrases, ‘Set up thy bed;’ ‘discovered’ [exposed] ‘thyself to another than me;’ ‘enlarged thy bed,’ to admit troops of other lovers (idols), in fragrant violation of their covenant with God.” ¶ Lowth suggests: “Behind the door, and the door-posts, hast thou set thy memorial] That is, the image of their tutelary gods, or something dedicated to them; in direct opposition to the law of God, which commanded them to write upon the doorposts of their house, and upon their gables, the words of God’s law; Deuteronomy 6:9; 11:20.¹⁵ If they chose for them such a situation as more private, it was in defiance of a particular curse denounced in the law against the man who should make a graven or a molten image, and put it in a secret place; Deuteronomy 27:15.” From numerous comments on the subject by the exegetes regarding the words of the Law, if they had given these words a secondary importance in where they had placed them (Cheyne, as “a sign of contempt”), or if they had joined to them idols, or if they had altogether replaced the words of the Law with the household idols—each of these shows the accompanying apostasy. Keith has: “The expression ‘behind the doors,’ appears to refer to the heathen practice of having household gods in addition to those of the public temples.” Alexander has: “Gesenius and Maurer explain זְכוֹרָתִי as meaning memory, by which the former understands posthumous fame or notoriety, the latter something cherished or remembered with affection, meaning here the idol as a beloved object. The same sense is obtained in another way by those who make the word mean a memorial, or that which brings to mind an absent object.” ¶ For thou hast discovered [thyself to another] than me. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou hast been like a woman who is beloved by her husband, but goeth astray after strangers.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Didst thou think, that, if thou departedst from me, thou shouldst have something more?” The Douay-Rheims (ⲡ) has, “For thou hast discovered thyself near me, and hast received an adulterer.” ¶ The allusion, then, is to an adulterous woman in her infidelity. Religiously speaking, Israel had prostituted herself by abandoning her first love, the Lord. As we have mentioned, this is a topic of repeated emphasis in Isaiah, Hosea, Jeremiah (e.g., 3:8) and Ezekiel (e.g., 23:4, as the two sisters, Aholah, אֲהוֹלָה, representing Israel; Aholibah, אֲהוֹלִיבָה, Judah).¹⁶ ¶ And art gone up; thou hast enlarged thy bed, and made thee [a covenant] with them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou hast enlarged thy bed: thou hast made a covenant with some of them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thou hast loved them who lay with thee and multiplied thy fornication with them.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “For before me thou undressed;¹⁷ went up and enlarged your bed.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲡ) has, “Thou hast enlarged thy bed, and made a covenant with them.” ¶ To enlarge the bed is an allusion to adultery, the inviting others to the bed who were not the husband. Delitzsch suggests: “After the church of Jehovah had turned away from its God to the world and its pleasures, it took more and more delight in the pleasures afforded it by idolatry, and indulged its tastes to the full.” Birks has: “Besides public, shameless idolatry in high-places and on mountains, there was private idol-worship in their houses. Where God had commanded His words to be written for a memorial, they set up the memorial of their own shame. Their zeal in false worship was like the course of an adulteress, who not only prepares her bed for lovers who visit her, but solicits their presence, exacts their visits as a favour, and looks out for occasions to multiply her hateful sin.” ¶ Thou lovedst their bed where thou sawest [it]. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou lovedst the place, the place of their beds, the place thou hast chosen.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And hast done it with many who are far from thee.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “You have loved their bed where you saw their nakedness” (see also the BPE translation). The Douay-Rheims (ⲡ) has, “Thou hast loved their bed with open hand.” ¶ The original Hebrew here is hand, יָד, which Whitehouse (and some others, including LHI—nakedness and genitals are used by numerous translators) leaning on Döderlein, suggest is here euphemistic, fitting the image of the adulteress. Horsley suggests: “[Israel is] taxed in this and the preceding verse with the double crime of resorting to places of idolatrous worship, and of receiving idols, or the implements of idol worship, into the precincts of God’s own temple. This double impiety is represented as the lewdness of an adulterous woman, who, not content to run after her paramours, brings them home, and admits them to her own bed at the very times that she is lying at her husband’s side.” Cowles suggests: “In the last clause, the English margin gives the probable sense of the original; ‘Thou providest room, i.e., for those who were implicated in thine adulteries.’ —In the first clause of ISAIAH 57:8 ‘thy remembrance’ means, thy memorial; things that well represent thy spirit and keep in remembrance thy deeds; probably the insignia of idol worship; perhaps household gods. In every corner of thy house are seen the witnesses of thy shameless idolatry.”

¹⁵ Cheyne explains that it is the Shema which was written, as “the formula ‘Jehovah is our God, Jehovah is one,’” or in the KJV, “Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD” (Deuteronomy 6:4) In Hebrew, שְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ יְהוָה אֶחָד. See also the prayer in the Jewish mezuzah, מְזוּזָה, which is placed in the entrance of Jewish homes (e.g., see in Wikipedia). Also see Daniel H. Ludlow, A Companion to Your Study of the Old Testament, p.16, 415, “... the practice of placing words of the Scriptures in certain places is implied in Deuteronomy 6:9 and 11:20. See also ISAIAH 57:8.”

9 And thou wentest to[✓] the king with ointment, and didst increase thy perfumes, and didst send thy messengers far off, and didst debase [thyself even] unto hell.¹⁸

✓ or, thou respectedst

And thou wentest to the king with ointment. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “When thou didst keep (literally, ‘when thou didst the law for thyself’) the law, thou didst prosper in the kingdom.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And hast sent ambassadors beyond thy borders.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “And made yourself beautiful for the kings with ointment.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲡ) has, “And thou hast adorned thyself for the king with ointment.” ¶ Birks has: “But the resort to heathen alliances is so constantly joined with idolatry in other places, and its growth under Manasseh answers so plainly to the warning to Hezekiah (ISAIAH 39), as to establish this for the true meaning. The worship of idols, and slavish adulation of heathen despots, were two kindred forms of the same evil.” Wade opines: “The general context, the mention of ointment and perfumes, and the allusion to hell (Sheol) make it probable that the passage refers not to political embassies (as in Hosea 12:1) but to religious pilgrimages for the purpose of consulting or propitiating the deity of some foreign shrine (cf. 2 Kings 8:8, Ezekiel 23:16, 40).” Barnes notes: “Jerome renders this, ‘thou hast adorned thyself with royal ointment, and hast

¹⁶ See also ISBE.

¹⁷ The Lamsa and BPE translations give very different meanings to the term nakedness, with Lamsa attaching it to the end of the next clause, and BPE to this clause.

¹⁸ שְׁאוֹל, Sheol or Hades.

multiplied thy painting ;' and evidently understands it as a continuance of the sentiment in the previous verses as referring to the kind of decoration which harlots used." Cowles suggests: "Some apply this language to idol worship, taking the word rendered 'king' [מֶלֶךְ] to mean Moloch [מֹלֶךְ], from which it differs only in its vowels. Others ... suppose a reference to efforts to secure foreign alliances." So ISV renders it: "You went to Molech with olive oil and increased your perfumes; you sent your ambassadors far away, you sent them down even to Sheol itself!" ¶ And didst increase thy perfumes. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And when thou didst multiply for thyself good works, thy camp was enlarged." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, "And hast multiplied thy perfumes." ¶ Horsley has: "The Prophet pursues the image of a loose woman, studiously preparing her person for pleasure, according to the fashions of the times, softening the skin with ointments, and bedewing herself with rich perfumes." ¶ And didst send thy messengers far off. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And thou didst send thy messengers to a distant land." This was probably done to make covenants of protection from foreign lands rather than leaning on the Lord, who is the only who can provide true peace. Birks suggests: "The figure then passes into the reality. The messengers were sent 'even far away,' to Nineveh or Babylon, the royal residence of the idol-king." Barnes says: "That is, to distant nations, for the purpose of securing their alliance." But not only to distant lands, but the idea that follows: ¶ And didst debase [thyself even] unto hell. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And thou didst humble mighty nations unto hades." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And humbled thyself even to Hades." The BPE (Ⲥ) has, "And did debase thyself unto Sheol." ¶ Birks suggests: "Even to hell] They had submitted to the lowest degradation, as if courting eagerly their own shame. As true religion is most ennobling, so superstition and idolatry sink men below the level of the beasts of the field." Skinner has: "and didst debase thyself even unto hell] Rather, and hast sent deep to Sheol (lit. 'hast deepened [sc. thy sending] to Sheol'), i.e. they sought the favour of the deities of the underworld, by consulting their oracles etc." So also McFadyen: "Ambassadors are sent to the shrines of foreign gods, and even the gods of Sheol (so margin ||¹⁹), the oracles of the nether world, are consulted. There may here be an allusion to necromantic practices." Indeed, the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has עַד-שְׁאוֹל. AMP has: "debased yourself even to Sheol (Hades)." ASV has: "and didst debase thyself even unto Sheol." ESV renders it: "you sent your envoys far off, and sent down even to Sheol." LITV gives us: "And you sent your messengers far away, and lowered yourself to Sheol." Leeser has: "and thou didst send out thy messengers even into the far-off distance, and didst debase thyself even down to the nether world." According to the ISBE,²⁰ שְׁאוֹל "means really the unseen world, the state or abode of the dead." Or, the Spirit World.

10 Thou art wearied in the greatness of thy way; [yet] saidst thou not, There is no hope: thou hast found the life of thine hand; therefore thou wast not grieved.

✓ or, living

Thou art wearied in the greatness of thy way. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "With thy long journeys thou hast wearied thyself." The BPE (Ⲥ) has, "You were wearied from so much walking." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, for the second half, "Multitude of thy ways." ¶ Horsley suggests: "It seems to be a phrase for the various dissipations of riotous pleasure." Wade has: "The length of thy way] i.e. the long journey undertaken to the distant sanctuary: even the weariness attending this did not reduce the infatuated pilgrim to despair." Keith suggests: "The import of this verse is, that notwithstanding the disappointments which met them in that course of rebellion against the God of Israel on which they had entered, yet they would not abandon it; they found enough of sinful gratification in it to induce them to persevere. The same fact is represented when it is said that the judgments of God failed to recall them from their sin." ¶ President Spencer W. Kimball spoke of these words in a different context, when he taught: "If we hear discouraging reports and are sobered by events in the world, let us not become fainthearted—'Do not weary by the way.' The Lord's program will succeed even if some individuals in the Church fail. We will see the constant progress of the Lord's work, even in the midst of problems in the world. It will roll forth ²⁰ The ISBE has: "This word שְׁאוֹל is often translated in the King James Version 'grave' (e.g. Genesis 37:35; 1 Samuel 2:6; Job 7:9; 14:13; Psalm 6:5; 49:14; ISAIAH 14:11, etc.) or 'hell' (e.g. Deuteronomy 32:22; Psalm 9:17; 18:5; ISAIAH 14:9; Amos 9:2, etc.); in 3 places by 'pit' (Numbers 16:30, 33; Job 17:16). It means really the unseen world, the state or abode of the dead, and is the equivalent of the Greek Hades, by which word it is translated in Septuagint. The English Revisers [i.e., Revised Version, RV] have acted somewhat inconsistently in leaving 'grave' or 'pit' in the historical books and putting 'Sheol' in the margin, while substituting 'Sheol' in the poetical writings, and putting 'grave' in the margin ('hell' is retained in ISAIAH 14). Compare their 'Preface.' The American Revisers [i.e., American Standard Version, ASV] more properly use 'Sheol' throughout. Into Sheol, when life is ended, the dead are gathered in their tribes and families. Hence, the expression frequently occurring in the Pentateuch, 'to be gathered to one's people,' 'to go to one's fathers.'" The important point here is that שְׁאוֹל is better translated as the Spirit World.

¹⁹ McFadyen means the margin || of the Revised Version.

until it fills the whole earth. He has given us his assurances so many, many times. He has told us that if we will keep his commandments he is bound to keep his promises to us. He does! He will!”²¹ ¶ [Yet] saidst thou not, There is no hope: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yet thou didst not think (literally, ‘thou hast not said in thine heart’) to return the many treasures thou hast multiplied.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And hast not said, I will take some rest.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Yet you did not say, I will rest.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Yet thou saidst not: I will rest.” ¶ נֹאֵשׁ from the root נָאֵשׁ, can mean without hope, in vain, and especially to give oneself to despair (Gesenius, DCH, HAL, BDB, Holladay). I particularly like Rashi’s comments here (in Rosenberg): “You did not say, ‘I will despair of these and I will no longer care to engage in them, but I will pay my attention to Torah and precepts.” ¶ It is a refusal to give up our favorite sin and engage in service, Scripture study, prayer, and so on. Elder D. Todd Christofferson challenged us: “The Savior was critical of some of the early Saints for their ‘lustful ... desires’ (D&C 101:6; see also D&C 88:121). These were people who lived in a non-television, non-film, non-Internet, non-iPod world. In a world now awash in sexualized images and music, are we free from lustful desires and their attendant evils? Far from pushing the limits of modest dress or indulging in the vicarious immorality of pornography, we are to hunger and thirst after righteousness. To come to Zion, it is not enough for you or me to be somewhat less wicked than others. We are to become not only good but holy men and women. Recalling Elder Neal A. Maxwell’s phrase, let us once and for all establish our residence in Zion and give up the summer cottage in Babylon (see Neal A. Maxwell, A Wonderful Flood of Light [1990], 47).”²² ¶ Thou hast found the life of thine hand; therefore thou wast not grieved. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Wherefore thou thoughtest not to repent.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “You acknowledged of the crime of your hands, so you would not make supplication.” The Peshitta (Ⲑ) brings to mind the subtleties of Satan, who teaches man to feel the type of guilt that draws him away from God and to refuse to pray, instead of the guilt that brings us to our knees. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Because in thy full strength thou hast done this; therefore thou shouldst not supplicate me.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “Therefore thou hast not asked.” ¶ Birks has: “The life of thy hand] is either the life of the moment, when men live from hand to mouth; or else, alluding to ISAIAH 57:8, the life of the place sought out for sensual vice, her pleasure in the momentary success of her disgraceful assignations with her lovers.” Cowles suggests: “They had not yet felt their intrinsic weakness so as to be driven back to their God for help.”

¶ Wordsworth offers what has become my favorite exposition of this obscure clause by suggesting an elliptical phrase, i.e., that “‘Thou hast found the life of thine hand’ [rather means] ‘Thou didst not trust in My hand’—the hand of the Lord.” In other words, thy trustest in thine own hand, not in the hand of the Lord.

11 And of whom hast thou been afraid or feared, that thou hast lied, and hast not remembered me, nor laid [it] to thy heart? have not I held my peace even of old, and thou fearest me not?

And of whom hast thou been afraid or feared, that thou hast lied, and hast not remembered me, nor laid [it] to thy heart? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, beginning with the second clause, “And on account of whom hast thou feared? Thou hast surely multiplied speaking lies, and thou hast not remembered my service, and hast not had (literally, ‘put’) my fear in thine heart.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Of whom hast thou been so anxiously afraid that thou hast dealt falsely with me, and has not remembered nor taken me into thy thoughts, nor into thy heart?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For whom hast thou been solicitous and afraid, that thou hast lied, and hast not been mindful of me, nor thought on me in thy heart?” ¶ Stier, quoted by Birks, restates it, “Before whom art thou afraid and terrified, that thou so liest? Before me? No! for thou thinkest not of me, nor layest it to heart, go then entirely away from me. My long-suffering has occasioned thy ungodliness. Am not I he that keep silence, and that for long time, and thou fearest me not?” Of ISAIAH 57:11–12, Keith has: “These verses describe the futility of every refuge which is apart from God.” Kay has: “The root of their apostasy was their forgetting God and fearing man.” Alexander suggests that this: “... may be applied to all hypocritical professors of the truth. They have no real fear of God; why then should they affect to serve him? His forbearance only served to harden and embolden them.” ¶ Have not I held my peace even of old, and thou fearest me not? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “I would have given you the ends of the world, if you had returned to my law; but thou hast not returned to me.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “When I saw and neglected thee thou didst not fear me.” For the first clause, the Peshitta (Ⲑ) has “I am the Holy One of old” (Lamsa) / “I am holy from eternity” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For I am silent, and as one that seeth not, and thou hast forgotten me.” ¶ Alexander renders it: “‘Have I not long kept silence?

²¹ Kimball, President Spencer W. “Do Not Weary by the Way,” 1980 October General Conference.

²² Christofferson, Elder D. Todd, “Come to Zion.” October 2008 General Conference.

It cannot be that you fear me.’ There is no need, therefore, of making the last clause interrogative.” Birks paraphrases: “And who, then, are these rivals, of whom thou hast been afraid, forsaking the fear of thy true King? Men that shall die, sons of men that are as grass, and idols still more worthless, wind and confusion. Through fear of these thou hast lied, and been wholly false to my covenant, hast forgotten God, and ceased to care for Him. Am I then so little to be feared? My great long-suffering, hadst thou a heart to feel, would only deepen thy reverence. But I have long held my peace, and refrained myself, and still thou fearest me not. The goodness, which should have brought thee to repentance, has been abused to embolden thee in sin.” Whitehouse has: “The questions are intended to reveal the utter worthlessness of these objects of idolatrous worship which had seduced the Israelites from allegiance to their true object of reverence, Yahweh.

12 I will declare thy righteousness, and thy works; for they shall not profit thee.

The Targum (T) has, “I have shewn thee those good works, which would have been thy righteousness; but thou hast multiplied evil works which did not profit thee.” The LXX (G) reads, “Now I will declare my righteousness and thine evil deeds which shall not avail thee.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “I will declare thy justice, and thy works shall not profit thee.” ¶ Birks has: “The folly of these vain and wearying superstitions should soon be exposed. ‘Thy righteousness’ is a direct contrast to ‘the righteousness of God.’” Or rather, righteousness here means no-righteousness, or lack of righteousness [לֹא צְדִיקוּתָא], either through irony or an elliptical expression. Cowles has: “The language seems ironical, in as much as her righteousness was only outrageous iniquity.” Rawlinson suggests: “The Syriac Version has ‘my righteousness,’ which gives a much better sense, and is adopted by Bishop Lowth, Dr. Weir, and Mr. Cheyne.” Indeed, LBP (S) has “I will declare my righteousness, and your works shall not profit you.” We have (S) אֲנִי אֶחְשֶׂה וְיִצְחָקוּ, or in Bauscher (S),²³ אֲנִי אֶחְשֶׂה וְיִצְחָקוּ. Also see the LXX (G) above. Alexander suggests: “I will declare thy righteousness, i.e. I will shew clearly whether thou art righteous, and in order to do this I must declare thy works; and if this is done, they cannot profit thee, because, instead of justifying, they will condemn thee.” Here we have the law of the harvest: “The one raised to happiness according to his desires of happiness, or good according to his desires of good; and the other to evil according to his desires of evil; for as he has desired to do evil all the day long even so shall he have his reward of evil when the night cometh ... For that which ye do send out shall return unto you again, and be restored” (Alma 41:5, 15a).

vv. 13–16. Skinner points out: “In striking contrast to the menacing tone of ISAIAH 57: 3 ff. is the impressive and elevated language in which the prophet now sets forth the gracious thoughts of Jehovah towards His erring but repentant people.” Whitehouse says: “The speaker is evidently Yahweh, as the immediately following expression ‘my people’ clearly indicates.” Those who do wickedly will have no one to deliver them.

13 ¶ When thou criest, let thy companies deliver thee; but the wind shall carry them all away; vanity shall take [them]: but he that putteth his trust in me shall possess the land, and shall inherit my holy mountain;

When thou criest, let thy companies deliver thee; but the wind shall carry them all away; vanity shall take [them]: The Targum (T) has, “Proclaim aloud, whether thy deceitful works will save thee, in which thou hast been occupied from thy youth? The wind shall carry away all of them, they shall be as nothing.” The LXX (G) reads, “When thou criest; let them deliver thee in thine affliction. A wind indeed shall overtake them all; and a whirlwind shall sweep them away.” Instead of thy companies, the Peshitta (S) has those who gather around you (Lamsa) / gather with thee (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has all off rather than all away. A breeze shall take them away. Instead of vanity, the Peshitta (S) has whirlwind; and furthermore, the Peshitta (S) has inherit for possess and vice versa.

¶ The word vanity [תִּבְלָה] is often used of idols. Furthermore, there seems to be an elliptical expression here, “let thy companies [i.e., of idols you have gathered around yourself] deliver thee.” So also Leiser, who has: “When thou criest, let thy masses of idols deliver thee; but all of them will the wind carry away.” ¶ When the people find themselves in peril with none to deliver, they are sarcastically invited to call upon the arm of flesh or upon idols and see how much deliverance these will give—since they did not call upon the Lord. Cowles explains that thy companies mean “things accumulated—here either idols or dependence on foreign powers, for “All will be in vain, for the wind shall bear them all away, yea a breath [vanity] shall take them. They fly like chaff before the whirlwind.” ASV renders it: “When thou criest, let them that thou hast gathered deliver thee” (emphasis added). DCH explains קְבִיצָה from קָבַץ to mean a “collection (of images), pantheon” and קָבַץ as gather. So Wade has: “them which thou hast gathered] The original is a noun which only occurs here, and apparently refers to the collection of various deities (Cheyne, ‘thy medley of gods’) to which devotion was paid.” ¶ The wind, רוּחַ. Rawlinson suggests: “The wind—or rather, a breath—shall carry them all away; vanity shall take them.” רוּחַ also means spirit. Gesenius, however, explains that wind could be a correct option: “breath of air, air in motion, i.e. breeze.” The idea, then, is just as perfectly well understood as either wind or breath. Even so, as Alexander points out, “even a wind is not required for the purpose; a mere breath would be sufficient.” ¶ Shalom Paul suggests that the word we read as vanity [הֶבֶל] may also be translated as vapor. See Gesenius also, who includes “vapour, mist, darkness” as one of its acceptations. ¶ But he that putteth his trust in me shall possess the land [יִנְחַל-אֶרֶץ], and shall inherit my holy mountain [הַר-קְדֹשִׁי]. The Targum (ܬ) has, “But he that putteth his trust in my Word shall possess the earth, and shall inherit my holy mountain.” The LXX (6) reads, “But they who adhere to me shall possess the land, and inherit my holy mountain.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “But he that putteth his trust in me, shall inherit the land, and shall possess my holy mount.” In contrast to those who do wickedly, those who put their trust in the Lord shall be greatly blessed and inherit in His Holy Temple, that is, receive the blessings of exaltation and eternal increase associated with the Temple (see ISAIAH 56). Yet another contrast is that between the false high places and the true house of the Lord. Fausset observes: “possess ... land ... inherit—that is, the literal land of Judea and Mount Zion; the believing remnant of Israel shall return and inherit the land. Secondly, the heavenly inheritance, and the spiritual Zion.” Barnes is more specific: “That is, they shall be admitted to elevated spiritual privileges and joys—as great as if they had possession of a portion of the mount on which the temple was built and were permitted to dwell there.” The Holy Mountains is certainly a reference to the House of the Lord: Holiness to the Lord. The gathering of Israel shall encompass all of the lands to which they have an inheritance, beside Israel. For instance, we read the words of Christ in 3 Nephi 15:13: “And behold, this is the land of your inheritance; and the Father hath given it unto you.” No doubt the same is true for those descendants of the Book of Mormon peoples who inhabit the isles of the sea. ¶ The Book of Mormon peoples were repeatedly told that they would be blessed in the land if they kept the commandments. “And if it so be that they shall serve him according to the commandments which he hath given, it shall be a land of liberty unto them; wherefore, they shall never be brought down into captivity; if so, it shall be because of iniquity; for if iniquity shall abound cursed shall be the land for their sakes, but unto the righteous it shall be blessed forever ... Wherefore, I, Lehi, have obtained a promise, that inasmuch as those whom the Lord God shall bring out of the land of Jerusalem shall keep his commandments, they shall prosper upon the face of this land; and they shall be kept from all other nations, that they may possess this land [יִנְחַל-אֶרֶץ] unto themselves. And if it so be that they shall keep his commandments they shall be blessed upon the face of this land, and there shall be none to molest them, nor to take away the land of their inheritance; and they shall dwell safely forever” (2 Nephi 1:7, 9). This blessing for those who keep the commandments, and thus be able to possess the land [יִנְחַל-אֶרֶץ], would also translate into an even greater blessing: to inherit in my holy mountain [הַר-קְדֹשִׁי] that is, the blessings of the House of the Lord, even an eternal increase. There is also a יִנְחַל-אֶרֶץ in terms of this globe that will become celestialized. ¶ From Elder Parley P. Pratt we have: “Then cometh Jerusalem down from God, out of heaven, having been renewed as well as the heavens and the earth. ‘For,’ says He, ‘behold, I make all things new.’ / This new city, placed upon the new earth, with the Lord God and the Lamb in the midst, seems to be man’s eternal abode, insomuch that, after all our longings for a place beyond the bounds of time and space, as saith the poet, we are at last brought to our proper senses, and given to understand that man is destined forever to inherit this selfsame planet, upon which he was first created, which shall be redeemed, sanctified, renewed, purified, and prepared as an eternal inheritance for immortality and eternal life; with the holy city for its capital, the throne of God in the midst, for its seat of government; and watered with a stream, clear as crystal, called the Waters of Life, issuing from the throne of Jehovah; while either side is adorned with trees of never fading beauty.”²⁴ Indeed, the earth will be celestialized for the possession of the righteous as we have been taught by the Savior in the meridian of times (Matthew 5:5) as well as in Latter-day revelation (e.g., D&C 88:19–20).

²³ Bauscher, Rev. David, The Aramaic English Interlinear Peshitta Old Testament (The Major Prophets), 2015, p. 101.

14 And shall say, Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumblingblock out of the way of my people.

²⁴ Pratt, Elder Parley P. (1874, 9th Edition). A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People: Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, pp. 50–51.

And shall say, Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And he shall say, Teach and admonish, turn the heart of this people to the right way.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they will say. Clear the ways before him.” Instead of cast ye up, cast ye up, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has clear up, clear up (Lamsa) / make flat, make flat (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “And I will say: Make a way: give free passage.” ¶ Henderson suggests that אָמַר should be translated: “And it shall be said.” Alexander notes: “Gesenius and Ewald make אָמַר impersonal²⁵, they say, one says, or it is said.

Vitranga in like manner long before had paraphrased it thus, exit vox; and Aben Ezra earlier still had proposed substantially the same thing.” Kay and Cheyne, similarly, “And one said.” AMP translates it: “And the word of One shall go forth,” ISV “And one has said,” LEB “And one shall say,” NASB, “And it will be said,” TLV “Then it will be said,” and YLT, “And he hath said.” In Hebrew it is the context which defines whether it is past or future, thus explaining this part of the difference between the various versions that use such an approach. This verse reminds us of ISAIAH 40:3–8, but here spoken of the Gospel of Christ. Gill says, in part, “A causeway, a highway, for the people of the Jews to return to their own land: this is either said by the Lord, as some supply it; or by the prophet, as Jarchi; or by him that putteth his trust in the Lord, as Kimhi.” This verse seems to be about removing the blindness of the apostasy through the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Cowles has: “The sentiment is, There shall be a call to clear the way for the true people of God to come out from among the wicked before divine judgments shall crush and exterminate them.” Fausset has: “Cast ... up—a high road before the returning Jews.” Rashi (emphasis added), in Rosenberg, alternatively teaches: “so will the prophet say in My name to My people, ‘Pave, pave a paved highway, clear away the evil inclination from your ways.’” This being an invitation to each one of us to turn to the Lord and be gathered to Zion—leaving Babylon fully behind. ¶ Take up the stumblingblock out of the way of my people. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Remove the stumbling-block of the wicked out of the way of the congregation of my people.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Remove obstructions out of the road of my people.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Turn out of the path, take away the stumblingblocks out of the way of my people.” This is done in preparation for the restoration of the Gospel of Christ and the construction of Holy Temples. I love it when the Holy One of Israel speaks of “my people” (see Rain in Due Season). Christ invites all to come unto Him that they may become His people. ¶ Rashi (emphasis added), in Rosenberg, picks up where he left off: “Remove the stones upon which your feet stumble; they are wicked thoughts (based on Sukkah 52a²⁶).” Young well says of the stumbling block, “... here is figuratively employed to denote any obstacle standing in the way of God’s people that might cause them to stumble and fall and so fail in their journey ... In the great eschatological

26 “And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart. Is it not, they said, an a fortiori argument? If in the future when they will be engaged in mourning and the Evil Inclination will have no power over them, the Torah nevertheless says, men separately and women separately, how much more so now when they are engaged in rejoicing and the Evil Inclination has sway over them ... R. ‘Awira or, as some say, R. Joshua b. Levi, made the following exposition: The Evil Inclination has seven names. The Holy One, blessed be He, called it Evil, as it is said, For the imagination of man’s heart is evil from his youth. Moses called it the Uncircumcised, as it is said, Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart. David called it Unclean, as it is said, Create me a clean heart, O Lord, which implies that there is an unclean one. Solomon called it the Enemy, as it is said, If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat and if he be thirsty give him water to drink. For thou wilt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord will reward thee; read not, ‘will reward thee’ but ‘will cause it to be at peace with thee.’ Isaiah called it the Stumbling-Block, as it is said, Cast ye up, Cast ye up, clear the way, take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people. Ezekiel called it Stone, as it is said, And I will take away the heart of stone out of your flesh and I will give you a heart of flesh. Joel called it the Hidden One, as it is said, But I will remove far off from you the hidden one” (from Sukkah 52a, The Babylonian Talmud, Soncino, emphasis added). We also have: “On going to bed one says from ‘Hear, oh Israel’ to ‘And it shall come to pass if ye hearken diligently’. Then he says: ‘Blessed is He who causes the bands of sleep to fall upon my eyes and slumber on my eyelids, and gives light to the apple of the eye. May it be Thy will, O Lord, my God, to make me lie down in peace, and set my portion in Thy law and accustom me to the performance of religious duties, but do not accustom me to transgression; and bring me not into sin, or into iniquity, or into temptation, or into contempt. And may the good inclination have sway over me and let not the evil inclination have sway over me. And deliver me from evil hap and sore diseases, and let not evil dreams and evil thoughts disturb me, and may my couch be flawless before Thee, and enlighten mine eyes lest I sleep the sleep of death. Blessed art Thou, oh Lord, who givest light to the whole world in Thy glory” (from Berachoth 60b, The Babylonian Talmud, Soncino, emphasis added). Furthermore, we have: “Woe is me because of my evil inclination” (from Berachoth 61a, The Babylonian Talmud, Soncino, emphasis added). Does not each one of us have at least one evil inclination to contend with? Moroni was comforted (Ether 12:29) by the following, and so can we: “And if men come unto me I will show unto them their weakness. I give unto men weakness that they may be humble; and my grace is sufficient for all men that humble themselves before me; for if they humble themselves before me, and have faith in me, then will I make weak things become strong unto them” (Ether 12:27).

25 For those interested in the impersonal grammatical construction, see A Hebrew Grammar by Moses Stuart (1823), p. 351; and Syntax of the Hebrew Language (1891) by Heinrich Ewald, pp. 124, 148. It seems that it is used particularly when it is not clear who is speaking, as in our case here in Isaiah, אָמַר. It seems of particular use with the words say [אָמַר] and speak [דַּבֵּר] (see Driver 1881, A Treatise on the use of the Tenses in Hebrew, p. 201, for the latter).

return, when God will gather together all His people who are dispersed ...”

15 For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name [is] Holy; I dwell in the high and holy [place], with him also [that is] of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name [is] Holy. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “heavens” for eternity. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Him saith the Most High, who on earth inhabiteth eternity, who is Holy among holies: whose name is THE MOST HIGH.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “For thus saith the High and the Eminent that inhabiteth eternity: and his name is Holy.” Here we once again have words of comfort given to the disciple of Christ. ¶ And Holy His name (also see YLT, Rotherham), וְקָדוֹשׁ שְׁמוֹ. So He is called the Holy One of Israel. And so the Seraphim sing praises to Him, קָדוֹשׁ קָדוֹשׁ קָדוֹשׁ (ISAIAH 6:3).

¶ Inhabiteth eternity. Ironside points out: “This is the only place in our Authorized Version where we get the word ‘eternity.’ The Hebrew word here so rendered is found in many other places, but here alone our English translators have used the word.” Ibn Ezra provides an elliptical comment: “עַד = עוֹלָמִי עַד ‘Innumerable worlds;’ signifies that which cannot be counted; eternity.” From the root עָלַם, eternity. And according to Gesenius, עַד means “m. (from the foot עָדָה to pass over, to go on)—(A) subst.—(1) pr. passing, progress, (in space), then duration (of time). Hence perpetuity of time, eternity.” If we look at Elder Orson Pratt’s words and compare it to the definition given by Ibn Ezra, innumerable worlds, we find his comments even more interesting. How can we not love him and appreciate that he was moved by great inspiration. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “[Jesus] has informed the world that there are many mansions in his Father’s house ... Where is [the Father’s house], and what kind of a house may we conclude it to be? Are we to understand by the term house, used in this passage, small buildings such as are erected for our residence, here on earth, and if not, what are we to understand? I understand that God is a Being who, as the Scriptures declare, inhabits eternity. Eternity is His dwelling place, and in this eternity are vast numbers of worlds—creations formed by His mighty hands ... He is not the God of one little world like ours; He is not a Being who presides over a few isolated worlds in one part of eternity, and all the rest left to go at random; He is not confined to the worlds that are made, comparatively speaking, today; but all worlds, past, present, and future, from eternity to eternity, may be considered His dominions ... But if eternity is His house, habitation, or residence, what are the mansions referred to by our Savior, mentioned in the text? I understand them to be places that the Creator has constructed like this present world of ours; for this world, in its future history and progress, will no doubt become one of the mansions of the Father, wherein His glory will be made manifest as it is in many other redeemed worlds. I consider that this idea of mansions has reference more especially to celestial mansions, or worlds that have been redeemed and made celestial.”²⁷ ¶ I dwell in the high and holy [place], with him also [that is] of a contrite and humble spirit. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Who inhabits the height—yea, His holy Shekinah hath promised to save the contrite in heart.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Who at rest in the holies giveth patience to the humble.” Instead of I dwell (first person), the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has whose abode (third person). The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Who dwelleth in the high and holy place, and with a contrite and humble spirit.” ¶ Numerous exegetes draw attention to the word place which is put as an ellipsis and suggest that a better rendering is that the Lord dwells on high as Holy (as in ISAIAH 6:1b “I saw also the LORD sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up,” and ISAIAH 6:2–4). The idea is that He is Holy. Of the English translations based on the Masoretic text (Ⓜ), I only find that the ISV leaves out the elliptical, “He lives in the height and in holiness.” On the other hand, most Spanish translations leave the elliptical out: “tengo por morada la altura y la santidad” (SSE); “habito en la altura y la santidad” (SRV); “habito en la altura y la santidad” (RVG); “habito en la altura y la santidad” (RV95); “habito en la altura y la santidad” (RV60); “tengo por morada la altura y la santidad” (RV1865); “habito en un lugar santo y sublime” (NVI); “habito en lo alto y santo” (NBLH); as does the LDS edition “habito en la altura y la santidad” (RV2009 SUD). ¶ Cheyne suggests, “Jehovah cannot [or better, does not wish to—GB] direct the affairs of his people from without; he desires to be enthroned in their hearts. When they turn away from him, he punishes them; but by gentle, spiritual means he moves them to return to him as penitent sinners.” ¶ Several exegetes note the juxtaposition between high and low: despite the Lord’s Holiness, He is near to those who are contrite and humble. Shalom Paul points us to a like Scripture: “Thus saith the LORD, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word” (ISAIAH 66:1–2). Shalom Paul quotes several other Scriptures, including Psalm 103:20–21; 113:5–7; and 138:6. In this last example we see a contrast between how the Lord sees a person who is prideful and haughty, versus one who is humble and contrite: “Though the LORD be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly: but the proud he knoweth afar off.” AMP offers: “For though the Lord is high, yet has He respect to the lowly [bringing them into fellowship with Him]; but the proud and haughty He knows and recognizes [only] at a distance.” HCSB offers: “Though the LORD is exalted, He takes note of the humble; but He knows the haughty from a distance.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “[Daniel] saw a little one planted in the mountains. He saw a kingdom organized, an ecclesiastical government called the Kingdom of the God of Heaven. He saw it organized—not in the lower countries of the earth, but he saw it organized in a high and lofty region ... he saw an ensign lifted up upon the mountains.”²⁸ ¶ To revive [לְהַחְיֶה] the spirit of the humble, and to revive [וְלְהַחְיֶה] the heart of the contrite ones. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And the humble of spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to support the heart of the contrite.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “And life to them who are of a contrite heart.” Instead of the contrite ones, the Peshitta (ܫ) has those who are in pain (Lamsa) / those who suffer (BPE). ¶ Here we have another instance of the Hosea principle. Rawlinson notes: “The prophet, in this portion of his discourse, whereof ‘comfort’ is the key-note, can never continue threatening long without relapsing into a tone of tenderness and pity.” ¶ Barnes explains: “The word ‘contrite’ (דָּכָא) means properly that which is broken, crushed, beaten small, trodden down.” Gill suggests that the contrite “have the worst thoughts of themselves, and the best of others; they are humble under a sense of sin and unworthiness, and submit to the righteousness of Christ.” ¶ Elder Bruce D. Porter taught: “The Savior’s perfect submission to the Eternal Father is the very essence of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. Christ’s example teaches us that a broken heart is an eternal attribute of godliness. When our hearts are broken, we are completely open to the Spirit of God and recognize our dependence on Him for all that we have and all that we are. The sacrifice so entailed is a sacrifice of pride in all its forms. Like malleable clay in the hands of a skilled potter, the brokenhearted can be molded and shaped in the hands of the Master ... When we sin and desire forgiveness, a broken heart and a contrite spirit mean to experience ‘godly sorrow [that] worketh repentance’ (2 Corinthians 7:10). This comes when our desire to be cleansed from sin is so consuming that our hearts ache with sorrow and we yearn to feel at peace with our Father in Heaven. Those who have a broken heart and a contrite spirit are willing to do anything and everything that God asks of them, without resistance or resentment. We cease doing things our way and learn to do them God’s way instead. In such a condition of submissiveness, the Atonement can take effect and true repentance can occur. The penitent will then experience the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost, which will fill them with peace of conscience and the joy of reconciliation with God. In a wondrous union of divine attributes, the same God who teaches us to walk with a broken heart invites us to rejoice and to be of good cheer ... When we have received a forgiveness of sins, a broken heart serves as a divine shield against temptation. Nephi prayed, ‘May the gates of hell be shut continually before me, because that my heart is broken and my spirit is contrite!’ (2 Nephi 4:32). King Benjamin taught his people that if they would walk in the depths of humility, they might ever rejoice, ‘be filled with the love of God, and always retain a remission of ... sins’ (Mosiah 4:12). When we yield our hearts to the Lord, the attractions of the world simply lose their luster. There is yet another dimension of a broken heart—namely, our deep gratitude for Christ’s suffering on our behalf.”²⁹

²⁷ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Redemption of the Earth, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 14:233–234. August 1871.

16 For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls [which] I have made.

For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth: The Targum (ܬ) has, “For I will not take vengeance of judgment for ever, neither shall my wrath be eternal.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “I will not contend with you forever, nor will I be continually angry with you.” The Douay-Rheims (ϣ) has, “For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be angry unto the end.” ¶ We shall separate the two clauses. First, I will not contend for ever. This clause reminds us of 2 Nephi 26:11a: “For the Spirit of the Lord will not always strive with man. And when the Spirit ceaseth to strive with man then cometh speedy destruction ...” President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Now the Lord has withdrawn His Spirit from the world. Do not let this thought become confused in your minds. The spirit he has withdrawn from the world is not the Holy Ghost (for they never had that!) but it is the light of truth, spoken of in our Scriptures as the Spirit of Christ [light of Christ], which is given to every man that cometh into the world (D&C 84:46). Now because of the wickedness of the world, that Spirit has been withdrawn, and when the Spirit of the Lord is not striving with men, the spirit of Satan is. Therefore, we may be sure that the time has come spoken of in Section 1 of the Doctrine and Covenants. . . . Peace has been taken from the earth. The devil has power over his own dominion. The Spirit of the Lord has been withdrawn. Not because the Lord desires to withdraw that Spirit, but because of the wickedness of mankind, it becomes necessary that this Spirit of the Lord be withdrawn.”³⁰ ¶ The second clause, neither will I be always wroth. While the first clause seems to refer to the withdrawing of the spirit from the world before the Second Coming; the words, neither will I be always wroth appears to speak of the millennium—with the resurrection of the just, but before the mounting tensions associated with the end of the thousand years. Rabbi David Kimhi (in Rosenberg) writes of the day when the Lord will replace our stony heart with a heart of flesh, and further, even remove our evil inclinations. ¶ For the spirit should fail before me, and the souls [which] I have made. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For I will revive (literally, ‘I am ready to revive’) the spirits of the dead, and the souls I have created.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For from me spirit is to proceed and I have made every breathing soul.” Instead of fail before me, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has proceeds from before me; instead of souls, breath. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Because the spirit shall go forth from my face, and breathings I will make.” ¶ Barnes has: “The Hebrew word which is rendered here ‘should fail’ (עָטַף), means properly to cover, as with a garment; or to envelope with anything, as darkness. Then it is used in the sense of having the mind covered or muffled up with sorrow; and means to languish, to be faint or feeble, to fail ... According to this, it furnishes ground of encouragement and comfort to all the children of God who are afflicted. No sorrow will be sent which they will not be able to endure, no calamity which will not be finally for their own good.” Delitzsch suggests: “כִּי [for] introduces the reason for the self-limitation of the divine wrath, just as in Psalm 78:38–39 (cf., Psalm 103:14): if God should put no restraint upon His wrath, the consequence would be the entire destruction of human life, which was His creative work at first. The verb עָטַף, from its primary meaning to bend round, has sometimes the transitive meaning to cover, and sometimes the meaning to wrap one's self round, i.e., to become faint or weak (compare עָטַף, fainted away, Lamentations 2:19; and הִתְעָטַף in Psalm 142:4, which is applied to the spirit). מְלִפְנֵי is equivalent to ‘in consequence of the wrath proceeding from me.’ נְשָׁמוֹת (a plural only met with here) signifies, according to the fixed usage of the Old Testament (ISAIAH 2:22; 42:5), the souls of men, the origin of which is described as a creation in the attributive clause (with an emphatic אֲנִי [I]), just as in Jeremiah 38:16 (cf., Zechariah 12:1)... . The prophet, who refers to the flood in other passages also (e.g., ISAIAH 54:9), had probably in his mind the promise given after the flood, according to which God would not make the existing and inherited moral depravity an occasion for utterly destroying the human race.” Clarke has: “And the souls – נְשָׁמוֹת the immortal spirits.” Gill offers: “The spirit of the afflicted, which not being able to bear up any longer under the affliction, would sink and faint, or be ‘overwhelmed,’ as the word (עָטַף) signifies: and the souls which I have made ... The Lord knowing the weakness of the human frame, therefore restrains his hand, or moderates or removes the affliction; see a like reason in Psalm 78:38, the last days of trouble to God’s people, which will be the time of the slaying of the witnesses, will be such that if they are not shortened, no flesh can be saved, but for the elect’s sake they will be shortened (Matthew 24:22).” The Geneva notes summarize this point: “I will not use my power against frail man, whose life is but a blast.” Of ISAIAH 57:15–16, Henderson says: “These verses contain the most sublime description of the Divine majesty and condescension to be found in the Scriptures. The words require no comment; but they have a depth of meaning which no finite mind can fully comprehend.”

²⁸ Pratt, Apostle Orson, discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 26 October 1879. JD 24:31a.

²⁹ Porter, Elder Bruce D. “A Broken Heart and a Contrite Spirit,” October 2007 General Conference.

vv. 17–21. The disobedient receive the Lord’s punishment, but God has pity on the repentant. They receive peace and salvation.

17 ¶ For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart.

✓ turning away

For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For my wrath is upon them on account of their robbed riches, and I smote them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because of sin I grieved him a little while and smote him.” Instead of covetousness, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has treachery. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For the iniquity of his covetousness I was angry, and I struck him.” ¶ Kay has: “his covetousness] Out of that sin, which is, in essence, idolatry (Colossians 3:5³¹), every form of iniquity might germinate (1 Timothy 6:10³²).” Elder Jeffrey R. Holland taught: “Brothers and sisters, there are going to be times in our lives when someone else gets an unexpected blessing or receives some special recognition. May I plead with us not to be hurt—and certainly not to feel envious—when good fortune comes to another person? We are not diminished when someone else is added upon. We are not in a race against each other to see who is the wealthiest or the most talented or the most beautiful or even the most blessed. The race we are really in is the race against sin, and surely envy is one of the most universal of those. Furthermore, envy is a mistake that just keeps on giving. Obviously we suffer a little when some misfortune befalls us, but envy requires us to suffer all good fortune that befalls everyone we know! What a bright prospect that is—downing another quart of pickle juice every time anyone around you has a happy moment! To say nothing of the chagrin in the end, when we find that God really is both just and merciful, giving to all who stand with Him ‘all that he hath,’ as the scripture says. So lesson number one from the Lord’s vineyard: coveting, pouting, or tearing others down does not elevate your standing, nor does demeaning someone else improve your self-image. So be kind, and be grateful that God is kind. It is a happy way to live.”³³ ¶ I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “I removed my Shekinah from them, and cast them out; I scattered their captives, because they went astray after the imagination of their hearts.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And turned away my face from him; and he was grieved and went his ways sorrowing.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “I turned and was wroth, but his sigh followed the way of his heart.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “But she backslid and was wroth, and went away groaning in her heart.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “I hid my face from thee, and was angry: and he went away wandering in his own heart.” ¶ Barnes has: “I hid me] I withdrew the evidences of my presence and the tokens of my favour, and left them to themselves.” This is what happens when we fail to turn to the Lord. Fausset and Bullinger’s Companion Bible Notes (CBN) send us to ISAIAH 8:17; 45:15; 59:2; and 64:7. Gill makes an interesting comment on apostasy and modern Christianity: “I hid me, and was wroth] showed his displeasure by departing from them; and how much God has withdrawn his presence, and caused his spirit to depart from the churches of the Reformation, is too notorious.” ¶ Whitehouse has: “The word rendered ‘froward’³⁴ ... [שׁוֹכֵב] is a favourite one in Jeremiah, and means ‘unfaithful,’ ‘rebellious’ (Jeremiah 3:14, 22; cf. 31:22, 49:4).” Other translations into English also include turning away (NASB, AMP and margin ||), turning back (HCSB, ISV, YLT), turning aside (Rotherham), backsliding / backslidingly (ASV, ESV, WEB, TLV, Darby), turneth (Bishops), returning (CEV), and walked apostate (LEB).

³⁰ Joseph Fielding Smith, The Predicted Judgments. BYU speeches of the year. Provo, 21 Mar. 1967, pp. 5–6.

18 I have seen his ways, and will heal him: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to his mourners.

I have seen his ways, and will heal him: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The way of their repentance is revealed before me, and I will forgive them.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I have seen his ways and healed him.” Alexander says, “The Targum puts a favourable sense on ways, as meaning his repentance and conversion. So Jarchi, I have seen his humiliation; and Ewald, I have seen his patient endurance of trial.” Whitehouse has: “The words of comfort in these verses are evidently addressed to the faithful and repentant portion of the Zion community, who are sharply distinguished from the wicked and unfaithful.” Words of comfort are given indeed, *yet I will heal him and*³⁵ I will lead him [וְאֶרְפְּאֵהוּ וְאֶנְהִי]. Despite our best efforts we are still afflicted with our imperfections and weaknesses, our evil inclinations—which the Lord has seen. He says, I have seen his ways—yet even so the Lord will be merciful unto those who look unto Him for help. The Lord will help us turn those weaknesses into strength (Ether 12:29). There must be repentance or a turning unto the Lord for this healing grace to take place. The Spirit of the Lord will help us in making these changes—some of which will take a lifetime of work. Shalom Paul has: “Then I noted his ways and I healed him”—Some commentators interpret דרכיו as referring to the people’s upright ways, i.e., I saw that the people returned to a more virtuous path, and so I healed them (note once again the correct vocalization should be in the past tense: וְאֶרְפְּאֵהוּ).” The past tense shows the prophetic perfect wherein the Lord is not ³² For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows” (1 Timothy 6:10).

³¹ “Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry” (Colossians 3:5).

³³ Holland, Elder Jeffrey R., “The Laborers in the Vineyard.” April 2012 General Conference.

³⁴ Also see definition of שׁוֹכֵב given in the margin ||, turning away, which also has the sense of apostasy.

³⁵ Instead of and, Fausset (leaning on Horsley who uses but) has, “I have seen his ways (in sin), yet will I heal him.” ESV and HCSB (also see LEB, NASB, TLV and LITV) have “I have seen his ways, but I will heal him; I will lead him ...”

only looking at His people after the restoration of the Gospel, but even into the Millennium. Elder George Q. Cannon declared: “If Satan, therefore, has power with man, it is because man yields to his influence ... Satan will be bound by the power of God; but he will be bound also by the determination of the people of God not to listen to him, not to be governed by him. The Lord will not bind him and take his power from the earth while there are men and women willing to be governed by him. That is contrary to the plan of salvation. To deprive men of their agency is contrary to the purposes of our God” (Gospel Truth, 1:86–87).³⁶ ¶ The Prophet Alma helps us not to misunderstand the meaning of ISAIAH 57:18: “And it is requisite with the justice of God that men should be judged according to their works; and if their works were good in this life, and the desires of their hearts were good, that they should also, at the last day, be restored unto that which is good. And if their works are evil they shall be restored unto them for evil. Therefore, all things shall be restored to their proper order, every thing to its natural frame—mortality raised to immortality, corruption to incorruption—raised to endless happiness to inherit the kingdom of God, or to endless misery to inherit the kingdom of the devil, the one on one hand, the other on the other—The one raised to happiness according to his desires of happiness, or good according to his desires of good; and the other to evil according to his desires of evil; for as he has desired to do evil all the day long even so shall he have his reward of evil when the night cometh. And so it is on the other hand. If he hath repented of his sins, and desired righteousness until the end of his days, even so he shall be rewarded unto righteousness. These are they that are redeemed of the Lord; yea, these are they that are taken out, that are delivered from that endless night of darkness; and thus they stand or fall; for behold, they are their own judges, whether to do good or do evil. Now, the decrees of God are unalterable; therefore, the way is prepared that whosoever will may walk therein and be saved ... Do not suppose, because it has been spoken concerning restoration, that ye shall be restored from sin to happiness. Behold, I say unto you, wickedness never was happiness” (Alma 41:3–8, 10). It is no coincidence that Isaiah clarifies this point a few verses below: “[There is] no peace, saith my God, to the wicked” (ISAIAH 57:21). ¶ I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to his mourners. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And I will have compassion upon them, and requite consolations to them and to those that mourn with them (or, ‘in behalf of them’).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And comforted him.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has something like, “And I have comforted her, and consoled her and those that with her are in mourning.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And brought him back, and restored comforts to him, and to them that mourn for him.” ¶ I will lead him also, seems to mean that the Holy Ghost will hold Christ’s disciples by the hand and lead them back into righteousness, where they will be filled with comfort through repentance. Barnes says: “And will heal him] That is, I will pardon and restore him. Sin, in the Scriptures, is often represented as a disease, and pardon and salvation as a healing of the disease.” Gill says, in part, “of such who trust in the Lord, the ways of the humble and contrite, who are brought by repentance and reformation, by the dealings of God with them; these he sees, knows, and approves of, and heals their former backslidings ...”

19 I create the fruit of the lips; Peace, peace to [him that is] far off, and to [him that is] near, saith the LORD; and I will heal him.

I create the fruit of the lips. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The prophet said: He that creates the speech in the lips of every man.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And given him true consolation.” Instead of fruit, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has speech. ¶ See also Hosea 14:2, mentioned by several exegetes: “Take with you words, and turn to the LORD: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips.” That is, offer praises to the Lord. Cowles explains: “The appropriate fruit of the lips is praise. God ‘creates’ it by giving both the occasion and the heart for it. As to the figure of the ‘fruit’ applied to the lips, see Hebrews 13:15: ‘By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name.’ The connection of thought in our passage is that his wayward people when brought to repentance by his corrective discipline so as to be truly broken and humbled in spirit, will have their mouths filled with praise and will be blessed with double peace [which] ... comprehends all spiritual blessings.” Wade points us to Daniel 9:7. The complete chapter is particularly beautiful and must be reread, as Daniel recognizes that the people have been guilty as set out in Rain in Due Season but prays for the blessings to come upon Israel: “O LORD, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee. O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee. To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him; Neither have we obeyed the voice of the LORD our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets. Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him” (Daniel 9:7–11). The angel Gabriel appears to him and gives him the consolation of the coming Messiah. Although Deuteronomy 30 would not be fulfilled with the First Coming, but rather in the gathering of Israel, the Savior would bring Peace upon all those who turn to Him thanks to the expiatory sacrifice. ¶ Peace, peace to [him that is] far off, and to [him that is] near, saith the LORD. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Peace shall be wrought for the righteous, who have kept my law of old, and peace shall be wrought out for the penitent, who return to my law.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Peace upon peace to them near and to them far off.” Instead of him, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) uses the plural. ¶ Keith has: “The repetition ‘peace, peace,’ [שָׁלוֹם שָׁלוֹם] indicates, according to the Hebrew idiom, the superlative, or highest degree.” One of the suggestions offered by Rawlinson is: “to both the scattered members of the Jewish body [means Israel, Ephraim—including the lost ten tribes as well as the Lamanites—as well as Judah—GB].” This is also the Jewish interpretation, according to Kay. Alexander says: “Jarchi and Knobel explain it to mean all the Jews [meaning Israel—GB] wherever scattered ... [And Kimhi] understands the words as abolishing all difference between the earlier and later converts, an idea similar to that embodied in our Saviour’s parable³⁷ of the labourers in the vineyard.” Nägelsbach points us to the writings of Paul that apply to the meridian of times, Ephesians 2:17, which we will look in the larger context: “Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby: And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God; And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord: In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit” (Ephesians 2:11–22, emphasis added). It is certainly clear that Paul had ISAIAH 57 in mind when he penned these words. Nägelsbach well suggests: “... the LORD knows no salvation without healing. There is indeed no salvation for those not healed ...” ¶ Elder Harold B. Lee said: “Brothers and sisters, my prayer is for all of us, that we may so live, that when our time comes, we may not be afraid to die, and that when we die, we may look confidently forward to a life, an eternal life, in the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ in the celestial kingdom ...”³⁸ ¶ And I will heal him. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “It is at hand that I will pardon them, saith the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “So the Lord said, I will heal them.” Instead of him, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has them. Alexander points out: “Hitzig directs attention to the way in which the writer here comes back [וְרָפְאֵתִי] to the beginning of ISAIAH 57:18 [וְאֶרְפָּאתִי], as an observable rhetorical beauty.” Christ is the only one who can heal us—through His atoning sacrifice. With Jeremiah we can plead: “O LORD, thou hast pleaded the causes of my soul; thou hast redeemed my life” (Lamentations 3:58). If we walk uprightly, through Christ’s expiatory sacrifice, we can someday return to the presence of the Father. ¶ President Gordon B. Hinckley testified: “I invoke the healing power of Christ, giving my witness of its efficacy and wonder. I testify of Him who is the great source of healing. He is the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world, ‘The Sun of Righteousness,’ who came ‘with healing in his wings.’ Of this I humbly testify in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, amen.”³⁹

³⁶ “Chapter 37: The Millennium and the Glorification of the Earth.” Doctrines of the Gospel Student Manual, (2000), 104–6.

20 But the wicked [are] like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt.

The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “But the wicked shall be tossed like waves and shall not be able to rest.” Instead of mire

³⁷ Matthew 20:1–16. The meaning of this parable is that individuals are called at different times in their lives to become the Lord’s disciples. What matters is not when they are called but if they will heed that invitation. All who accept will receive the same glorious reward to obtain all that the Father hath (see D&C 84:38).

³⁸ Lee, Elder Harold B. Spiritual Re-birth and Death. October 1947 General Conference.

³⁹ Hinckley, President Gordon B., “The Healing Power of Christ.” October 1988 General Conference.

and dirt, the Peshitta (S) has creeping things (Lamsa) / reptiles (BPE) and mire. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “But the wicked are like the raging sea, which cannot rest, and the waves thereof cast up dirt and mire.”

¶ Alexander has: “Lowth’s version of this last clause is more than usually plain and vigorous: its waters work up mire and filth. The verb means strictly to expel or drive out, and is therefore happily descriptive of the natural process here referred to.” Alexander then points us to Jude 1:13: “Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.” Delitzsch has: “As [the sea] cannot rest, and as its waters cast out slime and mud, so has their [the wicked] natural state become one of perpetual disturbance, leading to the uninterrupted production of unclean and ungodly thoughts, words, and works.” Nägelsbach explains: “The likings and cravings, the passions are the storms that stir up the human heart and let it have no rest. The wicked works are the foam and slime that then come to the surface and make manifest the uncleanness, the depravity, therefore the malady within.” So also Elder Bruce R. McConkie who has: “... the sea—a raging, restless sea—is a symbol of a sinful and wicked world.”⁴⁰ ¶ President Harold B. Lee taught: “To those who fail to heed the warnings of those who are striving to teach these principles and choose to go in the opposite course, they will eventually find themselves in the pitiable state which you are witnessing so often among us. The prophet Isaiah described the tragic result most dramatically when he repeated the words of God which came to him as he sought to fortify his people against the wickedness of the world, and I quote his words: [then quoted ISAIAH 57:19–21].”⁴¹ Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin testified: “Earth life is a period of probation to provide an opportunity for choices. Two mighty forces are pulling in opposite directions. On the one hand is the power of Christ and his righteousness. On the other hand is Satan and the spirits who follow him. President Marion G. Romney noted: ‘Mankind ... must determine to travel in company with the one or the other. The reward for following the one is the fruit of the Spirit—peace. The reward for following the other is the works of the flesh—the antithesis of peace.’ Further, he said: ‘The price of peace is victory over Satan’ (Ensign, October 1983, pp. 4–5). We can know which one to follow because God has given everyone the Spirit of Christ to know good from evil and to protect themselves from sin. We sometimes refer to the Spirit of Christ as our conscience. If we follow its promptings, we can be free of sin and filled with peace. If we do not, but instead let our carnal appetites control us, we never will know true peace. We will be tossed ‘like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest ... there is no peace, saith ... God, to the wicked.’ If we damage or violate our conscience by ignoring it, we can lose that gift because we no longer are sensitive to it. We will be beyond feeling, beyond the influence of that Spirit.”⁴² Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught: “What we mortals encounter as the unforeseen, God has already seen, such as how the oil deposits of this earth would shape the latter-day conflicts among nations. God’s ‘is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations.’ He likewise foresaw all the awful famines, some resulting from the unwise, unnecessary erosions of precious topsoil. He surely foresaw the terrible persecutions of the Jews. Having created the earth, He has anticipated the impact of continental drifts on the frequency and intensity of latter-day earthquakes. He who analogized that ‘the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest’ also knows where and when, in latter days, the seas’ tidal waves will heave themselves savagely ‘beyond their bounds.’”⁴³ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: that “... when Christ calms the seas of life, peace enters the hearts of men.”⁴⁴

21 [There is] no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.

The LXX (G) reads, “There is no peace, said God, to the wicked.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “There is no peace to the wicked, saith the Lord God.” In ISAIAH 48:22 we have: “There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked.” Several exegetes have noted that the only difference is that the words “declares my God” [אֱמַר אֱלֹהִי] are used here instead of “declares Jehovah” [אֱמַר יְהוָה]. Why the difference? While I do believe that the Lord sometimes reveals specific⁴⁵ words, often the revelation or intelligence given

⁴⁰ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. The Mortal Messiah, in the Messiah Series.

⁴¹ Lee, President Harold B. “Understanding Who We Are Brings Self-Respect.” October 1973 General Conference.

⁴² Wirthlin, Elder Joseph B., Peace Within. April 1991 General Conference.

⁴³ Maxwell, Elder Neal A., “Yet Thou Art There.” October 1987 General Conference.

⁴⁴ McConkie, Elder Bruce R., The Mortal Messiah: From Bethlehem to Calvary, 2:278.

⁴⁵ Oliver Cowdery spoke of his impression of John the Baptist’s language. Joseph and Oliver had been praying regarding baptism when the veil parted and Angel John the Baptist appeared: “I shall not attempt to paint to you the feelings of this heart, nor the majestic beauty and glory which surrounded us on this occasion; but you will believe me when I say, that earth, nor men, with the eloquence of time, cannot begin to clothe language in as interesting and sublime a manner as this holy personage. No; nor has this earth power to give the joy, to bestow the peace, or comprehend the wisdom which was contained in each sentence as they were delivered by the power of the Holy Spirit!” (JS—History Note:7b).

through the Holy Ghost comes through bursts of light and truth (see D&C 93:36). We receive revelation from the Lord in these bursts of light and truth and then translate them into human language. ¶ President Howard W. Hunter taught: “No peace comes to those who reject God. There is no promise of peace to those who reject God, to those who will not keep his commandments, or to those who violate his laws. The Prophet Isaiah spoke of the decadence and corruption of leaders, and then continued in his admonitions by saying: ‘But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked’ (ISAIAH 57:20–21) ... Peace comes by an unconditional surrender. Indifference to the Savior or failure to keep the commandments of God brings about insecurity, inner turmoil, and contention. These are the opposite of peace ... Fundamental truths will bring peace. It seems that two eternal truths must be accepted by all if we are to find peace in this world and eternal life in the world to come. (1) That Jesus is the Christ, the very eternal son of our Heavenly Father, who came to earth for the express purpose of redeeming mankind from sin and the grave, and that he lives to bring us back to the presence of the Father. (2) That Joseph Smith was his prophet, raised up in this latter-day to restore the truth which had been lost to mankind because of transgression ... We need to be kinder with one another, more gentle and forgiving. We need to be slower to anger and more prompt to help.”⁴⁶ Elder Marvin J. Ashton taught: “True Christians have no time for contention. Lasting peace cannot be built while we are reviling or hating others ... Feelings of enmity and malice can never be compatible with feelings of peace. [He then quotes ISAIAH 57:20–21.].”⁴⁷

FIRST POSTED: 28 August 2016

⁴⁶ Hunter, Howard W. The Teachings of Howard W. Hunter. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1997, pp. 171–174.

⁴⁷ Ashton, Elder Marvin J., Peace—A Triumph of Principles. October 1985 General Conference.

Isaiah 58

Observance of the true spirit of fasting and Sabbath day observance is enjoined. There seem to be two very opposite extremes in terms of fasting and prayer. Formalism devoid of the proper attitude on the one hand; on the other, a neglect for fasting and Sabbath day observance in modern times. There is a need for both humanity and the observance of these laws in the Lord's way. ¶ Today, there seems to be all but a total abandonment of Sabbath day worship. It is interesting how some conversations seem to stick with us forever. As an adolescent, growing up in Chile in the 1960s, before I knew about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, I remember hearing that the father of a friend had taught that not observing the Sabbath day was not in keeping with God's will. I was shocked by the comment. I did not know anybody who kept the Sabbath day holy. ¶ It was truly a pleasure for me to be taught about this practice as I learned about the Church. Not too many years later I watched the movie Chariots of Fire. It chronicled the lives of several UK athletes in the 1920s. At that time, it seems that Sabbath day observance was honored by devout Christians. One of the athletes, Eric Liddell refused to run on the Sabbath day. In one moving scene, Liddell tells a young man who was playing ball on Sunday, "Do you know what day it is?" And then Eric kindly admonishes the young man, "The Sabbath is not a day for playing ball, is it?" I love this movie for many reasons, and it did not hurt that ISAIAH 40 was quoted in it. ¶ As I write almost a hundred years after the 1920s, it seems that Sabbath day observance has all but vanished. Instead, the Sabbath has turned into a day of shopping and recreation. The clear and joyous teachings of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints stand out as a breath of fresh air. Countless Latter-day Saints have refused "to play ball" on Sunday and their examples shine forth to the world.

vv. 1–2. One of the callings of a prophet is to set things right in the Church. The Lord, through Isaiah, has spoken about the needed repentance regarding fasting and Sabbath-day observance. Similarly today, one the Prophets, Seers and Revelators, President Russell M. Nelson, has recently admonished us as a Church to be more faithful in our Sabbath-day observances. False religion is rejected.

1 ¶ CRY aloud, ~ spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.

✓ with the throat

CRY aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Cry aloud (literally, 'cry with the throat'), O prophet, spare not, lift up thy voice like the voice of a trumpet." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Cry aloud and spare not; raise thy voice like a trumpet." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has cease rather than spare. ¶ Cowles has: "The Lord addresses his prophet, giving his message and instructions. 'Cry from the throat' [Hebrew] in distinction from whispering out of the lips; speak with loud and earnest tones ..." Rabbi Rosenberg clarifies, "raise the voice like a shofar" [שׁוֹפָר]. Rabbis Slotki/Rosenberg have the idea of not sparing the throat to cry out. Alexander has: "The loudness of the call is intended to suggest the importance of the subject, and perhaps the insensibility of those to be convinced." ¶ And shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins. The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the first clause, "And shew unto my people their rebellion." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Proclaim to my people their sins, and to the house of Jacob their iniquities." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has wicked doings instead of transgression. ¶ By the words my people it becomes clear that the Lord is speaking to Israel.

2 Yet they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways, as a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: they ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God.

Yet they seek me daily, and delight to know my ways. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "And they seek daily instruction from me, as if to know the ways which are right before me." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Day after day they seek me, and desire to know my ways." Instead of delight, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has wish (Lamsa) / pretending (BPE). Wade suggests: "The verb seek is used of consulting God through either priest or prophet (cf. ISAIAH 31:1, Ezekiel 20:3)." Cheyne also, "'Consult' is the usual word for applying to an oracle or a prophet, and no doubt consultations of the prophet are included (see Ezekiel 20:1), but direct prayer to God is also meant (see ISAIAH 58:4 and comp. 55:6)." ¶ Cowles has: "This verse describes them as professing to seek God and even as pretending to inquire after justice and righteousness—the very principles which they most of all outraged and trampled under foot in their oppressive ways of life.” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg suggests that those who ask for instruction with no intention of obeying are in particular trouble. This reminds us of the men who asked Jeremiah if they should go to Egypt or stay, but their hearts were not sincere (see Jeremiah 42–43). ¶ Regarding my ways [מִדְּבָרַי], Wade points us to ISAIAH 2:3, 42:24, cf. 48:17. In Moses 6:41b we read, “And my father taught me in all the ways of God.” In Hosea we also read, “For the ways of the LORD are right, and the just shall walk in them” (Hosea 14:9b). The Scriptures often speak of either perverting the ways of the Lord or walking therein. ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “We may after baptism and confirmation become companions of the Holy Ghost who will teach us the ways of the Lord, quicken our minds and help us to understand the truth ... But the ways of the Lord are not man’s ways ... [The Latter-day Saints] are being gathered from all parts of the earth and are coming to the house of the Lord in these valleys of the mountains. Here they are being taught in the ways of the Lord through the restoration of the gospel and by receiving blessings in the temples now erected.”¹ To know my ways generally means to study the commandments with a desire both to know and to do the will of God. There are times, however, and this seems one of them, when people are only hearers rather than doers of the word (see James 1:22). ¶ As a nation that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinance of their God: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Finding delight in my presence as a people that doeth righteousness, and have not forsaken the judgment of their God.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Like a people who have practised righteousness, and who have not forsaken the ordinance of God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “As a nation that hath done justice, and hath not forsaken the judgment of their God.” ¶ The word for ordinance in Hebrew, as Cheyne points out, is מִשְׁפָּט. It is often translated as statute (Bishops, Geneva) or judgment (ESV, LEB, LITV) or justice (HCSB, Rotherham). The Lord seems to be saying, “You seek for my advice as someone who is ready to obey it, but in reality you have turned from me and have apostatized.” ¶ Birks has: “The main feature is a pretended eagerness to learn the commands and will of God, as shewn in ceremonial details, and still a neglect of the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith.—The verbs which express the actions of these hypocrites are in the future tense. The verse may be paraphrased thus; And they will seek me day by day, and will delight to know the ways that please me in manner and appearance like a nation which has wrought righteousness habitually (as they have not) ... They will ask me the ordinances of justice [without the least thought of doing them] ...” In other words, they draw near God only with their lips.² So also Wordsworth, who quotes Ezekiel: “They come unto thee, and sit before thee as My People, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness” (Ezekiel 33:31). ¶ They ask of me the ordinances of justice; they take delight in approaching to God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They ask of me judgment and truth, as if they delighted to draw near to the fear of the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They now ask of me a just decision and desire to draw near to God.” Instead of delight in approaching, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has delight in drawing near (Lamsa) / pretending to draw near (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “They ask of me the judgments of justice: they are willing to approach to God.” ¶ Rawlinson has, in part: “They take delight in approaching to God” So the LXX (Ⲅ), the Vulgate (ⲱ), Calvin, Vitringa, and Kay.” Gill says: “... the approaching here is only in an external manner, by the performance of outward duties; and the delight is not in God, and communion with him.”

vv. 3–7. In 1963, Presiding Bishop John H. Vandenberg noted: “It is here that I would like to state that the Lord has caused a day of fasting and prayer to be set up in this day so that collectively the Church might join together to fulfil the purposes of fasting. In the general letter from the Council of the Twelve to the Church under date of May 17, 1845, which Orson Pratt read to the Saints, these words appear: ‘Let this be an ensample to all saints, and there will never be any lack for bread: When the poor are starving, let those who have, fast one day and give what they otherwise would have eaten to the bishops for the poor, and everyone will abound for a long time; and this is one great and important principle of fasts, approved of the Lord. And so long as the saints will all live to this principle, with glad hearts and cheerful countenances they will always have an abundance.’ (DHC 7:413.) ... I feel to add that those who are not physically able to abstain from food and drink should participate on fast day to the extent of prayers, offerings, and testimony. If we abide by the word of the Lord for the above purposes, we will surely be blessed as God has promised through his prophets. I suppose there is no physical blessing desired so much as being well in mind and in body ... Today with the Church having reached the age of 133 years, we marvel at its growth; and with the strength of its leadership, we are moving forward. Yet as we examine ourselves, we see there is much need for improvement. I think of the Prophet Isaiah's words when he said: 'Cry aloud, spare not lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.' I observe a great need for the teaching and adherence to the principle of fasting. I would like to say something relative to it. As a Church, we have not reached the full benefits of this principle. There are some who faithfully observe the fast and who receive the full blessings. But there are many who must yet be taught the true principle of fasting and be converted to it and practice it in order to receive the great blessings associated with it. The Prophet Isaiah clearly sets forth an understanding of the fast. As he observed the people, he was, no doubt, considerably upset and concerned with the way they had abused the purpose and principle of fasting."³ Elder L. Tom Perry taught, "The law of the fast has three great purposes. First, it provides assistance to the needy through the contribution of fast offerings, consisting of the value of meals from which we abstain. Second, a fast is beneficial to us physically. Third, it is to increase humility and spirituality on the part of each individual."⁴ President Joseph F. Smith taught: "Now, while the law requires the Saints in all the world to fast from 'even to even' and to abstain both from food and drink, it can easily be seen from the Scriptures, and especially from the words of Jesus, that it is more important to obtain the true spirit of love for God and man, 'purity of heart and simplicity of intention,' than it is to carry out the cold letter of the law. The Lord has instituted the fast on a reasonable and intelligent basis, and none of his works are vain or unwise. His law is perfect in this as in other things. Hence, those who can are required to comply thereto; it is a duty from which they cannot escape; but let it be remembered that the observance of the fast day by abstaining twenty-four hours from food and drink is not an absolute rule, it is no iron-clad law to us, but it is left with the people as a matter of conscience, to exercise wisdom and discretion. Many are subject to weakness, others are delicate in health, and others have nursing babies; of such it should not be required to fast. Neither should parents compel their little children to fast. I have known children to cry for something to eat on fast day. In such cases, going without food will do them no good. Instead, they dread the day to come, and in place of hailing it, dislike it; while the compulsion engenders a spirit of rebellion in them, rather than a love for the Lord and their fellows. Better to teach them the principle, and let them observe it when they are old enough to choose intelligently, than to so compel them. But those should fast who can, and all classes among us should be taught to save the meals which they would eat, or their equivalent, for the poor."⁵

¹ President Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation.

² The Prophet Joseph Smith shared these thoughts: “My object in going to inquire of the Lord was to know which of all the sects was right, that I might know which to join. No sooner, therefore, did I get possession of myself, so as to be able to speak, than I asked the Personages who stood above me in the light, which of all the sects was right (for at this time it had never entered into my heart that all were wrong)—and which I should join. I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong; and the Personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt; that: ‘they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me, they teach for doctrines the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof’” (Joseph Smith—History 1:18–19).

3 ¶ Wherefore have we fasted, [say they], and thou seest not? [wherefore] have we afflicted our soul, and thou takest no knowledge? Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure, and exact all your labours. ✓

✓ or, things wherewith ye grieve others, HEB. griefs

Wherefore have we fasted, [say they], and thou seest not? The Targum (¶) has, "They say, wherefore do we fast, as it is revealed before Thee?" The LXX (¶) reads, "Saying, 'Why have we fasted and thou hast not seen?'" The Douay-Rheims (¶) has, "Why have we fasted, and thou hast not regarded?" ¶ Birks suggests: "The complaint is that they had made God largely their debtor, and that the debt was unpaid. Religious pride breeds discontent, and discontent open blasphemy." Cheyne notes: "Wherefore have we fasted] The reproofs in this part of the prophecy remind us of Zechariah 7:5, Joel 2:12, 13." Alexander suggests: "The combination of the preterite (hast not seen) and the future (wilt not know) includes all time. The clause describes Jehovah as indifferent and inattentive to their laboured austerities. The reason given is analogous to that for the rejection of their sacrifices in ISAIAH 1:11–13, viz. the combination of their formal service with unhallowed practice." ¶ President Marion G. Romney taught: "The apostle James said, 'If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well' (James 2:8). We must have this law in mind in all that we do in our welfare work. We must love our neighbors as ourselves. The Savior put this law second only to the love of God ... In the payment of our fast offerings, we must do so with the royal law in mind."⁶ President Romney further testified: "One of the important things the Lord has told us to do is to be liberal in our payment of fast offerings. I would like you

³ Bishop John H. Vandenberg, Presiding Bishop of the Church, A Glorious Principle, Conference Report, April 1963.

⁴ Elder L. Tom Perry, "The Law of the Fast." April 1986 General Conference.

⁵ President Joseph F. Smith, Gospel Doctrine, p. 306–307.

⁶ President Marion G. Romney, The Royal Law of Love, April 1978 General Conference.

to know that there are great rewards for so doing—both spiritual and temporal rewards. The Lord says that the efficacy of our prayers depends upon our liberality to the poor. Way back in the days of Isaiah, he made this clear. When at that time the people complained, ‘Wherefore have we fasted ... and thou seest not? wherefore have we afflicted our soul, and thou takest no knowledge?’”⁷ ¶ [Wherefore] have we afflicted our soul [עֲנִינוּ נַפְשֵׁנוּ], and thou takest no knowledge? The Targum (T) has, “Wherefore have we afflicted ourselves, as known unto Thee?” The LXX (G) reads, “We have humbled our souls and thou hast not known.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Have we humbled our souls, and thou hast not taken notice?” ¶ Rawlinson has: “And thou takest no knowledge] rather, no notice.” ¶ Kay explains: “They observe the Day of Atonement, the only fast-day enjoined by the law; on which every Israelite was required to ‘afflict his soul’ (Leviticus 16:29⁸, 31⁹). But their day of soul-afflicting has not produced its proper fruits, contrition and charity. They censure God; they oppress men.” And furthermore, Kay explains: “The sabbatical and jubilee years (when servants and debtors obtained release) began on the evening of the Day of Atonement (Leviticus 25:9).” The Old Testament is quite clear on the importance of forgiving debts during the jubilee and even warns against those who would not lend when it was close to the year of jubilee. ¶ Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure, and exact all your labours. The Targum (T) has, “The prophet said unto them: Behold, in the day of your fast ye seek your extortions (or, ‘gain’), and ye bring near all your stumbling-blocks.” The LXX (G) reads, “In the very days of your fasts you enjoy your own pleasures and goad all them who are under your control.” ¶ I particularly like NASB here: “Behold, on the day of your fast you find your desire, And drive hard all your workers.” The Peshitta (S) has “Behold, in the day of your fast you do what you wish, and you present offerings to all of your idols.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Behold in the day of your fast your own will is found, and you exact of all your debtors.” ¶ Horsley, also, leaning on the LXX (G), prefers: “And exact the whole upon your debtors.” In other words, they are unforgiving to their debtors. ¶ Wade has, “The Lord’s answer to their appeal is that their acts of self-denial are purely external, and that their fast-days do not interfere with their interests, or bring relief to their workmen.” Cheyne has: “Unlike the Sabbath, the fast-days (except the great Day of Atonement) appear not to have involved the cessation of business. Hence the prophet continues, All your tasks ye exact] Ye are specially anxious at such times that the service of God should not interfere with that of mammon. Ye ‘exact’ the full tale¹⁰ of works, like slave-drivers (the participle of the verb has this meaning, see Exodus 5:6, Job 3:18).” ¶ Rawlinson’s has: “In the day of your fast ye find pleasure. Delitzsch and Mr. Cheyne render, ‘ye carry on business,’ which accords better with the clause which follows. The great Day of Atonement was, like the sabbath, a day on which no work was to be done (Leviticus 16:29). The Jews, while priding themselves on their observance of the day, did not really observe it in this particular. And exact all your labours; i.e. ‘require of your servants and subordinates all the services that they have to render on other days.’ Days of religious observance, even under the Law, were always intended to be days of kindly forbearance towards the poor, of the remission of burdens, or even of the actual giving of relief.”

4 Behold, ye fast for strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as [ye do this] day, to make your voice to be heard on high.

✓ or, ye fast not as this day

Behold, ye fast for strife and debate. The Targum (T) has, “Behold, ye fast for provocation and strife.” Instead of debate, the Peshitta (S) has quarreling (Lamsa) / conflict (BPE). ¶ Presiding Bishop John H. Vandenberg explained, “... they are rewarded with strife, debate, and wickedness.”¹¹ Alexander has: “Vitringa applies this clause to the doctrinal divisions among Protestants, and more particularly to the controversies in the Church of Holland on the subject of grace and predestination.” ¶ The actual topic of contention is not as vital as to the fact that contention takes place in the name of God. Nothing could be more distasteful to God than when people contend in His name. A modern expression for the same phenomena is “Bible bashing.” ¶ And to smite with the fist of wickedness: The LXX (G) reads, “And smite the poor with your fists.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “And to strike violently” and the BPE (S) has “And to inflict the violence of iniquity.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And strike with the fist wickedly.” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, suggests that those who fasted would not forgive debts and even used their fists [בְּאַגְרָה], if

⁷ President Marion G. Romney, Fundamental Welfare Services, April 1979 General Conference.

⁸ תַּעֲנִינוּ אֶת-נַפְשֵׁיכֶם, afflict your souls.

⁹ וְעֲנִיתֶם אֶת-נַפְשֵׁיכֶם, and ye shall afflict your souls.

¹⁰ Tale, from the Hebrew תָּכַן is defined, in Easton Bible Dictionary: “(1.) HEB. ‘a task,’ as weighed and measured out = tally, i.e., the number told off; the full number (Exodus 5:18; see 1 Samuel 18:27; 1 Chronicles 9:28). In Ezekiel 45:11 rendered ‘measure.’” necessary, in order to collect. The ASV has, “Behold, ye fast for strife and contention, and to smite with the fist of wickedness.” ¶ Ye shall not fast as [ye do this] day, to make your voice to be heard on high. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Why fast ye for me as to-day that by a cry your voice may be heard?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Do not fast as you have done until this day, to make your cry to be heard on high.” ¶ Wade suggests, “ye fast not this day, etc. Better (as in the mg. ⲥ), ye shall not fast as ye do this day so as to make, etc.” Cheyne notes: “This glaring inconsistency prevents your prayers for a Divine interposition (ISAIAH 58:2) from rising to the pure ‘height,’ where Jehovah dwelleth (ISAIAH 57:15 Hebr.). Comp. Lamentations 3:44, ‘Thou hast covered thyself with clouds, so that prayer may not pass through.’”

¹¹ Bishop John H. Vandenberg, Presiding Bishop of the Church, A Glorious Principle, Conference Report, April 1963.

5 Is it such a fast that I have chosen? a day for a man to afflict his soul? ♣ [is it] to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes [under him]? wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD?

♣ or, to afflict his soul for a day?

Is it such a fast that I have chosen? The Targum (ⲡ) has, “Is this the fast which I delight in?” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “This is not such a fast as I have chosen.” This is a rhetorical construction meaning that, no; these things were opposite to the purposes of the fast. ¶ A day for a man to afflict his soul? The Targum (ⲡ) has, “A day to afflict oneself?” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “That a man should afflict his soul for a day.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “For a man to afflict his soul for a day?” ¶ Barnes explains: “... the idea is, that the pain and inconvenience experienced by the abstinence from food was not the end in view in fasting. This seems to have been the mistake which they made, that they supposed there was something meritorious in the very pain incurred by such abstinence.” Faussett explains: “The pain felt by abstinence is not the end to be sought, as if it were meritorious; it is of value only in so far as it leads us to amend our ways.” And to take notice of those around us who are afflicted. ¶ [Is it] to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes [under him]? The Targum (ⲡ) has, for the second half, “And passing the night in sackcloth and ashes?” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “No: though thou shouldst bend thy neck like a hook and lay sackcloth and ashes under thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Is this it, to wind his head about like a circle, and to spread sackcloth and ashes?” ¶ Ibn Ezra explains: “Bulrush] A tender plant, that bends its top.” Barnes has: “A bulrush is the large reed that grows in marshy places. It is, says Johnson, without knots or joints. In the midst of water it grows luxuriantly, yet the stalk is not solid or compact like wood, and, being unsupported by joints, it easily bends over under its own weight. it thus becomes the emblem of a man bowed down with grief. Here it refers to the sanctimoniousness of a hypocrite when fasting—a man without real feeling who puts on an air of affected solemnity, and ‘appears to others to fast.’” Rashi and Kara, in Rabbi Rosenberg, suggest individuals bent over like a fishing hook rather than a bulrush. Faussett has: “bow ... head ... sackcloth”—to affect the outward tokens, so as to ‘appear to men to fast.’” Kent P. Jackson summarizes: “Fasting is not a passive act, for in order to be efficacious it must be accompanied by righteous living and charity demonstrated not only through fast offerings but through daily living and interaction with our fellowmen.”¹² Christ did not abolish fasting, but pointed His disciples in the right direction: “But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face” (Matthew 6:17). ¶ Barnes explains of sackcloth: “It was commonly worn around the loins in times of fasting and of any public or private calamity. It was also customary to sit on sackcloth, or to spread it under one either to lie on, or to kneel on in times of prayer, as an expression of humiliation.” ¶ When Jonah preached to the children of Nineveh they repented: “So the people of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them. For word came unto the king of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing: let them not feed, nor drink water: But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands. Who can tell if God will turn and repent,¹³ and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not? And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not” (Jonah 3:5–10). Another great example is that of such ‘repentance,’ came from King Ahab, who had truly done wickedly: “And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly. And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house" (1 Kings 21:27–29). There was nothing inherently wrong with fasting in sackcloth and ashes in olden times. It all boils down to a question of sincerity. ¶ Wilt thou call this a fast, and an acceptable day to the LORD? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Will ye call this a fast before the presence of the Lord, and a day in which I delight?" The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Even in that case you are not to call it an acceptable fast." ¶ Once again, a rhetorical construction meaning no; such a fast was far removed from what the Lord had in mind. The word acceptable, רָצוֹן, is related to the concept of justification. We read also of רָצוֹן: "And the LORD had respect unto Abel and to his offering: But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect" (Genesis 4:4b–5a). For any performance to find favor in the sight of God, to be acceptable in His sight, or be justified, the Holy Spirit of Promise must put a sealing stamp of approval upon it: "All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations, that are not made and entered into and sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise ... are of no efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead ..." (D&C 132:7).

¹² Kent P. Jackson, ed., Studies in Scripture, 4:158.

¹³ The word translated as repent [ⲙⲛⲓ] in the KJV, means to take pity (Gesenius) or be filled with mercy. Also see the two JST readings in this passage, making it clear that this is the meaning of the word ⲙⲛⲓ.

6 [Is] not this the fast that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?

- ✓ the bundles of the yoke
- ✓ ✓ broken

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, beginning with the second clause, "To scatter the assembly of wickedness, to loose the fetters of a decree of perverted judgment, to set at liberty the sons of the freeborn, who have suffered violence, and to remove all perverted judgment?" The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "It is not such a fast as this that I have chosen, saith the Lord. But loose every bond of iniquity; dissolve the obligations of onerous contracts; set at liberty them who are oppressed, and tear in pieces every unjust stipulation in writing." Instead of undo the heavy burdens, the Peshitta (Ⲯ) has cut off the bands of treachery (Lamsa) / break the burdens of deceit (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, "Undo the bundles that oppress, let them that are broken go free, and break asunder every burden." ¶ Faussett suggests: "Undo heavy burdens" "Hebrew, 'loose the bands of the yoke.'" Wade explains, "The true fast has for its sphere the field of social duty and consists in abstinence from oppressing the weak and in the provision of relief for the destitute: cf. ISAIAH 32:6, Ezekiel 18:7–9, Zechariah 8:16, 17, Job 31:13, 14 ... the bands of the yoke] In strictness, the thongs which fastened the yoke (or yoke bar) to the neck (cf. Jeremiah 2:20, 27:2), but here used of any oppressive imposition... naked], i.e. half-clad." Ibn Ezra has: "מוֹטֵה Yoke. Comp. מוֹטֵה עֲלֵיכֶם 'the bands of your yoke' (Leviticus 26:13¹⁴ [Rain in Due Season —GB]). To loose the bands, etc. To make the slaves free." Cheyne explains: "To untie the thongs of the yoke] Metaphorically, of course. The elaborate and merciful legislation for the protection of Hebrew slaves (Exodus 21:2 &c., Deuteronomy 15:12 &c., Leviticus 25:39 &c.) appears to have been long a dead letter (see Jeremiah 34:8–22) ... To set them that are crushed] In the spirit of him who cherishes the 'crushed reed' (ISAIAH 42:3, same word)." Skinner has: "to undo the bands (or knots) of the yoke] The yoke was fixed on the neck of the ox by two wooden pins, one on either side, which were tied below with a thong (Post, *Pal. Expl. Fund St.*¹⁵, 1891, p. 112)." Alexander points out that some tied some of these verses to the release of bondsmen as required in Sabbatical years: "It is evident, however, that the terms were so selected as to be descriptive of oppression universally [i.e., not just release of bondmen]; to make which still more evident, the Prophet adds a general command or exhortation, Ye shall break every yoke." ¶ Elder Carl B. Pratt noted: "If we fast and pray with the purpose of repenting of sins and overcoming personal weaknesses, surely we are seeking to 'loose the bands of wickedness' in our lives. If the purpose of our fast is to be more effective in teaching the gospel and serving others in our Church callings, we are surely striving to 'undo the heavy burdens' of others. If we are fasting and praying for the Lord's help in our missionary efforts, aren't we desiring to 'let the oppressed go free'? If the purpose of our fast is to increase our love for our fellow man and overcome our selfishness, our pride, and having our hearts set upon the things of this world, surely we are seeking to 'break every yoke.'" ¹⁶

7 [Is it] not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? when thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?

¹⁴ And broken the bands of your yoke, וְאַשְׁבֵּר מִטַּת עֲלֵיכֶם.

¹⁵ Palestine Exploration Fund Quarterly Statement for 1891, URL accessed 11 September 2016, see beautiful drawings of agricultural implements including the yoke as part of a plow system (pp. 112–113), at <https://archive.org/details/quarterlystateme23pale>

¹⁶ Elder Carl B. Pratt, "The Blessings of a Proper Fast," October 2004 General Conference.

✓ or, afflicted

[Is it] not to deal thy bread to the hungry. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Shouldst not thou sustain the hungry with thy bread.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Deal out thy bread to the hungry.” Instead of deal, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has share. LITV (also see LEB, Rotherham, MKJV) has: “Is it not to break your bread to the hungry.” ¶ Cheyne explains regarding ⲟⲩⲁⲓ, “To break thy bread] Alluding to the oval cakes which formed the Jewish bread.” Kay has: “Delitzsch notices that in the primitive Church¹⁷ fasting was always accompanied by almsgiving.” ¶ President Dieter F. Uchtdorf powerfully testified: “Whether we are rich or poor, regardless of where we live on this globe, we all need each other, for it is in sacrificing our time, talents, and resources that our spirits mature and become refined. This work of providing in the Lord’s way is not simply another item in the catalog of programs of the Church. It cannot be neglected or set aside. It is central to our doctrine; it is the essence of our religion. Brethren, it is our great and special privilege as priesthood holders to put the priesthood to work. We must not turn aside our hearts or our heads from becoming more self-reliant, caring better for the needy, and rendering compassionate service. The temporal is intertwined with the spiritual. God has given us this mortal experience and the temporal challenges that attend it as a laboratory where we can grow into the beings Heavenly Father wants us to become.”¹⁸ ¶ And that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And bring the poor that are cast out, into the midst of thy house?” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And take into thy house the poor who have no shelter.” Instead of poor, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has stranger. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And bring the needy and the harbourless¹⁹ into thy house.” ¶ Kay explains: “The cast out” are the homeless. Barnes, leaning on the margin ¶ gives a more encompassing definition: “Margin ¶, ‘Afflicted’ Hospitality to all, and especially to the friendless and the stranger, was one of the cardinal virtues in the Oriental code of morals.” The expression reminds us of that question put to the Savior, “And who is my neighbour?” ¶ When thou seest the naked, that thou cover him. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “If thou seest one naked, clothe him.” Gill has: “... one that is thinly clothed, whose clothes are scarce anything but rags, not sufficient to keep him warm, or preserve him from the inclemencies of the weather; put a better garment upon him, to cover him with.” ¶ And that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh? The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And shouldst not hide thine eyes from the kindred who is thy flesh?” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And look not scornfully on dependants of thy race.” Instead of hide not, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has refuse not (Lamsa) / not be negligent (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And despise not thy own flesh.” ¶ Presiding Bishop John H. Vandenberg noted, “He meant that in addition to taking care of the poor, that we should watch over our own kin and be responsible for our father, mother, brother, and sister when they are in need.”²⁰ Elder Dallin H. Oaks spoke extensively on the topic of caring for aging parents, permitting them to “preserve their independence as long as possible,” and of regrettable abuses. Speaking of the abuses, Elder Oaks said: “I believe this was the kind of circumstance the Lord’s spokesman, the prophet Isaiah, thundered against when he commanded, ‘Hide not thyself from thine own flesh.’”²¹

vv. 8–12. These verses refer to the promises made to those who keep the proper fast, but like so many other blessings, can be generalized to the keeping of the commandments of God. Elder Spencer W. Kimball spoke at General Conference and said, “If we can walk now by faith, if we can believe in the rich promises of God, if we can obey and patiently wait, the Lord will fulfil all his rich promises to us: ‘... Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him’ (1 Corinthians 2:9). The blessings following righteousness are enjoyed both in mortality and in eternity. Hear the words of the Savior: ‘And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name’s sake, shall receive an hundredfold and shall inherit everlasting life’ (Matthew 19:29) ... Extravagant rewards are offered. Blessings beyond one’s understanding will come. The land will yield bounteously and peace shall abound. The unfaithful, proud, and wealthy can never enjoy the sweet savor of the rewards for fasting and dispensing to the poor: ‘Then [if you live these commandments the promises in ISAIAH 58:8–11 will be yours].’”²² After quoting ISAIAH 58, President Henry B. Eyring said: “So the Lord has given us a simple commandment with a marvelous promise. In the Church today we are offered the

¹⁷ The Church as it existed at the time of Christ and right after, before the apostasy. In other words, The Church of Jesus Christ as described in the New Testament.

¹⁸ President Dieter F. Uchtdorf, “Providing in the Lord’s Way.” October 2011 General Conference.

¹⁹ Those without a harbor or homeless.

²⁰ Bishop John H. Vandenberg, Presiding Bishop of the Church, A Glorious Principle, Conference Report, April 1963.

²¹ Elder Dallin H. Oaks, “Honour Thy Father and Thy Mother.” April 1991 General Conference.

²² Elder Spencer W. Kimball, April 1952 General Conference, p. 23.

opportunity to fast once a month and give a generous fast offering through our bishop or branch president for the benefit of the poor and the needy. Some of what you give will be used to help those around you, perhaps someone in your own family. The Lord's servants will pray and fast for the revelation to know whom to help and what help to give. That which is not needed to help people in your local Church unit will become available to bless other Church members across the world who are in need."²³ Elder Spencer W. Kimball taught: "What more could one ask? The companionship of the Lord, light and knowledge, health and vigor, constant guidance by the Lord as an eternal never-failing spring. What more could one desire?"²⁴

8 ¶ Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the LORD shall be thy rereward. ✓

✓ gather thee up

Then shall thy light break forth as the morning. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, "Then shall thy light be revealed like the early dawn." The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "Then shall thy light break forth like the morning." ¶ Skinner explains, "By a vivid metaphor the dawn was conceived as 'splitting' the heavens and flooding the world with light. The same word occurs on the Moabite Stone (line 15) in the phrase 'from the splitting of the dawn.'" So also the NASB, "Then your light will break out like the dawn." Light represents knowledge as revealed by the Holy Ghost. This is particularly notable after a night of darkness, when the dawn comes forth. ¶ And thine health shall spring forth speedily: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, "And the healing of thy wound shall appear quickly." The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "And thy remedies shall spring up speedily." Instead of health, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has righteousness. The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, "And thy health shall speedily arise." ¶ ASV renders it: "and thy healing shall spring forth speedily" (emphasis added). The word healing, or the concept of healing, is used by most translators. The healing of our sins and the healing of our bodies are closely associated with each other: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him" (James

5:14–15, emphasis added). Gill speaks of the restoration of the Gospel after the day of apostasy: "... as the herbs and grass out of the earth, by clear shining after rain; by which is meant the healthful and sound state of the church in the latter day, when all divisions shall be healed; contentions and animosities cease; sound doctrine preached; the ordinances administered according to their original institution; true discipline restored; and all the parts of worship performed, according to the rule of the divine word; and so the souls of men, under all these means, be in thriving and flourishing circumstances." Gill, then, uses אֲרִיכָה not of the healing of a wound, but of the healing of Israel's relationship with God. Similarly, Barnes has: "The Hebrew word used here, (אֲרִיכָה), means properly 'a long bandage' (from אָרַךְ, 'to make long'), such as is applied by surgeons to heal a wound. It is then used to denote the healing which is secured by the application of the bandage; and figuratively here means their restoration from all the calamities which had been inflicted on the nation. The word rendered 'spring forth' (from צִמָּח) properly relates to the manner in which plants germinate. Here the sense is, that if they would return to God, they would be delivered from the calamities which [apostasy] had brought on them, and that peace and prosperity would again visit the nation." ¶ "Thy light break forth" has reference to an inheritance in the Celestial Kingdom of God, a Urim and Thummim or "Lights and Perfections."²⁵ ¶ And thy righteousness shall go before thee. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, "Thy great righteousness shall go before thee." The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "And thy righteousness shall go before thee." The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, "And thy justice shall go before thy face." Gill has: "Christ [is] their righteousness, the sun of righteousness, that arises upon them with healing in his wings, and from whom they have the health before mentioned." ¶ The glory of the LORD shall be thy rereward. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, "And thou shalt be gathered to the glory, which is in the presence of the Lord." The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "And the glory of the Lord will surround thee." The BPE (Ⓢ) has, "The Glory of the Lord shall go next to thee." The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, "And the glory of the Lord shall gather thee up." Rereward or rear guard. As Ibn Ezra points out, "Thus, there will be protection from all sides." Birks explains: "The figure is borrowed from the history of the Exodus and the journey through the wilderness." So we have: "And the angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them: And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of

²³ President Henry B. Eyring, "Is Not This the Fast That I Have Chosen?" April 2015 General Conference.

²⁴ Elder Spencer W. Kimball, "'Tis Not Vain to Serve the Lord." April 1952 General Conference.

²⁵ LDS.org, LDS Bible Dictionary.

Israel; and it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night” (Exodus 14:19–20). Barnes says: “Margin||, ‘Shall gather thee up.’ That is, shall bring up the rear.” As we pointed out earlier, the rear is where the very young, the old, and the infirm are found. ¶ Gill, continuing with the theme of the restoration of the Gospel, has: “The phrase denotes a glorious state of the church in the latter day, when the glory of the Lord will be risen on his church, and abide upon it, and upon all that glory there shall be a defence.”

9 Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I [am]. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity;

Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I [am]. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Then thou shalt pray, and the Lord shall hear thy prayer; thou shalt supplicate before Him, and He shall grant thy supplication.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Then thou shalt cry and God will answer thee; and whilst thou art speaking he will say, Lo I am here.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has hear instead of answer. The Talmud tradition (Seder Nashim, Yevamoth 62b–63a, see also Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 26a) suggests this wonderful blessing is subject to righteous behavior, such as: “Concerning a man who loves his wife as himself, who honours her more than himself, who guides his sons and daughters in the right path ... Scripture says, And thou shalt know that thy tent is in peace. Concerning him who loves his neighbours, who befriends his relatives ... and lends a sela’ [i.e., coin] to a poor man in the hour of his need, Scripture says, Then shalt thou call, and the Lord will answer; thou shalt cry and He will say: ‘Here I am’” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Jennings says of יהוה, “For Jehovah here puts Himself as listening for the very first appeal or cry, and at once answering, ‘Here am I.’ Think of that, my fellow-believers, think of the ‘high and exalted One who inhabits eternity’ waiting on such poor creatures as we, and instantly responding to our cry with ‘Here am I.’” Or, more literally, “Here I,” or “Behold me” (Gesenius, Rotherham, YLT). Indeed, can there be anything better than to be able to commune with God in this manner and know that He will hear our prayers? ¶ President Harold B. Lee testified: “What a wonderful feeling of security can come in a crisis to one who has learned to pray and has cultivated listening ears so that he can ‘call, and the Lord shall answer’; when he can cry and the Lord shall say, ‘Here I am.’”²⁶ When the Lord answers our prayers in this manner, we feel as if we live in His presence. President Harold B. Lee also taught: “If you analyze ... the 58th chapter of the book of Isaiah you will find unraveled why the Lord wants us to pay fast offerings, why he wants us to fast. It’s because by qualifying thus we can call and the Lord can answer. We can cry and the Lord will say, ‘Here I am.’”²⁷ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland testified: “I bear witness of the miracles, both spiritual and temporal, that come to those who live the law of the fast. I bear witness of the miracles that have come to me. Truly, as Isaiah recorded, I have cried out in the fast more than once, and truly God has responded, ‘Here I am.’ Cherish that sacred privilege at least monthly, and be as generous as circumstances permit in your fast offering and other humanitarian, educational, and missionary contributions. I promise that God will be generous to you, and those who find relief at your hand will call your name blessed forever.”²⁸ Elder James B. Martino shows a direct relationship between fasting, prayer and revelation: “Prayer and fasting will allow us to be susceptible to spiritual promptings. Communicating with Heavenly Father while purposefully abstaining from food and drink allows us to ‘loose the bands of wickedness [and] to undo the heavy burdens.’ Prayer, combined with fasting, will provide so that when we ‘call, ... the Lord shall answer; ... [and when we] cry, ... he shall say, Here I am.’”²⁹ President John Taylor powerfully testified, “It is for us to live holy, justly, purely and righteously before God, that we may have a legitimate claim upon Him. If we will do this, then I tell you, in the name of Israel’s God, that you shall call upon the Lord and He will hear and answer you; that you shall draw nigh unto Him and He will draw nigh unto you ...”³⁰ ¶ President Spencer W. Kimball promised that missionaries who were full of zeal and ready to share their testimonies of the Gospel would also be blessed with the promises made in ISAIAH 58:8–

²⁶ President Harold B. Lee, A Time of Decision, Ensign (CR), July 1972, p.29. Also see Elder Harold B. Lee, Conference Report, October 1968, Second Day-Morning Meeting, p.62.

²⁷ President Harold B. Lee in, “The Law of the Fast: A Personal Responsibility to Care for the Poor and Needy,” by Bishop Dean M. Davies, Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric. October 2014 General Conference. Also see Lee, Harold B. The Teachings of Harold B. Lee. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996, pp. 125–130.

²⁸ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, “Are We Not All Beggars?” October 2014 General Conference.

²⁹ Elder James B. Martino, “Turn to Him and Answers Will Come,” October 2015 General Conference.

³⁰ JD 24:235a. God is on the Side of Israel. Discourses by President John Taylor on a Recent Trip to Bear Lake, delivered in the Various Settlements Around Bear Lake.

9.³¹ ¶ If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “If thou put away from the midst of thee perverted judgment.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “If thou remove from thee the bond.” Instead of yoke, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has deceit. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “If thou wilt take away the chain out of the midst of thee.” Ibn Ezra suggests: “From thy midst] From thy heart, or from the midst of Israel.” ¶ This probably is related to any sort of abuse of power extended towards our families, employees, and so on. Jenour speaks this and the next cause of oppression. Gill suggests that the yoke of false religion is meant. See also above, in ISAIAH 58:6. ¶ The putting forth of the finger. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The pointing of the finger.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And the vote .” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) has and release the prisoners (BPE) / release the oppressed (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And cease to stretch out the finger.” Birks has: “The putting forth of the finger] A gesture of contempt ... A mocking, cynical spirit is one of the special dangers of the last times.” ¶ Ibn Ezra suggests: “The putting forth of thy finger] that is, the stretching out of the hand to smite the neighbour or to take away his property.” More likely, as Rawlinson points out: “The pointing of the finger at anyone in scorn.” ¶ And speaking vanity. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the speaking of violent words.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And decree which occasion murmuring.” Instead of vanity, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has falsehood. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And to speak that which profiteth not.” ¶ Any talk or speech that is not uplifting can fall into the category of speaking vanity. Gesenius defines 𐤓𐤓𐤕 as emptiness or vanity. This is a word also associated with the vanity of idols (see Gesenius, HAL).

10 And [if] thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness [be] as the noonday:

And [if] thou draw out thy soul to the hungry. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And if thou breathest (the sense is, ‘if thou givest to the hungry what would sustain thy own life’) out thy soul before the hungry.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And from thy soul give bread to the hungry.” Instead of draw out thy soul, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has give your bread (Lamsa) / share your bread (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “When thou shalt pour out thy soul to the hungry.” ¶ Horsley suggests: “And if thou draw out thy soul] Rather, “And if thou impart of thine own substance, or sustenance.” Lowth, pointing to some of the other ancient manuscripts has: “But instead of 𐤏𐤓𐤕, thy soul, eight MSS (three ancient) read 𐤏𐤕𐤍, thy bread; and so the Syriac renders it. The LXX express both words, τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τῆς ψυχῆς σου, thy bread from thy soul.” ¶ Rawlinson suggests: “If thou draw out thy soul to the hungry; i.e. not merely giving him bread, but giving him sympathy and compassion with it.” Rawlinson’s comments make us think of Peter and John, as they made eye contact with the disabled beggar, as it is so easy not to make eye contact with those in need: “And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us” (Acts 3:4, but see 3:1 ff., emphasis added). Draw out thy soul seems to mean, then, to be moved with compassion. ¶ And satisfy the afflicted soul. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And satisfiest the afflicted soul.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And satisfy an afflicted soul.” ¶ In James we read: “If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone” (James 2:15–17). There are many afflictions that we may be called to help assuage: physical, emotional and spiritual. If we are not doing any of these things, indeed our faith is dead. But what a glorious promise is made to those who are concerned with satisfying the afflicted souls, as follows. ¶ Then shall thy light rise in obscurity. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Then shall thy light spring up in darkness.” Instead of rise, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has shine. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has darkness instead of obscurity. ¶ Shalom Paul has in part, “Then the darkness shall be pierced by luminescence.” This is one of the great gifts that a disciple of Christ may obtain: “That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day” (D&C 50:24). ¶ And thy darkness [be] as the noonday: The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And thy darkness shall be as the noon day.” This means that even the darkest moment for the disciple, will be as noonday. The disciple of Christ is to chase darkness away with light and truth, “And again, verily I say unto you, and I say it that you may know the truth, that you may chase darkness from among you” (D&C 50:25). Elder Jeffrey R. Holland explained: “Through His grace God has dealt bread to the hungry and clothing to the poor. At various times in our lives that will include all of us, either temporally or spiritually speaking. For every one of us the gospel has broken forth as the light of the morning, driving back the darkness of ignorance and sorrow, fear and despair.”³²

³¹ Kimball, Spencer W. The Teachings of Spencer W. Kimball. Edited by Edward L. Kimball. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1982, pp. 569–570, 574–579.

³² Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, “Like a Watered Garden.” October 2001 General Conference.

11 And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, ✓ and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail ✓ not.

✓ droughts

✓ ✓ lie, or, deceive

And the LORD shall guide thee continually. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And the Lord will give thee rest continually.” The LXX (G) reads, “And thy God will be with thee continually.” ¶ In the arguments against seating Senator Reed Smoot, and early Apostle in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we have the words of Robert W. Taylor, “Several hundred thousand sincere men and women have believed and now believe as they believe in their own existence, that Joseph Smith Jr. received revelation direct from God. And if anyone ever believed that, we must assume that Senator Smoot believes it. Now a senator for the United States might believe anything else in the world but that and not be ineligible to a seat in the body to which he belongs. He might believe in polygamy, he might believe that murder was commendable. He might deny the propriety as a rule of life of all the Ten Commandments. He might believe in the sacrifice of human life, he might believe in no God, or in a thousand gods. He might be Jew or Gentile, Mohammedan or Buddhist. Atheist or Pantheist. He might believe that the world began last year, and would end next year. But to believe with a kind of conviction that Reed Smoot possesses that God speaks to him or may speak to him is to admit by the inevitable logic of his conviction that there is a superior authority with whom here and now he may converse, and whose command he can no more refuse to obey, than he can will himself not to think.”³³ Similarly, the Prophet Joseph Smith was surprised by a Methodist preacher’s response to the First Vision: “I took occasion to give him an account of the vision which I had had. I was greatly surprised at his behavior; he treated my communication not only lightly, but with great contempt, saying it was all of the devil, that there were no such things as visions or revelations in these days; that all such things had ceased with the apostles, and that there would never be any more of them” (Joseph Smith—History 1:21b). ¶ The matter I most value, above all other things, is the knowledge that we have a living God who not only hears our prayers but also answers them; who moreover guides us continually if we only permit Him to do so. Indeed, we have a living God and a living Prophet who guide the Church. And that is not all; it is as if each member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has a Urim and Thummim in the way of the Holy Ghost. So it is that Amulek, in the Book of Mormon, ties the importance of this continual seeking for guidance from our Heavenly Father with satisfying the afflicted soul: “Yea, humble yourselves, and continue in prayer unto him. Cry unto him when ye are in your fields, yea, over all your flocks. Cry unto him in your houses, yea, over all your household, both morning, mid-day, and evening. Yea, cry unto him against the power of your enemies. Yea, cry unto him against the devil, who is an enemy to all righteousness. Cry unto him over the crops of your fields, that ye may prosper in them. Cry over the flocks of your fields, that they may increase. But this is not all; ye must pour out your souls in your closets, and your secret places, and in your wilderness. Yea, and when you do not cry unto the Lord, let your hearts be full, drawn out in prayer unto him continually for your welfare, and also for the welfare of those who are around you. And now behold, my beloved brethren, I say unto you, do not suppose that this is all; for after ye have done all these things, if ye turn away the needy, and the naked, and visit not the sick and afflicted, and impart of your substance, if ye have, to those who stand in need—I say unto you, if ye do not any of these things, behold, your prayer is vain, and availeth you nothing, and ye are as hypocrites who do deny the faith” (Alma 34:19–28). ¶ Elder Dallin H. Oaks taught, “As we keep the Lord’s commandments, we see his light ever brighter on our path and we realize the fulfillment of Isaiah’s promise, ‘And the Lord shall guide thee continually.’”³⁴ ¶ And satisfy thy soul in drought. The Targum (T) has, “And satisfy thy soul in the years of drought.” The LXX (G) reads, “And thou shalt be satisfied as thy soul desireth.” Instead of in drought, the Peshitta (S) has with rich foods (Lamsa) / delicacies (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And will fill thy soul with brightness.” ¶ Faussett, leaning on Maurer, has: “Literally, ‘drought,’ that is, parched places.” Even when there is drought all around you, the Lord will bless you. ¶ And make fat thy bones: The Targum (T) has, “And He shall quicken thy body with eternal life.” The LXX (G) reads, “And thy bones shall be made fat.” Instead of make fat, the Peshitta (S) has strengthen. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And deliver thy bones.” ¶ Cowles explains it: “Make fat thy bones [is strictly to renew their vigor, to reanimate thy physical frame with new vitality.” The idea is precisely the same as that of marrow in the bones, such as we find in the Word of Wisdom and elsewhere: “And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones” (D&C 89:18, see also Job 21:24; Psalm 63:5; Proverbs 3:8; and ISAIAH 25:6).

³³ Joseph Smith Papers, Episode 23, The Revelations of Joseph Smith. KJZZ-TV, with Glenn Rawson, in conjunction with the historical department of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

³⁴ Elder Dallin H. Oaks, “The Light and Life of the World.” October 1987 General Conference.

¶ And thou shalt be like a watered garden. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And thy soul shall be full with delicacies like a watered garden, well irrigated.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And be like a watered garden.” ¶ Water is often associated with blessings (see Rain in Due Season). Faussett has: “An Oriental picture of happiness.” Rawlinson points us to Jeremiah 31:12. ¶ Margalioth considers the thesis and antithesis of this verse, using the words to be like or to be as כִּי־הוּא (although the form of the verb to be varies) / and as or and like כִּי־כִּי /

that or which or whose אֲשֶׁר, thus we have in ISAIAH 1:30, “For ye SHALL BE LIKE an oak whose leaf fadeth, AND LIKE a garden WHICH hath no water,” and contrasts this to this verse in the second half of Isaiah. Whereas in ISAIAH 1:30 the comparison is towards misery, its companion scripture in ISAIAH 58 turns it into a thing of good: “And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou SHALT BE LIKE a watered garden, AND LIKE a spring of water, WHICH waters fail not” (ISAIAH 58:11). Similar Hebrew words have here been rendered by the same English word. ¶ A watered garden seems to have an ever available supply of water. To me, this is the constant companionship of the Holy Ghost, which is further described in the next clause: ¶ And like a spring of water, whose waters fail not. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And like a spring whose water never failed.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has fountain instead of spring. The Spirit of the Holy Ghost is to the soul what water is to the land. Similarly, we read: “... then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven. The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever” (D&C 121:45b–46).

12 And [they that shall be] of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in.

And [they that shall be] of thee shall build the old waste places: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thy offspring (literally, ‘they that shall be of thee’) shall build the old waste places.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And thine old waste places shall be rebuilt.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has, “And the places that have been desolate for ages shall be built in thee.” ¶ Faussett suggests: “old waste places] —the old ruins of Jerusalem (ISAIAH 61:4; Ezekiel 36:33–36).” Rawlinson has: “Thy descendants shall restore all that has fallen into decay in Israel, whether it be cities or customs. They shall restore ‘breaches’ of every kind, and bring back the old paths for thee to walk in. The restoration of the ruined cities of Judah may be glanced at, but is far from exhausting the writer’s meaning (comp. ISAIAH 61:4).” Horsley has: “I am mistaken if in this verse it is not intimated that the Church of the Gentiles perfectly reformed shall be the instrument of the final conversion of the Jews.” Not the Church of the Gentiles, but the Restored Church, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which will be instrumental in repairing the breach between Israel and the Lord, specifically, repairing the breach of the Abrahamic covenant through the testimony of the Book of Mormon. ¶ Thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And thy foundations shall last for generations of generations.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has, “Thou shalt raise up the foundations of generation and generation.” ¶ Faussett suggests: “foundations of many generations] —that is, the buildings which had lain in ruins, even to their foundations, for many ages; called in the parallel passage (ISAIAH 61:4), ‘the former desolations’; and in the preceding clause here, ‘the old waste places.’ The literal and spiritual restoration of Israel is meant ...” ¶ And thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And they shall call thee, The restorer of the right way; The converter of the wicked to the law.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And thou shalt be called the repairer of breaches, and shalt enjoy rest in the midst of thy paths.” Instead of breach (פֶּצַע), the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the plural, breaches. The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has, “And thou shalt be called the repairer of the fences, turning the paths into rest.” ¶ Faussett explains: “breach] —the calamity wherewith God visited Israel for their sin (ISAIAH 30:26; 1 Chronicles 15:13; Hosea 1:9–10). The paths to dwell in represent the straight and narrow way of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Skinner points us to Job 24:13, where we read: “They are of those that rebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.” This verse is a perfect description of apostasy and the turning away from the light to walk in darkness. Elder Orson Pratt taught: “In the apostles’ days, when the art of printing was unknown, and the great majority of mankind could not read the word, the principal means of obtaining faith was by the process of preaching and hearing, but in these days, in many instances, faith comes, by reading as well as by preaching: for a man called and inspired of God can both preach and write by the power of the Holy Ghost; and when the honest humble soul either hears or reads that which is given by the Spirit, the light that is in him witnesseth that it is of God; for light cleaves to light, and truth to truth; the Spirit gives light to every man that comes into the world, and if he loves the light that is in himself, he will love all other light that is presented to his mind, and embrace it. Light cannot be presented to the mind of a candid, honest person, without being perceived to be light; but if he receive it not, he extinguishes in a degree the light that is in him, and darkness still greater ensues, and he is left to commit evils of a greater magnitude, until the light that was in him has entirely fled, and darkness reigns triumphantly: this darkness brings misery and wretchedness in this world and eternal torment in the world to come. This is the state of man who rejects light and truth, and will not exercise faith in that which the light that is in him teaches him is true”³⁵ So, The restorer of paths to dwell in, then, by contrast, are those who bring the light back into the lives of people: they share the Gospel of Jesus Christ with those in mortality and do temple work for their departed ancestors. All of these clauses build one on the other to repeat the same sentiment. One of the great blessings of sincere fasting and prayer will be the gift of speaking the Gospel truth so others can know of its veracity.

vv. 13–14. Isaiah teaches how we can fully embrace the Sabbath way. Elder H. Aldridge Gillespie taught: “Today is the Sabbath. It does not end when we leave this session; it does not end if someone calls on the phone or knocks at our door inviting us to come out and play, go for a ride, to a ball game, or shopping; it does not end because we are on vacation or someone is visiting us, whether member or nonmember. The Lord commanded: ‘Go ye out from among the wicked. Save yourselves. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord.’ A critical element in observing this commandment is to ‘remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.’ The Sabbath lasts all day! In a revelation ‘especially applicable to the saints in Zion,’ the Lord states that the Sabbath was given that we might keep ourselves ‘unspotted from the world.’ It is a day to partake of the sacrament, a day ‘to pay [our] devotions unto the Most High, a day of ‘fasting and prayer,’ a day to offer our time, talent, and means in service to our God and our fellowmen, D&C 59:12 reads, ‘Thou shalt offer up thine oblations,’ meaning to offer one’s time, talents, or means, a day to ‘[confess our] sins [to our] brethren, and before the Lord.’ It is also a good day to pay our tithes and fast offerings, a day to be marked by sincere sacrifice of the pursuits and pleasures of the world. It is a day to keep the Sabbath covenant, a day of ‘rejoicing and prayer,’ a day of ‘cheerful hearts and countenances.’ Isaiah promised, [quotes ISAIAH 58:13–14]. Obviously, our attention is on doing the Lord’s will and not continuing to work nor indulge our carnal appetites for recreation and loafing. The prophet Spencer W. Kimball counseled: ‘The Sabbath is a holy day in which to do worthy and holy things. Abstinence from work and recreation is important but insufficient. The Sabbath calls for constructive thoughts and acts, and if one merely lounges about doing nothing on the Sabbath, he is breaking it. To observe it, one will be on his knees in prayer, preparing lessons, studying the gospel, meditating, visiting the ill and distressed, sleeping, reading wholesome material, and attending all the meetings of that day to which he is expected. [Failure] to do these proper things is a transgression on the omission side’ ([The Miracle of Forgiveness (1969), 96–97].”³⁶

13 ¶ If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, [from] doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking [thine own] words:

If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, [from] doing thy pleasure on my holy day. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “employment” instead of pleasure. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “If on account of the sabbaths thou restrain thy foot from doing thy pleasure on that holy day.” Brenton Ⓜ renders it: “If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, so as not to do thy pleasure on the holy days.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has own will instead of pleasure. ¶ Birks has: “The holy day of the Lord] God’s own title of the Sabbath.” Cowles well explains: “‘Turning away the foot from the Sabbath,’ is by no means turning the foot away from the house and the scenes of public worship, but turning it away from scenes of Sabbath desecration.” ¶ Elder Francisco J. Viñas said: “The key words are ‘turn away ... from doing thy pleasure,’ or in other words, doing God’s will. Oftentimes, our will—shaped by the desires, appetites, and passions of the natural man—conflicts with the will of God. The prophet Brigham Young taught that ‘when the will, passions, and feelings of a person are perfectly submissive to God and his requirements, that person is sanctified. —It is, for my will to be swallowed up in the will of God, that will lead me into all good, and crown me ultimately with immortality and eternal lives’ (Deseret News, 7 September 1854, 1).³⁷ If we are not doing our pleasure, we are doing the Lord’s pleasure. ¶ And call the sabbath a delight. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And dost meet the Sabbath with great delight.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And call the sabbaths delightful.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And call the sabbath delightful.” ¶ Faussett writes: “This is the very way in which the Sabbath is mostly broken; it is made a day of carnal pleasure instead of spiritual ‘delight.’” Kay points us to an example of the opposite: “Hear this, O ye that swallow up the needy, even to make the poor of the land to fail, Saying, When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn? and the sabbath, that we may set forth wheat, making the ephah small, and the shekel great, and falsifying the balances by deceit?” (Amos 8:4–5). ¶ Elder Russell M. Nelson gave a powerful Conference address on the Sabbath: “I am intrigued by the words of Isaiah, who called the Sabbath ‘a delight’ ... In Hebrew, the word Sabbath means ‘rest.’ The purpose of the Sabbath dates back to the Creation of the world, when after six days of labor the Lord rested from the work of creation ... the Sabbath was given as a perpetual covenant, a constant reminder that the Lord may sanctify His people ... In addition, we now partake of the sacrament on the Sabbath day in remembrance of the Atonement of Jesus Christ ... I learned from the scriptures that my conduct and my attitude on the Sabbath constituted a sign between me and my Heavenly Father (Exodus 31:13³⁸; Ezekiel 20:12,³⁹ 20⁴⁰) ... What sign will you give to the Lord to show your love for Him? When Isaiah described the Sabbath as ‘a delight,’ he also taught us how to make it delightful. He said: ‘If thou turn away ... from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, ... and shalt honour [the Lord], not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord.’ Not pursuing your ‘own pleasure’ on the Sabbath requires self-discipline ... Think of this: In paying tithing, we return one-tenth of our increase to the Lord. In keeping the Sabbath holy, we reserve one day in seven as His. So it is our privilege to consecrate both money and time to Him who lends us life each day. Faith in God engenders a love for the Sabbath; faith in the Sabbath engenders a love for God. A sacred Sabbath truly is a delight.”⁴¹ Note that in all three of the Scriptures mentioned by President Nelson, the Lord makes a promise to those who keep the Sabbath day, that: “Ye may know that I am the LORD.” And furthermore, that it is He who sanctifies us. ¶ The holy of the LORD, honourable. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “To sanctify the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Dedicated to God (Brenton, ‘holy to God’).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And the holy of the Lord glorious.” ¶ And shalt honour him. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And glorify him.” ¶ Then Elder Russell M. Nelson made these profound comments (emphasis added): “No matter where we live or in what position we serve, all of us need to determine which way we face. God’s commandments serve as a standard against which priorities can be measured. Our respect for the first commandment fashions our feelings for all the others. Consider the commandment to keep the Sabbath day holy, for example. We live in a time when many people throughout the world have transferred their allegiance on the Sabbath from places of worship to places of amusement. Again I ask, ‘Which way do you face?’”⁴² ¶ Not doing thine own ways. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And wilt not lift up thy foot for any work.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “While thou dost not thy own ways.” If we are not doing our own ways, we are doing the ways of the Lord; if we are not finding our own pleasure, we are finding the pleasure of the Lord; if we are not speaking our own words, it is the words of the Lord that we are speaking. We are then in the Lord’s errand, walking in His ways, doing what pleases Him and speaking only those words with which we are moved by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost. ¶ Nor finding thine own pleasure. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Nor making thy wants ample.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And thy own will is not found.” ¶ We will want to make God’s work our pleasure and our business. ¶ Nor speaking [thine own] words: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Nor speaking violent words.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor utter a word in anger from thy mouth.” Instead of the ellipsis, thine own, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has idle words (Lamsa) / speaking just to speak (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “To speak a ³⁷ Elder Francisco J. Viñas, “The Pleasing Word of God.” October 2015 General Conference.

³⁵ Elder Orson Pratt, The Seer, pp. 210–211.

³⁶ Elder H. Aldridge Gillespie, “The Blessing of Keeping the Sabbath Day Holy.” October 2000 General Conference.

³⁸ “Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you” (Exodus 31:13).

³⁹ “Moreover also I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them” (Ezekiel 20:12).

⁴⁰ “Moreover also I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them” (Ezekiel 20:12).

“And hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God” (Ezekiel 20:20).

⁴¹ Elder Russell M. Nelson, “The Sabbath Is a Delight.” April 2015 General Conference.

⁴² Elder Russell M. Nelson, “Thou Shalt Have No Other Gods.” April 1996.

word.” If we do not speak our own words—and we reject speaking the words of Satan—whose words do we then speak? The words of Christ, which in turn are the words of the Father! We surely can speak the words of Christ as we are filled by His spirit. ¶ Elder Gene R. Cook, formerly of the First Quorum of the Seventy, explained: “Since the scriptures come from the mind of Christ, they help us to have the Spirit, which brings us to a oneness of mind and heart with the Lord. Therefore, as you read and study and assimilate the words of the Lord through the scriptures, you are in the process of absorbing the mind of Christ. You begin to think as he thinks. You begin to feel as he feels. You begin to speak as he speaks. How can we know how well we are doing in our scripture reading? We can know we are doing well when we hear his voice (both in the scriptures directly and through revelation), when our hearts burn within us at hearing his word, when we receive the words of Christ into our bosoms, and when we receive them into our minds (and thus we learn how to feel as he feels and think as he thinks.)”⁴³

14 Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken [it].

Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “And trust continually in the Lord.” Instead of delight, the Peshitta (ܣ) has trust. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Then shalt thou be delighted in the Lord.” ¶ Elder D. Todd Christofferson taught: “[The Sabbath] is a day to ‘delight thyself in the Lord,’ to experience the spiritual healing that comes with the sacrament, and to receive the renewed promise of His Spirit to be with us.”⁴⁴ To delight oneself in the Lord is to receive a testimony so strong that He lives, and to feel of His presence in our lives. It is to commune with Him; to be able to count on the Lord and know that He is there when we need to converse with Him. ¶ And I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth. The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “And He shall cause thee to dwell in the strong places of the earth.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “He will then mount thee on the good places of the land.” ¶ Cowles suggests: “‘Riding upon the high places of the earth,’ is first used by Moses (Deuteronomy 32:13).” There, the Lord is reminding Israel of her blessings, and we see allusions to both expressions, “high places” as well as “heritage of Jacob” found here in Isaiah: “For the LORD’s portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye. As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him. He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock; Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape” (Deuteronomy 32:9–14, emphasis added, also an allusion to Rain in Due Season). Sadly, Israel did not retain these: “But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked &c.” (Deuteronomy 32:15a ff.). When compared with various like scriptures, it seems that the expression “upon the high places,” here means one of safety and military advantage as Alexander and several others suggest. Nevertheless, man’s high places are never high enough when pride takes over (cf. Deuteronomy 33:29; Amos 4:13; Micah 1:3). ¶ Ibn Ezra suggests: “The high places of the earth] The holy land.” Faussett speaks of the restoration to the land of Israel: “ride upon ... high places] I will make thee supreme lord of the land; the phrase is taken from a conqueror riding in his chariot, and occupying the hills and fastnesses of a country [Vitranga], (Deuteronomy 32:13; Micah 1:3; Habakkuk 3:19). Judea was a land of hills; the idea thus is, ‘I will restore thee to thine own land’ [Calvin]. The parallel words, ‘heritage of Jacob,’ confirm this (Genesis 27:28, 29; 28:13–15).” ¶ These words include a spiritual closeness to God; earthly blessings untold, and eternal life. ¶ And feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “And feed thee on the inheritance of thy father Jacob.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “And I will lift thee up above the high places of the earth, and will feed thee with the inheritance of Jacob thy father.” ¶ Rawlinson has in part, “The world itself was the ‘heritage of Jacob,’ since in him and his seed ‘all the families of the earth were to be blessed’ (Genesis 28:14).” These are the blessings we receive through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. We read: “Among the promises made to Abraham were the following: his posterity would be numerous (see Genesis 17:5–6; Abraham 2:9; 3:14); his seed, or descendants, would receive the gospel and bear the priesthood (see Abraham 2:9); through the ministry of his seed, ‘all the families of the earth [would] be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal’ (Abraham 2:11).”⁴⁵ ¶ For the mouth of the LORD hath spoken [it]. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “For thus it is decreed by the Word of the Lord.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For the mouth of the Lord hath spoken these words.” ¶ Elder Dallin H. Oaks taught, “A Sabbath law that codifies certain acts as forbidden is pharisaical. Here, as much as in any area of gospel observance, ‘the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life’ (2 Corinthians 3:6). In terms of the appropriateness of various Sabbath activities, our actions are sometimes less important than our motives. An action that is wrong with one motive may be right with another. It is the motive that determines whether a Sabbath excursion is a joyride or an errand of compassion. We look to the purpose of the Sabbath to identify the motives by which our Sabbath activities should be regulated. The Sabbath was blessed and sanctified as a holy day, a day of rest (Genesis 2:3; Moses 3:3; Exodus 20:9–11). But this sanctification and commandment of rest was for a purpose—not that man should refrain from work in order to pursue his own pleasure, but that man should serve God and worship him. The prophet Isaiah taught that principle clearly: ‘If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it’ (ISAIAH 58:13–14).”⁴⁶

⁴³ Gene R. Cook, Searching the Scriptures: Bringing Power to Your Personal and Family Study, pp.122–123 (emphasis added).

⁴⁴ Elder D. Todd Christofferson, “Why the Church.” October 2015 General Conference.

FIRST POSTED: 26 September 2016

⁴⁵ Abrahamic Covenant, LDS.org, URL accessed 11 September 2016, <https://www.lds.org/topics/abrahamic-covenant?lang=eng>

⁴⁶ Oaks, Dallin H. Pure in Heart. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988, pp. 26–29.

Isaiah 59

The final words of the prophecy, that a covenant would be established forever and that the Spirit of the Lord would not depart from the mouth of the prophets “henceforth and forever” shows us that at least part of this prophecy is focused on the time of the restoration. Angel Moroni quoted ISAIAH 59:20 and gives us a context posterior to the return of the lost tribes from the north, in the latter days. There also seem to be other portions of the prophecy that point to the latter-days, speak of false doctrines abounding, and of the martyrdom of the Prophet Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum as well as the persecution of the early Saints. Comments made by the Savior in 3 Nephi 16 also seem to be related to this prophecy and speak of the gospel going forth to the nations, and then to Israel as the times of the Gentiles comes to an end. Jenour notes: “... although there is a consolatory promise at the conclusion of the chapter, the general tenor of the prophecy is denunciatory.”

vv. 1–8. Horsley suggests: “... the Prophet [Isaiah] argues that God’s apparent disregard of the complaints of his people, under the sufferings they were to endure, proceeded not from any want of power in Him to give them redress, nor from any mutability in his purposes, but from the enormity of their own corruptions.” Jenour notes that Paul paraphrases much of ISAIAH 59:3–8: “What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin; As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one. Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips: Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: Their feet are swift to shed blood: Destruction and misery are in their ways: And the way of peace have they not known: There is no fear of God before their eyes” (Romans 3:9–18). Jenour adds: “The picture [so quoted] indeed is bad; but is it not a faithful delineation of mankind at large? Are we any better?” This is always a good question to ask. “Lord, is it I?” (Matthew 26:22b). ¶ Now, let us turn to Christ’s words during His visit to the American continent as He began by blessing the Gentiles: “And blessed are the Gentiles, because of their belief in me, in and of the Holy Ghost, which witnesses unto them of me and of the Father” (3 Nephi 16:6). The Savior then contrasts between the belief of the Gentiles and the unbelief of Israel: “Behold, because of their belief in me, saith the Father, and because of the unbelief of you, O house of Israel, in the latter day shall the truth come unto the Gentiles, that the fulness of these things shall be made known unto them” (3 Nephi 16:7). The Lord, next, speaks to warn the unbelieving of the Gentiles: “But wo, saith the Father, unto the unbelieving of the Gentiles—for notwithstanding they have come forth upon the face of this land, and have scattered my people who are of the house of Israel; and my people who are of the house of Israel have been cast out from among them, and have been trodden under feet by them; And because of the mercies of the Father unto the Gentiles, and also the judgments of the Father upon my people who are of the house of Israel, verily, verily, I say unto you, that after all this, and I have caused my people who are of the house of Israel to be smitten, and to be afflicted, and to be slain, and to be cast out from among them, and to become hated by them, and to become a hiss and a byword among them—“ (3 Nephi 16:8–9). The next verse in the Book of Mormon coincides closely with that of ISAIAH 59:3–15), “And thus commandeth the Father that I should say unto you: At that day when the Gentiles shall sin against my gospel, and shall reject the fulness of my gospel, and shall be lifted up in the pride of their hearts above all nations, and above all the people of the whole earth, and shall be filled with all manner of lyings, and of deceits, and of mischiefs, and all manner of hypocrisy, and murders, and priestcrafts, and whoredoms, and of secret abominations; and if they shall do all those things, and shall reject the fulness of my gospel, behold, saith the Father, I will bring the fulness of my gospel from among them” (3 Nephi 16:10, emphasis added). This theme, of the fulfillment of the day of the Gentile, is a strong one in the Book of Mormon. We also encounter it in the Bible as well as in the Joseph Smith History, when the Angel Moroni appeared to young Joseph: “And he further stated that the fulness of the Gentiles was soon to come in” (JS–History 1:41b). We must also quote the very last verse in this chapter in the Book of Mormon, as it fits very well with ISAIAH 59:1, “The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God” (3 Nephi 16:20).

1 ¶ BEHOLD, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:

BEHOLD, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Behold, it is not on account of any deficiency in the power of the Lord that ye are not saved.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “It is not that the hand of the Lord is unable to save.” ¶ Cowles has: “As usual the hand is the symbol of power. Its being ‘shortened’ supposes it unable to reach his remote creatures for their relief.” Alexander has: “The Prophet merely pauses, as it were, for a moment, to exonerate his Master from all blame, before continuing his accusation of the people.” ¶ Elder George Q. Cannon testified: “His eye does not grow dim by the lapse of ages; his ear does not become heavy by the passage of time, neither does his arm become short or feeble. He is the God whom we worship. When we call upon him, though he may be remote from us, dwelling in his holy habitation in the midst of the eternities, the very thoughts of our hearts, the very conceptions of our minds, the feeble whisperings of our voices, they ascend to him, are carried to him, his ear comprehends them; his bowels of compassion are moved towards us his children, his all-piercing eye penetrates eternity, and the glance of his vision reaches us.”¹ ¶ Neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Nor because it is too difficult for Him to hear, that your prayer is not received.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor that his ear is grown dull to hear.” Instead of heavy, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has dull (Lamsa) / hardened (BPE). ¶ Orelli explains: “כָּבֵד, of the senses: to be heavy, sluggish, dull.” That is, in terms of His ability to hear. Shalom Paul suggests: “This expression comes from the medical jargon, as one learns from the Akkadian cognates uznā kabta (The Assyrian Dictionary of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, or CAD K:15), and the variant nešmū kabit (‘heavy or hard of hearing’).” ¶ President Orson Hyde noted: “The fact is, your very life must be suspended on a thread, as it were [if you wish to see your Savior] where no mortal arm can rescue, no earthly power save! When all other things fail, when everything else proves futile and fruitless, then perhaps your Savior and your Redeemer may appear; his arm is not shortened that he cannot save, nor his ear heavy that he cannot hear; and when help on all sides appears to fail, my arm shall save, my power shall rescue, and you shall hear my voice, saith the Lord.”² Elder Mark E. Petersen taught, “We are told that the heavens are sealed as brass over our heads and that there can be no more revelation ... At no time has He sealed the heavens—but, rather, the iniquities of the people have done so. It was the case even in Isaiah’s time, for he gave this explanation: ‘Behold, the Lord’s hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear: But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you.’ When men supplanted revelation with their own wisdom, when they allowed worldly power to eliminate spiritual direction, of course God ceased speaking to them. Of course the heavens closed. But humans were the cause of it. Has He not always promised to answer prayer? Has He not always spoken through prophets when the people listen? And has He not always said that He would do nothing ‘but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets’?”³ ¶ God indeed hears our sincere prayers. All day long His ears are open to hear us and to converse with us, if we will but learn the difference between God hearing our prayers and giving us what we think we want. As we ask God if He has heard our prayers He will fill us with comfort. And if He has heard, can we not be filled with extraordinary joy? If our petitions are not granted, it is because there is a higher purpose in play. But that He hears our prayers, I solemnly testify.

2 But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid [his] face from you, that he will not hear.

✓ or, have made him hide

But your iniquities have separated between you and your God. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But your sins make a separation between you and your God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has divided rather than separated.

Alexander explains: “כִּי אֵם is the usual adversative after a negation, corresponding to the German sondern, which has no distinct equivalent in English.” Regarding the word separated [מִבְדִּילִים root בָּדַל] Kay notes: “In Exodus 26:33 the word is used in reference to the veil before the Ark of the Covenant, which was drawn aside only once a year, and that for a short time; on the day of Atonement.” Barnes similarly has: “The word used here (כָּל) conveys the idea of division, usually by a curtain or a wall (Exodus 26:33; Ezekiel 42:20). Thus the ‘firmament’ (רָקִיעַ, ‘expanse’) is said to have ‘divided’ or ‘separated’ (מִבְדִּיל) the waters from the waters (Genesis 1:6).” So, here, iniquities had separated men from God. Barnes quotes Jeremiah, “Thou hast covered thyself with a cloud, that our prayer should not pass through” (Lamentations 3:44). ¶ John Gill says of his own Church denomination: “Like a partition wall dividing between them, so that they enjoy no communion with him in his worship and ordinances; which is greatly the case of the reformed churches: they profess the true God, and the worship of him, and do [only] attend the outward ordinances of it; but this is done in such a cold formal way, and such sins and wickedness are perpetrated and connived at, that the Lord does not grant his gracious presence to them, but stands at a distance from them.” Also see ISAIAH 29:13, Matthew 15:8 and Joseph Smith—History 1: 19. ¶ Most were horrified at the very idea of revelation at the time of the Prophet Joseph Smith and the restoration of the Gospel. They indeed had pronounced God as incapable of speaking or hearing. ¶ And your sins have hid [his] face from you, that he will not hear. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And your sins have caused Him to take away the favour of His Shekinah from you, not to receive your prayer.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And on account of your sins he hath turned away his face from you that he may not exercise compassion.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “Literally, your sins have caused his face to be hidden from you.” ¶ Elder Mark E. Peterson observed: “Lack of communication between human beings is responsible for much of the distress in the world. But when communication breaks down between God and man, even worse situations arise.”⁴ Such was the state of mankind before the light shone forth upon the boy Prophet in that 1820 spring day in the Sacred Grove.

¹ Elder George Q. Cannon, Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 5 October 1879. “Unchangeableness of God.” JD 21:73b.

² President Orson Hyde, General Conference, Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 October 1853, “Overcoming.” JD 1:125.

³ Petersen, Mark E. The Way to Peace. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1969, pp. 277–278.

3 For your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness.

For your hands are defiled with blood. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “For your hands are associated with innocent blood.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For your hands are polluted with blood.” ¶ Rawlinson commented: “On the ‘innocent blood’ shed by the Jews of the later Judæan kingdom, see 2 Kings 21:6, 16; 24:4; 25:25; 2 Chronicles 24:21; 28:3; 33:6; 36:16, etc.) It consisted in (1) sacrifices of children to Moloch; (2) persecution of prophets; and (3) judicial murders, either actual (like that of Naboth, in Israel) or virtual, i.e. such perversion of justice as produced general poverty and misery, and tended to shorten men’s lives.” Cheyne leaning on Weir has: “Your hands] ‘The very hands ye stretch out in prayer, ISAIAH 1:15’ (Dr. Weir).” ¶ President Gordon B. Hinckley explained: “The burden of their message [i.e., of the prophets] was a denunciation of wickedness. And the peril of those times was not peculiar to the Old World. The Book of Mormon documents that in the Western Hemisphere the armies of the Jaredites fought to the death. The Nephites and the Lamanites also fought until thousands had died and Moroni was forced to wander alone for the safety of his own life. His great and final plea, directed toward those of our day, was a call to righteousness.”⁵ Jenour has: “Your hands are defiled with blood &c.] Murder, one evil act of the hands, is put for evil actions generally, because it is the worst that can be done. And so with the rest. The reader will observe that most of the members of the body are referred to [in these verses].” ¶ Whatever other applications that these verses may have, I also believe they apply to those mobs who persecuted the Saints and spilled their innocent blood. ¶ And your fingers with iniquity. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And your fingers with sins.” Cowles notes: “... the prophet represents every physical organ of their body—hands, fingers, lips and tongue—as actively engaged in sinning as if to show that every power of their being was pressed to its utmost capacity of wrong doing.” These same organs, on the other hand, can be used to avoid evil and embrace all that is good. ¶ Gill says: “From a general charge, the prophet proceeds to a particular enumeration of sins they were guilty of; and idolatry not being mentioned, as Jerome observes, shows that the prophecy belongs to other times than Isaiah’s, when that sin greatly prevailed. He begins the account with the sin of shedding blood; the blood of innocents, as the Targum; designing either the sin of murder, now frequently committed in Christian nations; or wars between Christian princes, by means of which much blood is shed; or persecutions of Christian brethren, by casting them into prisons, which have issued in their death; and at least want of brotherly love, or, the hatred of brethren, which is called murder (1John 3:15) ...”

¶ Hands and fingers were also used to write calumny and incite the mobs against the Saints. ¶ Your lips have spoken lies. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Your lips have spoken iniquity.” ¶ Luther speaks of it as the teaching of false doctrine and accusing those who have the truth of being false. Gill likewise suggests: "... or 'falsehood' (שקר 'falsitatem,' Montanus, Cocceius; 'falsum.' Junius & Tremellius, Piscator); that is, false doctrines, so called because contrary to the word of truth, and which deceive men." ¶ Once again, lips and mouths were used to speak untruths against the early Church and even today, this effort has multiplied and has not ceased. According to Oliver Cowdery, Angel Moroni shared the following with the young Prophet Joseph Smith on the instance of his first visit to the spot where the Book of Mormon had been buried: "[Moroni instructed the Prophet and taught him that after the Gospel was restored and the Church founded] Then will persecution rage more and more; for the iniquities of men shall be revealed, and those who are not built upon the rock will seek to overthrow this Church; but it will increase the more opposed, and spread farther and farther, increasing in knowledge till the saints shall be sanctified and receive an inheritance where the glory of God shall rest upon them."⁶ ¶ Your tongue hath muttered perverseness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "deceit" for perverseness. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "And your tongue uttereth iniquity." In the Talmud (T. Bab. Sabbat. fol. 139. 1) these are explained of the several sorts of men in a court of judicature; the 'hands' of the judges; the 'fingers' of, the Scribes; the 'lips' of advocates and solicitors; and the 'tongue' of adversaries, or the contending parties." ¶ Gill explains: "That which is a perversion of the Gospel of Christ, and of the souls of men; what is contrary to the sacred Scriptures, the standard of faith and practice, and that premeditated, as the word {תהנה, μελετα, LXX (Ⲯ)} signifies; done with design, and on purpose: the abounding of errors and heresies in the present day, openly taught and divulged, to the ruin of souls, seems here to be pointed at." ¶ This is the same idea of the teaching of false doctrines. ¶ The Lord sees the wickedness of those who persecuted His restored Church: "Wo unto all those that discomfort my people, and drive, and murder, and testify against them, saith the Lord of Hosts; a generation of vipers shall not escape the damnation of hell" (D&C 121:23).

⁵ President Gordon B. Hinckley, “The Dawning of a Brighter Day,” April 1981 General Conference.

⁴ Elder Mark E. Petersen, “Another Prophet Now Has Come!” October 1972 General Conference.

4 None calleth for justice, nor [any] pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.

⁶ Brigham H. Roberts, New Witness for God, Volume II, p. 65. Special thanks to Monte S. Nyman, Great are the Words of Isaiah, pp.225–226, who quotes these words from Oliver Cowdery, MA, October 1835, p. 199.

None calleth for justice. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "There is none that truly prayeth." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "None speaketh just things." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "There is none that calleth upon justice." ¶ Cowles has: "They do not administer law in honesty and faithfulness." Alexander notes: "Kimhi makes the verb [קרא] a simple passive, meaning to be tried or judged—'no one is fairly tried.'" Barnes says: "There is a love of litigation; a desire to take all the advantage which the law can give; a desire to appeal to the law, not for the sake of having strict justice done, but for the sake of doing injury to others, and to take some undue advantage." ¶ How many times was Joseph Smith taken to court on trumped up charges? ¶ Nor [any] pleadeth for truth: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Nor any that pleadeth for faithfulness." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Nor is there any just judgment." Instead of pleadeth for truth, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has judges faithfully. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Neither is there any one that judgeth truly." ¶ Gill says, "For the truth of the Gospel." Oswalt suggests, "... one should not overlook Pieper's alternate interpretation. He points out the important connections with ISAIAH 58, where the people call on God, but not in righteousness (v. 2), where they seek justice from God while practicing injustice (vv. 2–4). Thus he argues that this verse is another indictment of religion that is not backed up by action." Luther says, "To judge means to teach. Judgment is the office of teaching and preaching. Then it is also a discerning of the spirit, because they are unable to distinguish between true and false." ¶ They trust in vanity. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "They trusted in vanities." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "But they trust in a mere nothing." ¶ Horsley has: "Vanity and idle speech may denote the sophisms of irreligious philosophy" regardless of where it comes from. ¶ And speak lies. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "And they speak lies." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "And speak vanities." ¶ The philosophies of the world over God's truths. ¶ They conceive mischief. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "They hasten." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Because they hatch mischief." Instead of mischief, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has iniquity (Lamsa) / deceit (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "They have conceived labour." ¶ Wade notes: "they conceive mischief, etc. The phrase recurs in Job 15:35: cf. also Psalm 7:14." Gill explains: "They 'conceive' and contrive 'mischief' in their minds against those that differ in doctrine and practice from them: 'and bring forth iniquity': do that which is criminal and sinful, by words and actions, by calumnies and reproaches, by violence and persecution." ¶ And bring forth iniquity. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And bring forth words of violence out of their heart." The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, "Therefore they bring forth iniquity." Instead of iniquity, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has grief (Lamsa) / pain (BPE). The persecution against the Saints caused untold pain and suffering, murder and rapine.

5 They hatch cockatrice' eggs, and weave the spider's web: he that eateth of their eggs dieth, and that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper. ✓ ✓

✓ or, adders':

✓ ✓ or, sprinkled is as if there brake out a viper

They hatch cockatrice' eggs. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Behold, they hatch as it were eggs of a basilisk." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "They hatched the eggs of asps." The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, as in the margin ||, adders. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "They have broken the eggs of asps." ¶ Shalom Paul suggests: "They hatch adder's eggs] a metaphor for conceiving evil plans." Cowles has: "One figure grows out of another. Having begun with the figure of 'conceiving mischief' and 'bringing forth iniquity,' he next thinks of their eggs as hatching out into adders—the most venomous of reptiles; or as death to the eater; or if crushed under foot, lo, a viper springs to life. Next, their plots are like the spider's woven web, which however in the outcomes of his figure, is not so much a snare to catch insects as a garment under which to conceal their malicious purposes, which yet is an abortive⁷ endeavor." Jenour suggests: "The eggs of the basilisk, mean the thoughts, principles, and doctrines, of the persons spoken of, because these, like eggs, are the embryos of actions; for by brooding, as it were, upon a certain sort or train of thoughts, actions are at length produced." Keith explains: "The expression 'they hatch cockatrice' eggs,' implies that their purposes against each other were mischievous and dangerous as serpents are; and that they nurtured these carefully until put in execution, as the serpent sits upon its eggs." McFadyen has: "The basilisks' eggs, symbolic of the schemes hatched by the wicked, are fatal alike to those who eat them (cherish them), and to those who attempt to crush them. As this figure brings out the deadly nature of those schemes, the other figure of the spider's web, which is amplified in ISAIAH 59:6, brings out their futility." Wordsworth interestingly says of the cockatrice and the spider, respectively: "The one, the offspring of malice; the other, of human pride and intellectual presumption." Kay notes: "John Baptist, when preaching repentance, applied the term 'brood of vipers,' to the [hypocrites] (Matthew 3:7)." Luther suggests, "When they have brooded for a long time, they hatch for themselves disciples like them, full of malice and the most poisonous vileness. The more showy they are in their hypocrisy, the viler and worse they are." Gill has: "Invent false doctrines according to their own fancies, which may seem fair and plausible, but are poisonous and pernicious." This is a description of full apostasy, where truly the darkness was not able to comprehend the light (John 1:5). ¶ And weave the spider's web: The Targum (ⲧ) has, "They are like the threads which the spiders weave." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And are weaving a spider's web." Birks explains: "The basilisk, a venomous serpent, and the spider, a venomous insect, are a double emblem for these plans of iniquity, hatched or woven with pains and care, only to ensnare and destroy." ¶ He that eateth of their eggs dieth. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And he who was about to eat some of their eggs." ¶ Jenour has: "Now the eggs of the basilisk, it is clear, were considered as poisonous, causing death to those who eat them. So then would their principles and doctrines lead to the eternal ruin of those who imbibed them." Gill explains: "As a man that eats of cockatrice eggs dies immediately, being rank poison; so he that approves of false doctrines, receives them, and feeds upon them, dies spiritually." ¶ And that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "And when they are hatched, they bring forth the flying serpents." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Upon breaking one that was hatched found therein a viper." The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, "And those which hatch out will be found to be vipers." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "And that which is brought out, shall be hatched into a basilisk." ¶ All of these actions were intended to do harm to the Saints.

6 Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works [are] works of iniquity, and the act of violence [is] in their hands.

Their webs shall not become garments. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Behold, like a spider's web." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Their web will not serve for a mantle." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Their webs shall not be for clothing." ¶ Birks well explains: "The spider's web is now made to yield a further lesson. These subtle schemes, whereby they ensnare and destroy others, shall be worthless to themselves, as the spider's web is too flimsy to form a garment." Wordsworth similarly has: "Their webs shall not become garments] The ingenious schemes and subtle theories, which they spin, will be as vain as spiders' webs (see Job 8:14)." ¶ Neither shall they cover themselves with their works: The Targum (ⲧ) has, "With which no one can be covered." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Nor can they clothe themselves with their works." ¶ Fausset suggests: "The artificial self-deceiving sophisms of human philosophy (1 Timothy 6:5; 2 Timothy 2:16, 23).” Barnes has: “The spider’s web is unfit for clothing; and the idea here is, that their works are as unfit to secure salvation as the attenuated web of a spider is for raiment. The sense is, says Vitringa, that their artificial sophisms avail nothing in producing true wisdom, piety, virtue, and religion, or the true righteousness and salvation of people, but are airy speculations. The works of the self-righteous and the wicked; their vain formality, their false opinions, their subtle reasonings, and their traditions, are like the web of the spider. They bide nothing, they answer none of the purposes of a garment of salvation.” ¶ Their works [are] works of iniquity, and the act of violence [is] in their hands. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Their works are the works of violence, and the work of a lie is in their hands.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “For their works are works of iniquity.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Their works are unprofitable works, and the work of iniquity is in their hands.” ¶ Henderson, of ISAIAH 59:5–6 explains: “The figures here employed are simple, but forcibly expressive of the fruitlessness of all ungodly plans, and the certainty, that, sooner or later, they will recoil on the head of their inventors.” Gill has: “Persecuting such that preach and profess the contrary doctrine.”

⁷ Fruitless or unsuccessful (Webster). In other words, they cannot conceal their wickedness.

7 Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts [are] thoughts of iniquity; wasting and destruction ✓ [are] in their paths.

✓ breaking

Their feet run to evil. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Their feet run to do that which is evil.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Their feet are running to evil.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Their feet run to evil.” ¶ Wordsworth and others mention that Paul quoted this verse: “Their feet are swift to shed blood” (Romans 3:15). Luther says, “Under the guise of religion they thirst for the blood of the righteous all day long ... The hypocrites hurry on the task of destruction and to the killing of the righteous ... They run, that is, they are most eager to do harm. I, Martin Luther, have been burned by them.⁸ I am familiar with those who crave and thirst for my blood under the guise of doing homage to God. The prophet had to suffer this too.” Wade notes: “Cf. Proverbs 1:16, 24:2.” Cowles has: “‘Running’ and ‘making haste’ even to murder the innocent, testify to their eagerness in sinning and to their absolute, reckless committal to unscrupulous crime.” Barnes explains: “In accordance with the design of the prophet to show the entireness of their depravity, he states that all their members were employed in doing evil ... The words ‘run,’ and ‘make haste,’ are designed to intimate the intensity of their purpose to do wrong. They did not walk slowly; they did not even take time to deliberate; but such was their desire of wrong-doing, that they hastened to execute their plans of evil. People usually walk slowly and with a great deal of deliberation when any good is to be done; they walk rapidly, or they run with haste and alacrity when evil is to be accomplished.” ¶ Certainly, they ran up the stairs in Carthage to do their bloody deed. The antithesis is found in the Book of Mormon, “And it came to pass that when Moroni had proclaimed these words, behold, the people came running together with their armor girded about their loins, rending their garments in token, or as a covenant, that they would not forsake the Lord their God; or, in other words, if they should transgress the commandments of God, or fall into transgression, and be ashamed to take upon them the name of Christ, the Lord should rend them even as they had rent their garments” (Alma 46:21). Shalom Paul points us to Proverbs where we find, “These six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren” (Proverbs 6:16–19). ¶ And they make haste to shed innocent blood: The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “They are swift to shed blood.” See Haun’s Mill Massacre, Carthage jail and Calvary. ¶ Their thoughts [are] thoughts of iniquity. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “violence” rather than iniquity. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Their thoughts are unprofitable thoughts.” Alexander has: “The word translated thoughts [מַחְשְׁבוֹת], has here and elsewhere the specific sense of purposes, contrivances, devices, which last Lowth employs as an equivalent.” Alma explains that we may be: “raised to endless happiness to inherit the kingdom of God, or to endless misery to inherit the kingdom of the devil, the one on one hand, the other on the other—The one raised to happiness according to his desires of happiness, or good according to his desires of good; and the other to evil according to his desires of evil; for as he has desired to do evil all the day long even so shall he have his reward of evil when the night cometh” (Alma 41:4b–5). King Benjamin taught: “But this much I can tell you, that if ye do not watch yourselves, and your thoughts, and your words, and your deeds, and observe the commandments of God, and continue in the faith of what ye have heard concerning the coming of our Lord, even unto the end of your lives, ye must perish. And now, O man, remember, and perish not” (Mosiah 4:30). ¶ Wasting and destruction [are] in their paths. The Targum (Ⲯ)

⁸ Martin Luther was born in 1483 and died of illness in 1546. But many other of the reformers were, indeed, burned for their beliefs.

has, “plunder” rather than wasting. The LXX (⚡) reads, “Destruction and misery are in their ways.” Instead of wasting, the Peshitta (⚡) has plunder. Rabbi Ibn Ezra says, “The second half of the verse contains the same idea as the first half.” ¶ Gill has: “They waste and destroy all they meet with in their ways, their fellow creatures and their substance; and the ways they walk in lead to ruin and destruction, which will be their portion for evermore.”

8 The way of peace they know not; and [there is] no judgment in their goings: they have made them crooked paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.

✓ or, right

The way of peace they know not; and [there is] no judgment in their goings: The Targum (⚡) has, “The way of peace they know not; and there is not justice in their ways.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “And the path of peace they do not know, nor is there any judgment in their ways.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has steps instead of goings. ¶ Oswalt well says, “Whatever else the world may offer us, it can never offer us peace.” Birks has: “‘The way of peace’ is the way of holiness.” Gill explains: “[There is] no justice in their actions, in their dealings with men; no judgment in their religious duties, which are done without any regard to the divine rule, or without being able to give a reason for them; they have no judgment in matters of doctrine or worship; they have no discerning of true and false doctrines, and between that which is spiritual and superstitious in worship; they have no knowledge of the word of God, which should be their guide both in faith and practice.” ¶ Elder John Taylor contrasted between those who truly love the Lord and others: “There is a very material difference between associating with those that have the fear of God before their eyes, whose first object is their own salvation, the salvation of their progenitors and posterity, and the building up of the kingdom of God, and associating with those who ‘have not God in all their thoughts,’ who regard him not in all their transactions, but who are living ‘without God and without hope in the world,’ whose hearts—and I am sorry to say it, but yet it is true—whose hearts are ‘full of cursing and bitterness,’ who roll sin under their tongues as a sweet morsel, ‘whose feet are swift to shed blood,’ and ‘the way of peace,’ as the Prophet hath said, ‘they have not known.’” ¶ They have made them crooked paths: The Targum (⚡) has, “They have perverted their ways.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “For the paths which they travel are crooked.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Their paths are become crooked to them.” ¶ Cheyne has: “Note the four words for ‘way’ in this and the preceding verse, all found in the Book of Proverbs. In ISAIAH 59:7 we have the laboriously constructed ‘highway’: in ISAIAH 59:8, first, the most general word for ‘way,’ next, the waggon-tracks, and lastly, the paths made by the constant treading of wayfarers ... Crooked] reminds us of Proverbs 10:9, 28:18, 2:15.” Birks explains: “The last figure is that of a tortuous or winding footpath.” Such routes move people away from the straight and narrow path of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Savior taught: “Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it” (Matthew 7:13–14). Cowles has: “They have made crooked paths, &c.] Every deviation from the divine law, in the language of scripture, is a crooked path. God has in his word pointed out a direct way to eternal life, and we must not depart from it to follow courses of our own.” Gill says: “they have devised paths and modes of worship of their own, in which they walk, and which they observe, that are not according to the rule of the word; but deviate from it.” ¶ Whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace. The LXX (⚡) reads, “And peace they do not know.” Instead of goeth, the Peshitta (⚡) has walks. The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Every one that treadeth in them, knoweth no peace.” ¶ Peace, true peace, can only be found through discipleship to our Lord Jesus Christ.

vv. 9–15. These words show the state of affairs at the time when the Gospel was restored to the earth, at the time the Father and the Son appeared to the boy Prophet.

9 ¶ Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us: we wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, [but] we walk in darkness.

Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us: The Targum (⚡) has, “Therefore is judgment removed far from us, and the least righteousness does not meet us.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “Therefore judgment is far from them, and saving mercy shall not overtake them.” ¶ Right before the latter-day restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ there were many honest individuals who realized that the Gospel and the authority to act in God’s name was not yet present in the world. They looked forward to the day when the Gospel, in its plainness, would be restored. ¶ We wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, [but] we walk in darkness. The LXX (⚡) reads, “When they were waiting for light, darkness came upon them, expecting a blaze of light they walked in obscurity.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “We looked for light, and behold darkness: brightness, and we have walked in the dark.” ¶ Cowles has: “‘Light’ is the favorite Hebrew emblem of happiness and prosperity.” And that happiness and prosperity came because the windows of heaven were opened to pour out light and truth, revelation from God, which was heeded by the people. Darkness and obscurity are the very opposite. Obscurity describes apostasy while light the restoration of the Gospel. Horsley suggests: “Rather, ‘in the midst of brightness we walk in obscurity.’ For they had eyes, and yet they saw not; light came into the world, but they loved darkness rather than light.”

10 We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if [we had] no eyes: we stumble at noonday as in the night; [we are] in desolate places as dead [men].

We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if [we had] no eyes. The Targum (T) has, for the second half, “We stumble at noonday as those who stumble in the dark; it is shut up before us, as the graves are shut up before the dead.” The LXX (G) reads, “They shall grope like blind men for a wall and feel about like men who have no eyes, and fall at mid-day as at midnight.” For the last clause, the Peshitta (S) has, “We groan as those who are near death.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the second half, “We have stumbled at noonday as in darkness, we are in dark places as dead men.” Wade, “at noonday. i.e. at a time when relief might be fully expected, their calamitous condition is unredressed.” Wordsworth has: “We grope along the wall to guide us.” Rawlinson also, “We grope for the wall] rather, we grope along the wall.” ¶ Wade shows the connection to a verse in Rain in Due Season “cf. Deuteronomy 28:29.” Kay likewise has: “We grope for] Or, We grope as blind men along the wall (Deuteronomy 28:29⁹; Job 5:14); seeking in vain for an exit from prison; or, for the entrance into the city of peace (cp. Genesis 19:11).” Rabbi Rosenberg uses “We tap a wall like blind men” rather than grobe. Fausset suggests: “There is no relaxation of our evils; at the time when we might look for the noon of relief, there is still the night of our calamity.” Gill says: “the eyes of their reason and understanding; but which either were not opened, or they made no use of them in searching the Scriptures, to come at the light and knowledge of divine things; and therefore only at most groped after them by the dim light of nature, if thereby they might find them.” These comments about blind men are a description of the terrible apostasy that would fill the earth. ¶ Oswalt reminds us that in ISAIAH 6, the prophet had accused his hearers of blindness, “And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not” (ISAIAH 6:9). Also, that true vision would have to be reserved for a latter day in the future. Oswalt also quoted ISAIAH 8:16-17 about sealing the testimony for a later date. ¶ Elder James E. Talmage well said: “Regarded from a spiritual point of view we have only to remember how commonly sin is contemplated in Scripture as a moral blindness (Deuteronomy 28:29; ISAIAH 59:10; Job 12:25; Zephaniah 1:17), and deliverance from sin as a removal of this blindness (ISAIAH 6:9, 10; 43:8; Ephesians 1:18; Matthew. 15:14); and we shall at once perceive how fit it was that He who was the ‘light of the world’ should often accomplish works which symbolized so well that higher work which He came into the world to accomplish.”¹⁰ President Joseph Fielding Smith said, “Peter declared: ‘Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.’ And there is no sound reason that can be given why the Lord cannot speak today through the agency of holy men, and give commandment to his children. The only reason that would preclude such revelation coming now is that his children refuse to hear his voice, or the voice of his servants. The words of Isaiah are just as true today as they were seven hundred years before the birth of Christ, when he said: ‘Behold the Lord’s hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you that he will not hear ... We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes: we stumble at noonday as in the night; we are in desolate places as dead men’ (ISAIAH 59:1–2, 10). Come, let us reason together. In the midst of the religious confusion; when there are hundreds of conflicting doctrines; when men dispute over the meaning of every principle of eternal truth; when the pulpits are filled with disagreement; when modern revisions of the Bible, miscalled translations, have flooded the world with changed interpretations; when ordinances are changed and strange customs introduced in the religious worship, should we not seek the coming of a messenger from the presence of the Lord to set this babel of strife and disunity in order? ... Never in the history of the world has there been more confusion and disagreement among religious professors than today.

⁹ One of the tragedies predicted if Israel would be disobedient, see Rain in Due Season.

¹⁰ James E. Talmage, Jesus the Christ: A Study of the Messiah and His Mission According to Holy Scriptures Both Ancient and Modern, pp.260, 302

How else will this confusion which holds the religious world bound so helplessly in dispute and disagreement ever be brought to a unity in the pure love of God but by new revelation?"¹¹ Elder Wilford Woodruff manifested: "Until the light [of the restored Gospel] came, we were groveling in the dark, in a great measure. Though we might be honest, and we might be actuated by the best and holiest feelings, yet, until the fulness of the Gospel was revealed, the world were like the blind groping for the wall. We had no Apostles—no Prophets; we had no inspired men to rise up and tell us what to do to be saved; and we had to go through with all that trouble, misery, and darkness to which the children of men are subject while living under false doctrines, false traditions, and false teachers."¹²

¶ President George A. Smith warned against personal apostasy: "The facts are, brethren, that the work of the Lord does not depend upon us. If we go into darkness, if we let our hearts be filled with covetousness or corruption, or give way to licentiousness, drunkenness, Sabbath breaking, unbelief, or any crime that corrodes our system or organization, so that our tabernacles become unfit for the holy Spirit to dwell in, it will withdraw from us, and the light that is in us becomes darkened, and that darkness is so great that we grope as a blind man and wander hither and thither, and those who suffer themselves to be led by these blind men fall into the ditch with them, but the work rolls right along."¹³ Of those who leave the light and the spirit behind, the Lord warned: "Behold, ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks, to persecute the saints, and to fight against God" (D&C 121:38).

¶ Elder Orson Pratt testified of the importance and wonder of living by the Spirit: "The great difficulty with me, and I presume it is also the experience of almost every man and woman in the Church of the living God, is, we are not so faithful as some of the servants of God have been in former days. Some of them were so faithful that they lived constantly in the light of revelation. Their minds were opened to it, and scarcely a thing could transpire but what they understood it beforehand. They did not need the news or intelligence to be brought to them from a distance, but there was a spirit within them and the candle of the Lord gave that spirit understanding in regard to things that were transpiring thousands of miles distant. They lived for this; they walked before the Lord so faithfully that they were entitled to know, not only things that were present with and that would benefit themselves and the people among whom they dwelt, but also things in the future—ages and ages to come were opened up to their minds, and their minds comprehended them by permitting this candle of the Lord to shine upon and illuminate them. It is my most earnest desire to live so as to discern under every condition and circumstance in life precisely what would be most pleasing in the sight of God for me to do, and when I comprehend this I can act as a person who does not grope in the dark, like the blind man who gropes for the wall; but if I live for it, the path in which I should walk will be plain, the Spirit of God being as it were a lamp to my feet, and my guide and instructor by day and by night. Do you not desire Latter-day Saints to be instructed in this way? Every honest-hearted person will answer yes. Everyone who hungers and thirsts after righteousness, and who desires eternal life will acknowledge that he does desire to be thus guided and led."¹⁴ ¶ We stumble at noonday as in the night; [we are] in desolate places as dead [men]. The idea is that apostates stumble in their own darkness while everyone around them can see perfectly well. The antithesis is the restoration of the Gospel and the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon in the last days. When the Angel Moroni visited the boy Prophet, he reported: "While I was thus in the act of calling upon God, I discovered a light appearing in my room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noonday, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside, standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor" (JS—History 1:30).

11 We roar all like bears, and mourn sore like doves: we look for judgment, but [there is] none; for salvation, [but] it is far off from us.

We roar all like bears, and mourn sore like doves: The Targum (ⲧ) has, "We all roar (literally, according to the Royal Polyglot, 'we gnash with our teeth') like bears by reason of our enemies, who are gathered against us, and mourn like doves." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "When dying they will groan like a bear and mourn like a dove." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "We shall roar all of us like bears, and shall lament as mournful doves." ¶ Calvin says: "He describes two classes of those who cannot silently endure their afflictions without making them known by external signs; for some howl fiercely, and others moan [ⲙⲟⲁⲛ] like doves. This latter metaphor was employed by him in describing the groans [ⲙⲟⲁⲛⲉⲥ] of ¹¹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Restoration of All Things. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1973, pp. 70–71.

¹² Elder Wilford Woodruff, "Blessings of the Saints." Delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 27 December 1857. JD 6:137. Also see JD 9:224b.

¹³ President George A. Smith, Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 6 October 1874. JD 17:196.

¹⁴ Elder Orson Pratt, "Spirit of Light and Truth," delivered in the 13th Ward Assembly Rooms, 24 November 1872. JD 13:233.

Hezekiah (ISAIAH 38:14).” Cheyne has: “Like bears ... like doves] The ‘dove’ is a well-known symbol of lamentation (comp. ISAIAH 38:14, Ezekiel 7:16, Nahum 2:7) ... but no other Biblical writer, speak of the bear as ‘groaning’ (gemere, gemitus).” Alexander says: “The Latin poets also speak of the voice of bears and doves as a gemitus or groaning.” Rabbi Ibn Ezra has: “We roar, etc. We cry, but nobody comes to our assistance, nobody comes to do us justice.” Who are those lamenting here? The second part of this verse gives us a clue: those who look for judgment and salvation. Perhaps it is written of the early Saints who were so unfairly treated at every turn. See, for instance the mourning experienced by Joseph Smith while he was falsely imprisoned in Liberty Jail: “O GOD, where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place? How long shall thy hand be stayed, and thine eye, yea thy pure eye, behold from the eternal heavens the wrongs of thy people and of thy servants, and thine ear be penetrated with their cries? Yea, O Lord, how long shall they suffer these wrongs and unlawful oppressions, before thine heart shall be softened toward them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion toward them? O Lord God Almighty, maker of heaven, earth, and seas, and of all things that in them are, and who controllest and subjectest the devil, and the dark and benighted dominion of Sheol—stretch forth thy hand; let thine eye pierce; let thy pavilion be taken up; let thy hiding place no longer be covered; let thine ear be inclined; let thine heart be softened, and thy bowels moved with compassion toward us. Let thine anger be kindled against our enemies; and, in the fury of thine heart, with thy sword avenge us of our wrongs. Remember thy suffering saints, O our God; and thy servants will rejoice in thy name forever” (D&C 121:1–6). ¶ We look for judgment, but [there is] none. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “hoped” rather than look. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And at their departing say, ‘We waited for judgment and there is none.’” In the same section of Doctrine and Covenants that we just quoted above, the Savior warned against those who had so persecuted the Saints: “And they who do charge thee with transgression, their hope shall be blasted, and their prospects shall melt away as the hoar frost melteth before the burning rays of the rising sun ... Also because their hearts are corrupted, and the things which they are willing to bring upon others, and love to have others suffer, may come upon themselves to the very uttermost ... and their hopes may be cut off; And not many years hence, that they and their posterity shall be swept from under heaven [allusion, among other things, to the Civil War], saith God, that not one of them is left to stand by the wall. Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them” (D&C 121:11, 13, 14b–16, emphasis added). The injustice would not be remedied in a moment, but in the Lord’s time. Certainly, those who persecuted the Saints did not know the way of justice and salvation, and their feet run to do iniquity and hands to evil. Also, note especially, 121:23, which we quoted in relation to ISAIAH 59:3. ¶ For salvation, [but] it is far off from us. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For salvation, but it is far removed from us.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And as for safety, it is far from us.” ¶ These thoughts seem to take us back to the questions asked by the Prophet Joseph Smith in Liberty Jail, regarding of the time when their rights would be protected and justice carried out.

12 For our transgressions are multiplied before thee, and our sins testify against us: for our transgressions [are] with us; and [as for] our iniquities, we know them;

In ISAIAH 59:12 we might have a parenthetical comment made by those who have persecuted the Saints and now find themselves in the Spirit Prison feeling the full weight of their hateful actions. ¶ For our transgressions are multiplied before thee. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For our manifold iniquity is before thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has iniquities instead of transgressions. ¶ Kay notes regarding all of the פְּשָׁעֵיכֶם, חַטָּאתֶם, עֲוֹנוֹת: “The confession attains its fulness; embodying the three terms, which were used by the high priest on the Day of Atonement (Leviticus 16:21); ‘transgressions ... sins ... iniquities.’ They have now exhibited the true ‘affliction of soul’ and are fit objects of the Redeemer’s pity [ISAIAH 59:20].” Westermann notes: “The accumulation of words for ‘sin’ is very noticeable: ‘few chapters in the Bible are so rich and diverse in their vocabulary of sin (cf. Psalm 51)’ (Muilenburg).” ¶ Gill says: “Not only an increase of immorality among the people in common, but among professors of religion.” It is these professors of religion who led the mobs against the Saints of the Most High God. ¶ And our sins testify against us: The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And our sins are risen up against us.” These words may be applied to the mobs that stole the land from the Saints in Missouri and elsewhere, and stained their hands with the blood of the Saints. ¶ For our transgressions [are] with us. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For our iniquities are revealed unto us.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For our iniquities are in us.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “For our wicked doings are with us.” ¶ McFadyen has: “It is interesting to find apostasy, turning away from our God, which in ISAIAH 57 took the form of idolatry, here expressed in terms of morality.” Once again, those who have harmed the Saints will have to face the awful torment for having done so. Returning to D&C 121 we have: “Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them. But those who cry transgression do it because they are the servants of sin, and are the children of disobedience themselves. And those who swear falsely against my servants, that they might bring them into bondage and death—Wo unto them; because they have offended my little ones they shall be severed from the ordinances of mine house. Their basket shall not be full, their houses and their barns shall perish, and they themselves shall be despised by those that flattered them. They shall not have right to the priesthood, nor their posterity after them from generation to generation. It had been better for them that a millstone had been hanged about their necks, and they drowned in the depth of the sea” (D&C 121:16–22). ¶ And [as for] our iniquities, we know them. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And we know our transgressions.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And we have known our iniquities.” Barnes has: “We recognize them as our sins, and we cannot conceal from ourselves the fact that we are transgressors.” And here let us quote the next verses in D&C 121: “Wo unto all those that discomfort my people, and drive, and murder, and testify against them, saith the Lord of Hosts; a generation of vipers shall not escape the damnation of hell. Behold, mine eyes see and know all their works, and I have in reserve a swift judgment in the season thereof, for them all; For there is a time appointed for every man, according as his works shall be” (D&C 121:23–25).

13 In transgressing and lying against the LORD, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering from the heart words of falsehood.

In transgressing and lying against the LORD, and departing away from our God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “We have rebelled, and acted falsely against the Word of the Lord; we have turned backward¹⁵ from following after the worship of our God.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “We have sinned: we have lied, and turned back from following our God.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “In sinning and lying against the Lord: and we have turned away so that we went not after our God.” ¶ Again we see the description of the deepest of apostasies. Cowles has: “The original [Hebrew] of ISAIAH 59:13 is a model of compact and forcible description which can scarcely be transferred to our language.” Leeson translates it as: “We transgressed and denied the Lord, and departed away from our God; we spoke oppression and revolt, conceived and brought forth in our heart words of falsehood.” LITV renders it: “transgressing and lying against Jehovah, and backsliding from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and murmuring words of falsehood from the heart.” Horsley offers: “Apostasy and treachery towards Jehovah, A turning away from following our God, Deceiving speech and revolt: Words of falsehood have been conceived and studied in the heart” (emphasis added). ¶ Cheyne has: “A threefold description of apostasy opens the verse.—Treason (lit., ‘diruptio’ sc. foederis), unfaithfulness (lit., ‘belying,’ i.e., atheism, Jeremiah 5:12), and drawing back (i.e., the overt act of apostasy). Evidently the prophet refers to a paganising movement of special intensity ...” Gill says: “They transgress the doctrine of Christ.” Once again, still speaking of those who persecuted the Prophet Joseph Smith and the Saints. ¶ Speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering from the heart words of falsehood. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “We have spoken falsehood and apostasy, hastening and bringing forth from their hearts lying words.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “We have spoken things unjust, and have been disobedient; we have conceived and meditated from our heart lying words” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “But spoke calumny and transgression: we have conceived, and uttered from the heart, words of falsehood.” ¶ Horsley has: “The ‘words of falsehood’ I take to be the sophisms of philosophers and the quibbles of hypocrites ... ‘Deceiving speech’¹⁶ is the same thing.” Cheyne, continuing from before, has: “Then follow sins of the lips (comp. on ISAIAH 6:5).—Transgression] Lit., ‘deviation’ Hebr. sārāh.” Nägelsbach remarks that this phrase (‘speaking deviation’) is elsewhere used only of the false teaching of ‘pseudo-prophets’ Deuteronomy 13:5 (Biblia Hebraica 13:6), Jeremiah 28:16, 29:32), and that the writer is probably alluding to the seductive discourses of such persons. This is possible indeed, but far from certain, as sins of the lips are ascribed to the whole nation in v. 3, and ‘deviation’ from moral and spiritual truth was not peculiar to prophets.” Gill has: “The Targum renders it, ‘falsehood and apostasy’; false doctrine, which leads to apostasy from Christ ... false doctrines; such as agree not with, but are contrary to, the word of God; these are of their own conceiving and contriving; the produce of their own brains; the fruit of their own fancy and imaginations.” Many words of calumny were spoken against the Saints.

¹⁵ Uses the Aramaic (Ⲯ), “and turn around backward,” וְאַסְתַּחֲרֵנָּא לְאַחָרָא. Similarly, see verse 14 in the Ⲯ. The Masoretic text (Ⲛ) in verse 14 uses the same root-based expression: וְהִסְפֵּן אַחֲרָיִךְ.”

¹⁶ See Horsley’s translation, above.

14 And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter.

And judgment is turned away backward. The LXX (6) reads, “We have indeed turned judgment backward.” YLT reads: “And removed backward is judgment, And righteousness [מִשְׁפָּט וְצִדְקָה] afar off standeth.”

¶ Rotherham has: “So then there hath been a driving back of justice, And righteousness [מִשְׁפָּט וְצִדְקָה], afar off, standeth.” Luther says, “Judgment and justice must be present so that we may turn away from evil, and justice, so that we may do what is good.” Regarding the lack of justice and righteousness, please see below, ISAIAH 59:16, the report of the Prophet Joseph Smith and President Martin Van Buren, where precisely these words were used by the Prophet. Also, the Governor of Illinois, Thomas Ford, did nothing to protect the Prophet Joseph and those incarcerated with him. President Gordon B. Hinckley related: “[Joseph Smith] told the governor of the danger surrounding him. The governor dismissed it. He said he was going to Nauvoo the next day and promised that if he did so, he would take Joseph with him. He repeated that pledge when he left that morning. In the afternoon, the constable arrived at the jail accompanied by men of the Carthage Grays. The prisoners were marched to the courthouse in public humiliation. There, after an hour of debate over legal matters, the court adjourned until noon the next day. Joseph and Hyrum were brought back to the jail. The weather was sultry and hot and miserable. The next morning, Dan Jones, who had spent the night in the jail with Joseph and Hyrum, left to carry a message. He talked with Frank Worrel, one of the Carthage Grays. He reported that Worrel said: ‘We have had too much trouble to bring old Joe here to let him ever escape alive, and unless you want to die with him, you had better leave before sundown ... You’ll see that I can prophesy better than old Joe, for neither he nor his brother, nor anyone who will remain with them will see the sunset today.’ Dan Jones reported this to Governor Ford who responded that Jones was ‘unnecessarily alarmed.’ At 10:30 that morning, Governor Ford and his troops left for Nauvoo, leaving those in the jail behind at the mercy of the mob militia.”¹⁷ Where was judgment or truth in any of this? ¶ And justice standeth afar off: The LXX (6) reads, “Therefore saving mercy standeth aloof.” ¶ As one reads matters related to the history of the Church one senses the hatred and enmity against the Saints. Truly, nothing was done, except by a very few righteous men who refused to harm the Saints. ¶ For truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. The Targum (7) has, “For they that follow truth stumble in the street; and they that follow faithfulness cannot shew themselves.” The LXX (6) reads, “Because truth was destroyed in their ways and; they could not walk in straight paths.” The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “Because truth hath fallen down in the street, and equity could not come in.” ¶ President John Taylor quoted this scripture as he spoke of the increasing epidemic of abortion in America in 1884.¹⁸ ¶ Cheyne suggests: “Hath stumbled in the broad place” ‘Broad places’ was a name specially given to the recesses on each side of the city-gate, ‘used as places of assembly during the day, and as places of rest for guests [say rather for strangers, Judges 19:20] during the night’ (Layard, Nineveh and Babylon, p. 57) ... Cannot enter] i.e., cannot find admittance to the tribunal, to give evidence for the right.” Henderson has: “רחוב” properly signifies a wide open street, but here it seems rather to be used in reference to the forum, or broad open place at the gate, where justice was administered.” ¶ As I read this verse I thought of the Prophet Joseph Smith as he fell down to the ground in Carthage jail, the day he was martyred along with his brother Hyrum. And also, of the two Prophets in Jerusalem, that shall be martyred in the last days. And then, I read this from Luther, “This is what happens when the preachers of the truth are condemned and killed ...” Continuing with the narrative by President Hinckley of the happenings surrounding Carthage jail, we have: “The jailer suggested about 5:00 P.M. that the four of them in the jail—Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, Willard Richards, and John Taylor—might be safer if they went into the cell at the back of the second floor. Joseph indicated that they would do so after supper. A few moments later, a noise was heard outside, followed by a cry of surrender. Then came two or three gunshots. Willard Richards looked out the window and saw a large group of men with painted faces. The mob ran up the steep stairs and began firing. The prisoners pushed the door shut and then tried to knock down the guns sticking through the door. John Taylor used Stephen Markham’s large hickory cane, and Willard Richards used John Taylor’s cane. A bullet fired through the door hit Hyrum on the left side of the nose. Another ball, coming through the window, hit him in the back almost simultaneously. Two other balls hit him as he fell. John Taylor was then hit. One of the balls struck his watch. It stopped at 5:16 P.M. We still have that watch. One or two balls then hit Joseph. He jumped to the window, paused for a moment, cried out, ‘Oh Lord, my God,’ then fell out the window, his body resting against the curb of the well. It was all over. Joseph was dead. Hyrum was dead. John Taylor was wounded. Willard Richards miraculously escaped.”¹⁹

¹⁷ President Gordon B. Hinckley, “Joseph, the Seer.” September 1994 Ensign.

¹⁸ President John Taylor, Ogden, 19 October 1884. JD 25:354.

15 Yea, truth faileth; and he [that] departeth from evil maketh himself a prey: [✓] and the LORD saw [it], and it displeased him [✓] that [there was] no judgment.

- ✓ or, is accounted mad
- ✓ ✓ it was evil in his eyes

Yea, truth faileth; and he [that] departeth from evil maketh himself a prey: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the first half, “And they that follow truth are hidden.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And truth was removed and they substituted opinion in place of knowledge.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ), “Yea, truth is hid, and understanding (Lamsa) / prudence (BPE) has departed from our mind.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And truth hath been forgotten: and he that departed from evil, lay open to be a prey.” ¶ Skinner says: “maketh himself a prey] ... Another, and possibly a better rendering is, ‘withdraws himself’; compare the peculiar use of the simple verb in Ruth 2:16 (‘draw out’ corn from the sheaf).” ¶ Rawlinson has: “Once let there be no regard for truth in a state, no discredit attaching to lying, and all virtue is undermined, all soundness is vanished—nothing remains but ‘wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores’ (ISAIAH 1:6).” Gill notes: “He that does not give in to the prevailing vices of the age in which he lives, now become fashionable, but abstains from them, and departs from doctrinal as well as practical evils; from all false doctrines, and from all superstitious modes of worship; becomes a prey to others; a reproach and a laughing stock to them; they scoff at him, and deride him for his preciseness in religion; for his enthusiastic and irrational notions in doctrine; and for his stiffness in matters of worship: or, ‘he makes himself reckoned a madman’ (משתולל) ‘facit ut insanus habeatur,’ Junius & Tremellius; ‘habitus est pro insano,’ Vitringa; so Abendana, ‘he that fears God, and departs from evil,’ יחשבוהו לשוטה, ‘they reckon him a fool or a madman.’); as some render it; and this is a common notion with profane men, and loose professors, to reckon such as madmen that are upright in doctrine, worship, and conversation; see Acts 26:24.” Cowles well says: “Let us pause here for a moment to note that such flagrant immoralities, such utter prostration of all justice, even in those civil institutions which God had established among his people for its support, are accounted of God as overwhelming proofs of utter apostasy. In his view there can be no piety where there is such utter lack of common morality. His professed people are hopelessly degenerate; even their religion has become a mass of putridity.” Such conditions point to the state of affairs in every epoch of apostasy. It is not limited to the apostasy of Israel but encompasses also the Christian apostasy. It not only describes the violence [חַמָּס] with which the Savior was treated during His sojourn upon the earth, but also how His servants were treated when His Gospel was restored upon the earth in the latter days. ¶ And the LORD saw [it], and it displeased him that [there was] no judgment. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “It is revealed before the Lord, that there is no justice, which is evil in His sight.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Therefore the Lord took a view, and it displeased him that there was no judgment.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And the Lord saw, and it appeared evil in his eyes, because there is no judgment.” ¶ Alexander writes: “Then Jehovah saw and it was evil in his eyes that there was no judgment] or practical justice.” Wade has: “The writer, in ISAIAH 59:16–17, projects himself into the future, and relates what is to be as though it had already happened. The prophetic perfects are replaced by the future in ISAIAH 59:18 f.” Cheyne has: “All is still future, though described as past in the language of prophetic certitude.” ¶ וַיֵּרָא בְּעֵינָיו, and it displeased him, literally, as in the margin ||, is and it was evil in his eyes, as noted by the Targum (Ⲯ), and also see Barnes, LITV, YLT. ¶ One can see the mounting tension, where the Lord is not pleased with the way His Saints are being treated.

vv. 16–18. There was no man in government to stand and make sure that the Saints were protected from mobocracy.

16 ¶ And he saw that [there was] no man, and wondered that [there was] no intercessor: therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him.

And he saw that [there was] no man, and wondered that [there was] no intercessor: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And it is revealed in His sight that there is no man who hath good works, and it is known to Him that there is no man, who would arise and seek after them.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “When he took a view and there was no man; and made close observation.” Instead of intercessor, the Peshitta (S) has one to help (Lamsa) / no one to come to the rescue (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And he saw that there is not a man: and he stood astonished, because there is none to oppose himself.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “God looked for some champion of the oppressed to arise; it was to be expected under the circumstances. But, alas! ‘there was no man.’ None stood up to resist the unrighteous and protect the innocent; much less did any stand up to deliver Israel from its heathen adversaries.” Wade has for אֵין מִפְּנֵי: “no intercessor” Better, none to interpose. The verb, though identical with that used in ISAIAH 53:12 [פָּנִיעַ], root פָּנַע, here has a different sense and means one who intervenes actively to aid.” Cheyne has: “The apparent parallelism of Jeremiah 5:1 is delusive; ‘no man’ does not here mean ‘no man of honesty and integrity,’ but ‘no champion.’ It corresponds to the phrase in the next line, ‘none to interpose.’” Alexander says: “The repetition of the words and he saw connects this verse in the closest manner with the one before it.” “Cowles has: “‘Man’ in the sense of a whole man, a hero, and ‘intercessor’ in the sense of one who intervenes for help, are equivalent expressions, meaning, that God saw no helper and no help for this state of things, and therefore aroused himself to the needful work.” The word “hero” here is an interesting one. In ISAIAH 9:6 some have substituted the word God for hero (e.g., see Luther and Moffatt). One of my Jewish friends insisted in translating it using the word hero, also, which of course is a way of taking Christ out of the equation. See also Whitehouse, who says, “... conception of Yahweh as a warrior-hero.” Gratefully, almost all translators use the word God in ISAIAH 9:6, as does the KJV: “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.” And this verse in ISAIAH 59 certainly seems to be speaking of the Christ as an intercessor. Even in pre-mortal life Christ offered Himself to be our intercessor, which is what we see in ISAIAH 63:3, 5. He alone would expiate for us. ¶ In ISAIAH 63 we will see some similar statements as made here, but in that place the reference is to the atonement as well as to the day of vengeance. Here, there is an allusion to the atonement, which the Lord had to carry out on His own, but it also refers to the lack of man, especially the governors and even the President of the United States, in protecting the Saints from the persecutions they were submitted to. Indeed, there was no intercessor to defend the Saints against mobocracy. In the History of the Church, we read this from the Prophet Joseph Smith: “During my stay I had an interview with Martin Van Buren, the President [of the USA], who treated me very insolently, and it was with great reluctance he listened to our message, which, when he had heard, he said: ‘Gentlemen, your cause is just, but I can do nothing for you;’ and ‘If I take up for you I shall lose the vote of Missouri.’ His whole course went to show that he was an office-seeker, that self-aggrandizement was his ruling passion, and that justice and righteousness [מִשְׁפָּט וְצִדְקָה] were no part of his composition”²⁰ (emphasis added, see ISAIAH 59:14, above). ¶ Therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him. The Targum (T) has, “Therefore He will redeem them by the arm of His strength, and by the Word of His delight He will help them.” The LXX (G) reads, “And there was no helper; then with his own arm he defended them and with mercy supported them.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And his own arm brought salvation to him, and his own justice supported him.” ¶ Skinner also mentions the prophetic perfect: “That the whole description refers to a future event can hardly be questioned. The perfects in this verse and the next are those of prophetic certainty.” Jenour quotes Revelation 19:11 (“In righteousness doth he judge and make war”) and says: “But if the reference be to the salvation of the righteous, as is perhaps the case, for both the one and the other are treated of in these verses, then the expression, ‘His righteousness sustained him,’ must signify, that in accomplishing the work of redemption, the Son of God was sustained by that perfect and divine righteousness which was inherent in him.” ¶ This verse speaks of the Lord’s arm to be stretched forth for the benefit of the Saints.

¹⁹ President Gordon B. Hinckley, “Joseph, the Seer.” September 1994 Ensign.

17 For he put on righteousness as a breastplate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head; and he put on the garments of vengeance [for] clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloke.

For he put on righteousness as a breastplate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head. The Targum (T) has, “It is revealed, that He will work a great salvation for His people.” The LXX (G) reads, “And he put on righteousness as a breast plate, and placed on his head the helmet of salvation.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has justice instead of righteousness. ¶ McFadyen has: “The fullest description in the Old Testament of Jehovah as a ‘man of war’ (Exodus 15:3), and the model for the New Testament descriptions of the Christian’s armor (1 Thessalonians 5:8; Ephesians 6:14–17).” Alexander notes: “צִדְקָה signifies the righteousness of God.” Barnes says: “That is, God the Redeemer. The prophet here introduces him as going forth to vindicate his people clad like an ancient warrior.” Gill suggests: “Here the Lord is represented as a warrior clothed with armour, and as Christ is, and as he will appear in the latter day on the behalf of his people, and against their enemies, who is called faithful and true, and in righteousness will make war, Revelation 19:11, he will proceed according to justice and equity in righting the wrongs and avenging the injuries of his people; and both in saving them, and destroying their enemies, he will secure the honour of his faithfulness and justice, and the credit of his name and character; which will be preserved by his conduct.” ¶ And he put on the garments of vengeance [for] clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloke. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, He will render vengeance to His enemies.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And threw around him the mantle of vengeance; and his cloak.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) is missing the second clause, and was clad &c. ¶ Once again, this means that the Lord would avenge the Saints. And in a future day, will avenge Israel when she is under attack, also.

²⁰ History of the Church 4:80.

18 According to [their] deeds, ✓ accordingly he will repay, fury to his adversaries, recompence to his enemies; to the islands he will repay recompence.

✓ recompences

According to [their] deeds, accordingly he will repay, fury to his adversaries, recompence to his enemies. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He is the Lord of retributions, He shall render recompence: vengeance to His enemies, retribution to His adversaries.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “As about to retribute retribution — reproach to his adversaries.” The first clause, in the Peshitta (Ⲯ), reads something like, “To the end that he may seek vengeance upon those who hate him.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “As unto revenge, as it were to repay wrath to his adversaries, and a reward to his enemies.” The only ancient manuscript that makes any sense here is the Syriac (Ⲯ). The Spanish Syriac (Ⲯ) translation is not as clear: “A fin de vengarse de los que lo aborrecían y retribuir a sus adversarios. Dara el pago a las islas”.²¹ ¶ Rawlinson has: “He will repay” The ordinary future here, and in the remainder of the prophecy, replaces the ‘perfect of prophetic certitude,’ which has been employed in ISAIAH 59:16–17.” Keith well says: “This language is applied to the destruction of the nations which shall be gathered against Jerusalem.” ¶ Elder Orson Hyde used this scripture to teach that we ought to fear God more than man.²² This scripture has other applications, also. The Saints looked for redress from the government to no avail, and the Lord permitted the US Civil War to take place, partly in fulfillment to the persecutions and atrocities against the Saints. Brent D. Dowdle says in his paper, “Although acknowledging that the [Civil] war would come at a tremendous cost to the nation, Brigham Young believed that America had contracted a substantial debt through its persecution of the Saints and that any result other than the ‘overthrow’ of the nation ‘would rob justice of its claims.’” [Brigham Young to Charles C. Rich, April 4, 1861, Brigham Young Office Files, Church History Library, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Salt Lake City]²³ ¶ To the islands he will repay recompence. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “He will repay the like to the islands.” Lamsa’s Syriac (Ⲯ) has: “That he may seek vengeance upon those who hate him, and retribution to his adversaries, and to the islands he will render recompence.”²⁴ As does Bauscher’s interlinear, “And he shall repay his enemies and to the islands he will pay reward.”²⁵ Oswalt notes that repay or recompence—as appeasing debts (שָׁלוֹם, from שָׁלוֹם), come from the same root as peace (שָׁלוֹם). Oswalt says, “It is hard to escape the sense that the choice of the word is ironic. God will give שָׁלוֹם, ‘peace,’ to those who love him (cf. ISAIAH 57:19), but he will ‘pacify’ all accounts with his enemies.” We know that the people of the islands would become disciples of the Lord. Keith well says: “Israel is to be recovered at last from the islands of the sea (ISAIAH 41:4); they are called on as particularly concerned in the final restoration of Israel (ISAIAH 41:1); and to them the knowledge of the Lord is at last to extend (ISAIAH 51:5).”

²¹ Biblia Peshitta en Español. Traducción de los antiguos manuscritos arameos. Holman.

²² Elder Orson Hyde, “Zion,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 March 1872. JD 5:141b.

vv. 19–21. Now, let us return again to the words of the Savior in 3 Nephi 16: “And then will I remember my covenant which I have made unto my people, O house of Israel, and I will bring my gospel unto them. And I will show unto thee, O house of Israel, that the Gentiles shall not have power over you; but I will remember my covenant unto you, O house of Israel, and ye shall come unto the knowledge of the fulness of my gospel” (3 Nephi 16:11–12). The Lord will be merciful upon the Gentiles, also: “But if the Gentiles will repent and return unto me, saith the Father, behold they shall be numbered among my people, O house of Israel. And I will not suffer my people, who are of the house of Israel, to go through among them, and tread them down, saith the Father” (3 Nephi 16:13–14). To the Gentiles who reject the Gospel and the Book of Mormon the Lord says: “But if they will not turn unto me, and hearken unto my voice, I will suffer them, yea, I will suffer my people, O house of Israel, that they shall go through among them, and shall tread them down, and they shall be as salt that hath lost its savor, which is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of my people, O house of Israel. Verily, verily, I say unto you, thus hath the Father commanded me—that I should give unto this people this land for their inheritance” (3 Nephi 16:15–16).

²³ Brett D. Dowdle, “‘What Means This Carnage?’: The Civil War in Mormon Thought,” in Civil War Saints, ed. Kenneth L. Alford (Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center; Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 2012), 107–25. URL accessed 25Oct2016. <https://rsc.byu.edu/archived/civil-war-saints/what-means-carnage-civil-war-mormon-thought>

²⁴ George Lamsa Holy Bible from Ancient Eastern Manuscripts, Holman.

²⁵ Rev. Glenn David Bauscher, The Aramaic-English Interlinear Peshitta Old Testament, An Interlinear Translation, Lulu Publishing.

¶ Elder Orson Pratt rejoiced: “But when the Lord begins to move, and show forth his power, when he begins to light up the habitations of Zion, when he comes to Zion to turn away ungodliness from Jacob, then I think the nations will begin to wake up. Let us read a little more about the glory of Zion in the 59th and 60th chapters of ISAIAH. I told you a little while ago that Jesus would come to Zion and would show forth his glory there ... Now let me read a prophecy in the latter part of the 59th chapter of ISAIAH. ‘So shall they fear the name of the Lord from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun. When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him. And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My spirit that is upon thee, and my words that I put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed’s seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth even forever. Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.’ You notice here, then, that the Redeemer is to come to Zion, at the time when every habitation is lighted up with his light, and to all that turn from transgression in Jacob. Now let me here remark that this remnant of the house of Israel or Jacob, which we term the American Indians, are eventually to become a righteous branch of the house of Israel; when the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled, they will be numbered among the people of the covenant made with ancient Israel, they will be a branch of the Lord, beautiful and glorious, excellent and comely, and the power of the Lord will be upon them. In that day Jesus will come to them, they being a remnant of the tribe of Joseph. Then will be fulfilled that which was predicted by the Patriarch Jacob upon the descendants of Joseph. Speaking of Joseph he says, ‘Joseph is a fruitful bough, a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall: The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him: But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel.)’ (Genesis 49:22–24). When Jesus comes to Zion as is here predicted, in the 59th chapter of ISAIAH, he will come in the character of a great shepherd. Not in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory; but appearing in the midst of Zion and administering to the remnants of Joseph in the character of a shepherd. From thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel (Genesis 49:24). Now we all know that Jesus sprang from Judah; but here is a declaration that from Joseph is the shepherd, the stone of Israel. That is, he will come the second time as a shepherd. He will gather his flock, or as the Psalmist David has said, ‘Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock; stir up thy strength, and come and save us’ (Psalm 80:1–2). He will come as a shepherd, he will stir up his strength and show forth his power and the remnant of Joseph will be led by their shepherd, long before the Jews are redeemed. ‘Arise, and shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee’ (ISAIAH 60:1).”²⁶

19 So shall they fear the name of the LORD from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun. When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the LORD shall lift up a standard[✓] against him.

✓ or, put him to flight

So shall they fear the name of the LORD from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And they from the west shall revere the name of the Lord; and they from the rising of the sun, his glorious name.” Instead of fear, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has revere. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And they from the west, shall fear the name of the Lord: and they from the rising of the sun.” ¶ Kay suggests: “The consequence will be the spread of true religion—the ‘fear of the name of the Lord,’ Psalm 102:15—over the whole world (Malachi 1:11²⁷). The west is mentioned first; resuming the ‘isles’ of ISAIAH 59:18.” Now observe Henderson’s comments here: “It is particularly worthy of notice, that, while in every other passage of Scripture in which the spread of the Gospel is spoken of, it is uniformly represented as advancing from the East towards the West, that order is here reversed. True religion is first set forth as flourishing in the West, and then in the Eastern regions of the earth.” See notes on ISAIAH 18. ¶ When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the LORD shall lift up a standard against

²⁶ JD 14:354a–355a.

²⁷ Better, with AMP, Leeser, and others, “among the nations.”

him. The Targum (T) has, “When the oppressors shall come in like an inundation of the river Euphrates, they shall be broken (or, ‘dispersed’) by the Word of the Lord.” The LXX (G) reads, “For he will come like an impetuous stream—for the wrath of the Lord will come with fury.” Instead of enemy, the Peshitta (S) has oppressor; and instead of lift up, bring down (BPE) / humble (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “His glory: when he shall come as a violent stream, which the spirit of the Lord driveth on.” ¶ Wordsworth notes: “... the Hebrew verb to ‘lift up a standard’ (נָסַח), carries back the thoughts to Jehovahnissi (יְהוָה נָסִיחַ), Exodus 17:15).” Alexander explains: “נָסַח [here is given] the sense of when.” Gill has: “When Satan, the common ‘enemy’ of mankind, the avowed and implacable enemy of Christ and his people, ‘shall come’ into the world ... and has already entered ‘like’ an impetuous flood, threatening to carry all before him, introducing a flood of immorality and profaneness, as in the days of Noah and Lot, to which the times of the Son of Man’s coming are likened, Luke 17:26 or else a flood of error and heresy of all sorts; see Revelation 12:15 and likewise a flood of persecution, as will be at the slaying of the witnesses, that hour of temptation that will come upon all the earth, to try the inhabitants of it, Revelation 3:10 ... Christ and his Gospel, or Christ the standard lifted up in the ministry of the Gospel (ISAIAH 11:10), a set of ministers shall be raised up, having the everlasting Gospel, which they shall publish to all nations, and which shall have an universal spread; and by means of which the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea; and which will be a sufficient check to the enemy’s flood of immorality, error, and persecution; and which, after this, shall be no more; see Revelation 14:6.” Kay suggests: “So, above all, when the prince of this world came, expecting to complete his victory over man (John 14:30). So at all later epochs (Revelation 12:15–17).” Horsley has: “‘He shall come as a river straitened in its course.’²⁸ The river straitened in its course, and acquiring force and velocity from its confinement, is an image of the suddenness and irresistible force of the Messiah’s coming in the latter ages, when the reasons that have so long restrained the full display of his might shall no longer operate.” Keith suggests: “When the guilty nations of the earth shall have gathered in great force against Jerusalem, the Lord, through some instrumentality, will meet them, and put them down (margin ||): ‘I will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them for my people and for my heritage Israel,’ (Joel 3:2).” Skinner suggests: “For the image in the last clause cf. ISAIAH

²⁸ This is an interesting figure in that very old rivers twist and wind like a serpent, while younger ones are straighter and faster.

30:28 (‘His breath is as an overflowing stream’).” Clarke notes: “Kimhi says, he that was the standard-bearer always began the battle by first smiting at the enemy. Here then the Spirit of the Lord is the standard-bearer, and strikes the first blow. They who go against sin and Satan with the Holy Spirit at their head, are sure to win the day.” Shalom Paul observes: “The word נָסַח is thus an attribute of the river (Abravanel), described as having a devastatingly strong current {so too LXX (G) and Vulgate (V)}.”

20 And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the LORD.

The Targum (T) has, from the second clause, “And turn²⁹ the transgressors of the house of Jacob to the law, saith the Lord.” The LXX (G) reads, “For the sake of Sion the Deliverer will come, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And there shall come a redeemer to Sion, and to them that return from iniquity in Jacob, saith the Lord.” The Targum tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Yoma 86b) has “Great is repentance, because it brings about redemption, as it is said And a redeemer will come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, i.e., why will a redeemer come to Zion? Because of those that turn from transgression in Jacob” (Talmud, Soncino).

¶ The expression וְלָשׁוּב נָפֶשׁ, and [to] turn from transgression, is a beautiful one. As we have said, in the Old Testament, the words turn or return (from the root שׁוּב), indicate repentance—or else, apostasy, turning away from God. Whitehouse also points out that “turn” [וְלָשׁוּב] here means “converted.” ¶ Henderson suggests, regarding ISAIAH 59:20–21: “It is impossible for anyone impartially to examine the scope and management of the Apostle’s argument, Romans 11, and not to perceive that he quotes this passage in verses 26–27, for the express purpose of proving, from the Old Testament, the future conversion of the Jewish people. The chronology of the two writers is in the strictest harmony. For, as Isaiah introduces the conversion of the Jews as happening after the general extension of true religion among the Gentiles, so Paul manifestly links the two events together in the same order: ‘Blindness in part is happened to Israel UNTIL THE FULNESS OF THE GENTILES BE COME IN. AND SO ALL ISRAEL SHALL BE SAVED: as it is written,’ &c... . The principal idea being the conversion of the Jewish people ... From the circumstance that the advent of the Saviour is limited, in the way of promise, to such of the Jews as should repent, and turn to God.” Oswalt observes that יִשְׂרָאֵל is also mentioned in ISAIAH 58:1, but there Jacob is declared as rebellious while here repentant: “Thus the section (ISAIAH 58:1–59:21) has moved from declaration of sin to turning from sin, and from judgment to redemption.” ¶ Elder Reed Smoot said in General Conference, “... it had been declared (Numbers 24:17): ‘There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel.’ The great Prophet Isaiah later explained (ISAIAH 59:20): ‘The Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord.’ This was to Israel the promised and hoped for Christ, who so firmly declared this basic principle of faith in the living God (John 14:1): ‘Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me.’”³⁰ Birks suggests: “And there shall come for Zion] The renderings ‘unto Zion,’ AV, ‘for the sake of Zion,’ LXX, ‘out of Zion,’ Romans 11:26, are not inconsistent. The Hebrew is ‘for’ in the sense, ‘on behalf of,’ which ‘unto’ nearly expresses, only not being understood in its local sense. The Apostle’s version ‘out of’ seems an allusion to Psalm 14:7. That this Redeemer will ‘turn away ungodliness from Jacob’ is implied, though not clearly expressed. After the dark description in ISAIAH 59:11–15, the fact that so many converts are found is a proof that this Redeemer has been exalted ‘to give repentance to Israel.’” Cheyne notes: “To Zion] i.e., to the remnant of Israel—‘those that have turned from rebellion’ (comp. ISAIAH 1:27), as the parallel line tells us. This limitation is one which English students of the prophecies would do well to remember: it shows that the Messianic promises to Israel are only meant for a converted and regenerate people.” Wordsworth notes: “the Redeemer shall come to Zion] Compare to Malachi 3:1, ‘The Lord shall suddenly come to His Temple.’” President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Malachi speaks of the Lord sending his messenger to prepare the way before him, and while that does have reference to the coming of John the Baptist, it is one of those prophecies in the scriptures that has a double fulfilment. It has reference also to the coming of the Prophet Joseph Smith, because that messenger which was to come and prepare the way before him, was to come in this day.”³¹ ¶ Birks has: “It amounts to the same thing whether it be said that Christ comes to Zion to deliver, or that the deliverer appears from that quarter. Both agree on the direction from which salvation is to come to Judea and to the world. But while the fact of some manifestation of Christ’s presence in Zion is made clear, the manner of it is left as much in the dark.” Perhaps not so dark to the LDS. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained: “[The Lord] will return [the Saints] to Jackson County, and in the westerns part of the State of Missouri they will build up a city which shall be called Zion, which will be the headquarters of this Latter-day Saint Church; and that will be the place where the prophets, apostles, and inspired men of God will have their headquarters. It will be the place where the Lord God will manifest Himself to His people, as He has promised in the Scriptures (Zechariah 2:10; ISAIAH 59:20) as well as in modern revelation (D&C 45:67; D&C 116:1).”³² Similarly, President Brigham Young stated: “When will Zion be redeemed? When will the Savior make his appearance in the midst of his people? (D&C 1:36). When will the veil be taken away, that we may behold the glory of God? Can any of you answer these questions? Yes, readily, when I tell you. The redemption of Zion is the first step preparatory to the two last-named events. Just as soon as the Latter-day Saints are ready and prepared to return to Independence, Jackson County, in the State of Missouri, North America, just so soon will the voice of the Lord be heard, ‘Arise now, Israel, and make your way to the Center Stake of Zion.’”³³

²⁹ Here the Masoretic text (M) has וְלָשׁוּב נָפֶשׁ, associated with the שׁוּב of repentance, while the Targum (T) has וְלָשׁוּב נָפֶשׁ.

21 As for me, this [is] my covenant with them, saith the LORD; My spirit that [is] upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the LORD, from henceforth and for ever.

As for me, this [is] my covenant with them, saith the LORD; My spirit that [is] upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth. The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the first half, “And as for me, this shall be my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My Holy Spirit that is upon thee, and the words of my prophecy which I have put in thy mouth.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And this shall be my covenant with them, said the Lord, this spirit of mine which is upon thee, and these words which I have put in thy mouth shall not fail from thy mouth, nor from the mouth of thy seed, (for the Lord hath spoken) from this time forth forever.” Instead of covenant with them, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has covenant with you. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) begins with, “This is my covenant with them, saith the Lord: My spirit &c.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “As for me]

³⁰ Elder Reed Smoot, General Conference – October 1933, p. 111.

³¹ President Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation.

³² Elder Orson Pratt, “The Latter-Day Kingdom of God,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 April 1870. JD 13:138a.

³³ President Brigham Young, “Gathering of the Saints.” Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 28 July 1861. JD 9:137.

literally, and P” [פֶּן]. Wade has: “The opening words have some resemblance to Genesis 9:9, 17:4,” the latter related to the Abrahamic covenant. Young says, “It is because the Lord once made this covenant with Abraham that He will come for Zion.” Henderson says: “The subject, [in] ISAIAH 59:21, is the dispensation of the spirit and truth to the restored Israelites, of which they should no more be deprived as in times past. The change from the third person plural to the second singular is not uncommon in Hebrew, and seems to be here specially made with a view to give greater point and interest to the promise ... the events to which the prediction refers—the future conversion of the Jews.” And not the Jews only, but also all the tribes of Israel. Barnes has: “In the verse previous, it had been stated that the qualifications on the part of people for their partaking of the benefits of the Redeemer’s work, were, that they should turn from transgression ... The word ‘thee’ here does not refer, as Jerome and others suppose, to the prophet, but to the pious Hebrew people.” That is, to Israel. Cowles suggests: “It is naturally associated most closely with the word of truth which God puts into the mouth of his Son, and then through him and through the Spirit, into the mouth and into the heart of all his people, his spiritual seed, and their seed onward through all generations of the church to the end of times.” Rabbi Rosenberg notes that the covenant we have here is that which is mentioned in Jeremiah 31:31–34. It is the new and everlasting covenant that is here mentioned, including the Abrahamic covenant. Ibn Ezra associates these promises with those of Joel, “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions” (Joel 2:28). This particular verse in Joel was one which Angel Moroni told the Prophet Joseph Smith was soon to take place (Joseph Smith—History 1:41). ¶ Shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, saith the LORD, from henceforth and [until] forever. מִעַתָּה וְעַד-עוֹלָם. Bishops’ Bible translates it as: “from this time foorth for euermore, worlde without ende.” Shalom Paul suggests that “Israel is destined to be a nation of prophets,” and quotes Moses, “Would God that all the LORD’S people were prophets,³⁴ and that the LORD would put his spirit upon them!”

³⁴ The Prophet Joseph Smith explained that spiritual things are shown to the Prophets and those who humble themselves as little children: “Wherefore, we again say, search the revelations of God; study the prophecies, and rejoice that God grants unto the world Seers and Prophets. They are they who saw the mysteries of godliness ... they saw the stone cut out of the mountain, which filled the whole earth; they saw the Son of God come from the regions of bliss and dwell with men on earth; they saw the deliverer come out of Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob (—E&MS August, 1832. DHC 1:282–284).” Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, pp. 12–13.

(Numbers 11:29b). Birks has: “[From] Israel, ISAIAH 49:3, righteousness will now overflow to the whole people. They will be raised at length to their high calling as the Lord’s royal priesthood; and the oath to Abraham, and the truth to Jacob, be fulfilled through successive generations, as it had been sworn to the fathers from the days of old.” Alexander well says, and this fits perfectly with what we know as LDS, “The true explanation seems to be that Israel is here, as in many other parts of this great prophecy, regarded not merely as a receiver but as a dispenser of the truth.” Indeed, it is Ephraim and Manasseh who shall help gather the rest of Israel, scattered throughout the world, into Zion. ¶ Elder Erastus Snow declared: “[The Lord] promised Abraham on another occasion that in him and his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed ... This was a great work that the Lord purposed concerning the seed of Abraham, and it was for this reason and purpose that he promised to establish his covenant with them forever.”³⁵ ¶ Now, Keith’s comments here are of particular interest: “His Spirit, then poured upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, will continue with them, keeping them faithful to him who will then be in reality, as well as by title, the King of the Jews. It is of this period of their history that it is similarly said, ‘I will make a covenant of peace with them, it shall be an everlasting covenant with them, and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore,’ (Ezekiel 37:26).” The Ezekiel scripture is the one associated with the Book of Mormon as a tool to gather Israel and re-establish the Abrahamic covenant (see also Wade’s comment at the beginning of this verse) through the Book of Mormon.

FIRST POSTED: 1 November 2016

³⁵ Apostle Erastus Snow, Logan, 6 May 1882. JD 23:182a

Isaiah 60

The emphasis of the early Church leaders—as it relates to this beautiful chapter of Isaiah—was to speak of Zion or the New Jerusalem to be built in Jackson County, Missouri, and surrounding area. Nothing that is said about the New Jerusalem or the American Zion is meant in any way to take away from the glory that the Lord will also place upon Jerusalem in the Holy Land (e.g., see Elder Orson Pratt, JD 14:355-56). We know that the Lord has promised that in the Millennium, “He will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem” (Micah 4:2b). ¶ Regarding the New Jerusalem we read: “The place where the Saints will gather and Christ will personally reign with them during the Millennium. Zion (the New Jerusalem) will be built upon the American continent, and the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory (A of F 1:10). It also refers to a holy city that will come down out of heaven at the beginning of the Millennium” (LDS Guide to the Scriptures). In Doctrine and Covenants we further read: “And with one heart and with one mind, gather up your riches that ye may purchase an inheritance which shall hereafter be appointed unto you. And it shall be called the New Jerusalem, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the saints of the Most High God; And the glory of the Lord shall be there, and the terror of the Lord also shall be there, insomuch that the wicked will not come unto it, and it shall be called Zion” (D&C 45:65-67, and compare with ISAIAH 60:5-7, below). Also see Ether 13:1-12. ¶ Elder Parley P. Pratt spoke of Zion with much tenderness: “But in order to form a still more striking idea of the prosperity, wealth, beauty, and magnificence of the cities of Zion and Jerusalem, we will quote ISAIAH 60: [ISAIAH 60 is quoted here]. In this chapter we learn—First, that there is a city to be built in the last days, unto which not only Israel, but all the nations of the Gentiles, are to flow; and the nation and kingdom that will not serve that city shall perish and be utterly wasted. Second, we learn that the name of that city is Zion, the city of the Lord. Third, we learn that it is called the place of his sanctuary, and the place of his feet. Fourth, that the best of timber, consisting of fir, pine and boxwood, is to be brought in great plenty, to beautify the place of his sanctuary, and make the place of his feet glorious. Fifth, the precious metals are to abound in such plenty, that gold is to be in the room of brass, silver in the room of iron, brass in the room of wood, iron in the room of stones. Their officers are to be peace-officers, and their exactors righteous exactors; violence is no more to be heard in the land; wasting nor destruction within their borders. Their walls are to be Salvation, and their gates Praise; while the glory of God, in the midst of the city, outshines the sun. The days of their mourning are ended; their people are all righteous, and are to inherit the land forever, being the branch of the Lord’s planting, that he may be glorified. A little one shall become a strong nation, and the Lord will hasten it in his time.”¹ ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith also explained: “When Joseph Smith translated the Book of Mormon, he learned that America is the land of Zion which was given to Joseph and his children and that on this land the City Zion, or New Jerusalem, is to be built. He also learned that Jerusalem in Palestine is to be rebuilt and become a holy city. These two cities, one in the land of Zion and one in Palestine, are to become capitals for the kingdom of God during the Millennium ... We accept the fact that the center place where the City New Jerusalem is to be built, is in Jackson County, Missouri. It was never the intention to substitute Utah or any other place for Jackson County. But we do hold that Zion, when reference is made to the land, is as broad as America, both North and South—all of it is Zion ... At the April conference of the Church, held at Nauvoo in 1844, the Prophet Joseph Smith declared that the whole of America was Zion” (Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, 3:71). ¶ The Gentile exegetes agree on quite a few important points with the LDS perspective. These authors, however, would mostly speak of the glory that will surround Jerusalem in the Holy Land and do not understand that two separate places are involved. Birks speaks of a latter-day “restoration of Israel” and also mentions “a still future recovery of Israel, when the broken olive branches [meaning the natural branches or Israel—GB] shall be grafted in once more.” There are constant allusions to ISAIAH 60 (as well as other portions of Isaiah) in Revelation 21: “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and *God himself shall be with them, and be *their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son ... And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb’s wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal; And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel: On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates. And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof. And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal. And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel. And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst. And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass. And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it. And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life" (Revelation 21:1-4, 7, 9-27). ¶ In ISAIAH 60, then, we hear of both the New Jerusalem (in the American Continent) as well as Jerusalem (in the Holy Land). Some of the prophecies will be fulfilled before and others after the Second Coming.

¹ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints By Elder Parley P. Pratt. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846), pp. 128-132.

vv. 1-8. There would be much spiritual darkness in the latter-days, after which the Gospel light would burst forth with the restoration of the Gospel. After the restoration, however, there would be an ever increasing gap between the light of the restored Gospel and the darkness of mystic Babylon. Of a truth, Isaiah's prophecy would be fulfilled, wherein people would "call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!" (ISAIAH 5:20b). Ironside has: "Restored Israel is brought to the forefront of God's plan and blessing for the whole earth ... The nations that once persecuted [Israel will] acknowledge that God is with them, and they will seek to enter into fellowship and communion with them. This is to be taken literally. God will deal thus with His people Israel and bring the nations that once antagonized and persecuted them into this blessed harmony in the last days."

1 ¶ ARISE, shine; for thy light is come, ✓ and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee.

✓ or, be enlightened; for thy light cometh

The Targum (T) has, "Arise, shine, O Jerusalem, for the time of thy redemption is come, and the glory of the Lord is revealed upon thee." The LXX (G) reads, "BE ENLIGHTENED: be enlightened, Jerusalem! for thy light is come; and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." The Douay-Rheims (D) begins with, "Arise be enlightened, O Jerusalem: for thy light &c."

¶ Alexander explains: "The Hebrew אֲרִיזָה ... means not to rise in general, but to rise above the horizon." Cowles has: "Is risen upon thee] Gives the Hebrew a beautiful allusion to the rising sun." Jennings has: "Jehovah shines on Jerusalem. Jerusalem shines on the earth." Wordsworth notes: "Observe the contrast between Zion and Babylon. To Babylon it is said, 'Come down, and sit in the dust' (ISAIAH 47:1); but to Zion it is said, 'Awake, awake' (lit. Wake thyself, wake thyself), 'stand up' (ISAIAH 51:17); 'Awake, awake; shake thyself from the dust; Arise' (ISAIAH 52:2); 'Arise, shine!' (ISAIAH 60:1)." Wordsworth also reminds us that it is mystic Babylon that will be humbled and Zion, exalted. Keith sees the fulfillment of Malachi: "For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the LORD of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall" (Malachi 4:1-2). Skinner says: "The image in these strikingly beautiful verses is that of a city glittering in the first rays of the morning sun." Oswalt, leaning on Muilenburg points out: "Glory is characteristic of divine theophanies. When God appears, it is his כְּבוֹד, his overwhelmingly majestic reality, that impresses itself on the observer." So it is that we have, "And it came to pass that he saw One descending out of the midst of heaven, and he beheld that his luster was above that of the sun at noon-day” (1 Nephi 1:9); and furthermore, “I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me” (JS-History 1:16b). The words light and sun are so often associated. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt says: “I will cite the attention of the congregation to the first verse of the 60th chapter of Isaiah,—‘Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord has risen upon thee.’ The passage which I have quoted from Isaiah has reference to the latter-day Zion, about which the choir sang at the opening of the meeting. That there may be no misunderstanding about the people to whom the Prophet had reference, I will read some other passages connected with it,— ‘And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord.’ The Zion that is here spoken of is called upon to ‘arise and shine, for the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.’ There is no one thing more fully revealed in the Scriptures of eternal truth, than the rise of the Zion of our God in the latter days, clothed upon with the glory of God from the heavens—a Zion that will attract the attention of all the nations and kindreds of the whole earth. It will not be something that takes place in a corner on some distant island of the sea, or away among some obscure people; but it will be something that will call forth the attention of all people and nations upon the face of the whole earth. The rise of Zion, the latter-day Zion. What are we to understand by the meaning of Zion? What I understand, and what the Scriptures have portrayed in regard to the meaning of Zion is, a people who shall receive the law of God, and who shall be acknowledged of the Lord as his people—a people who shall be gathered together from the nations of the earth, and build a house to the name of the Lord¹ in the latter-

¹ Note allusion to Rain in Due Season, “And I will set my tabernacle among you ... And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:11a-12). Regarding the durability of the Temples, Elder Orson Pratt also taught: “Now, in this world there will be Temples, and these Temples will be constructed according to the most perfect law of the celestial kingdom, for the world in which they are built or in which they stand will be a celestial body. This last Temple that I am speaking of, or this last one to be built in Jackson County, Missouri, will be constructed after that heavenly pattern in all particulars. Why? Because it will never perish, it will exist forever ... I say there is a higher law, a controlling power over all the laws of nature, that will prevent these buildings from decaying; and I wish while dwelling upon this subject to say a little about another subject; that is, the building up of Palestine with the new Jerusalem. It will be the old Jerusalem rebuilt upon its former site. Now, will that city ever be destroyed, will it ever decay? Will the Temple to be built in Palestine ever be thrown down or ever be furrowed with hail, rain, snow and frost—will these ever have any effect upon it? No, not in the least. Why? Because God will be there. So He will be in the temple of Zion on this continent, and by His power, by His laws—which are superior to all those grosser laws of nature—He will preserve both of these cities, one on the western hemisphere, and one on the eastern hemisphere, from any decay whatever ... Shall I limit that power to the preserving of a Temple!

days. A people who shall have their abiding place in the mountains, and who shall build a city that shall be called Zion. All these things are clearly portrayed in prophecy. The people of God must be a people who give the most diligent heed to his word; they will be guided by revelation from him, and among them his power will be made conspicuously manifest. These are characteristics concerning this latter-day Zion, spoken of by the ancient Prophets, which, if the Spirit of the Lord will enable me to clearly comprehend the subject, I will endeavor, this afternoon, in my simple language and in my simple manner, to lay before this congregation.”² Elder Charles Penrose testified: “... out of this Church may be built up the kingdom that all the prophets and inspired men of God have seen from the beginning, upon which the glory of God shall shine, and over which the Lord shall rule. This work will prevail, no matter what opposition may be brought to bear against it ... All manner of lies are circulated concerning us, which, however, only serve to increase our strength.”³ ¶ President John Taylor often quoted this scripture: “We are going to build up Zion. What then? When Zion is built up—and it is not built up yet; but it will be built up; and when that is done, Jerusalem that is spoken of shall be built—and we are a long way from that—but when that is built up and the glory of God shall rest upon it, upon every dwelling of Mount Zion as it did in former times then we will build up our Zion after the pattern that God will show us, and we will be governed by his law and submit to his authority and be governed by the holy priesthood and by the word and will of God. And then when the time comes that these calamities we read of shall overtake the earth, those that are prepared will have the power of translation, as they had in former times, and the city will be translated. And Zion that is on the earth will rise, and the Zion above will descend, as we are told, and we will meet and fall on each other’s necks and embrace and kiss each other.”⁴ At another time President John Taylor showed

No. The same Being could preserve the city round about the Temple, hence it is a city that shall never be destroyed nor thrown down from that time henceforth and forever. God will be in the city.” In this most precious prophetic talk, Elder Orson Pratt also said: “We have lived here long enough to fulfill a great many of the prophecies that are contained in this good Jewish Bible. But we have not yet got through with fulfilling prophecies” (Apostle Orson Pratt, Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 26 October 1879, JD 24:25-28). I recommend the reading of that complete talk, some of which we have reproduced in this chapter.

² Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses, June 15, 1873, Delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday afternoon. The rise of Zion in the last days, pp. 78-79. Emphasis added.

³ Elder Charles W. Penrose, The Testimony of the Gospel, Etc., delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, 14 August 1881. JD 22:216-217.

⁴ President John Taylor, The Great Principles of Truth As Taught By Revelation to the Ancients, and Also to the Saints in Our Day. Ogden Tabernacle, Sunday, 21 March 1880. JD 21:253b.

us the way to follow: “If we will cleave to God and do our duty and purge ourselves from unrighteousness and live our religion and keep His commandments, Zion will arise and shine, and the glory of God will rest upon her. And when this nation and other nations shall crumble to pieces, Zion and the glory thereof will extend from nation to nation, and it will continue to spread and grow until the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and his Christ, and every creature in heaven and on the earth will be heard to say, Blessing and glory and honor and praise and power, and might and majesty and dominion be ascribed to Him that sits upon the throne, and to the Lamb forever.”⁵ Our final quote from President John Taylor here is: “We are living in the dispensation of the fulness of times, when God has commenced to gather together all things in one. He has revealed to us His law, and He is continuing to do so. It is for us to learn to subject ourselves to that law, to obey His commands, submit to His authority, and pursue that course that we can always have the approbation of the Most High. Let us eschew evil, cleave to that which is good, honor our God and our religion, and the blessings of heaven will rest upon and abide with us from this time henceforth and forever. Zion will arise and shine, the power of God will be made manifest in our midst, and no hand, nor any power that shall rise against us, shall be able to injure or destroy us.”⁶

2 For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee.

For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “kingdoms” instead of people. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Behold darkness will cover the earth and thick darkness the nations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has mist instead of gross darkness. ¶ Keith says: “The[re is a] contrast which is drawn between the condition of Israel and that of the Gentile world. Theirs [the Gentiles], at the period of Israel’s conversion, is said to be a state of gross darkness, that is, spiritual darkness.” Rawlinson has: “As in Egypt a ‘thick darkness’ covered the whole land⁷ at the word of Moses (Exodus 10:22), while still ‘the children of Israel had light in their dwellings,’ so now the world and ‘the nations’ of the world lay in a deep obscurity, into which scarcely a ray of light penetrated, while on Israel there dawned a glory which streamed from the throne of God.” ¶ President Gordon B. Hinckley explained: “Ignorance and evil enveloped the world, resulting in what is known as the Dark Ages. Isaiah had predicted: ‘Darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people.’ . . . But somehow, in that long season of darkness, a candle was lighted. The age of Renaissance brought with it a flowering of learning, art, and science. There came a movement of bold and courageous men and women who looked heavenward in acknowledgment of God and His divine Son. We speak of it as the Reformation. And then, after many generations had walked the earth—so many of them in conflict, hatred, darkness, and evil—there arrived the great, new day of the Restoration. This glorious gospel was ushered in with the appearance of the Father and the Son to the boy Joseph.”⁸ Elder LeGrand Richards said: “My testimony is such that I say that if the veil were parted and we could understand why this world has made such great progress in the last one hundred and thirty years since the gospel was restored as compared with all the history of the past, we would know that it was because the Father and the Son had come and broken the darkness, just as the scriptures say. Isaiah said, ‘The darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people’ (ISAIAH 60:2). During that time the world made no progress. Year after year, century after century, they lived in the same kind of houses and traveled in the same crude manner and lived in the same crude homes with no modern conveniences. Then all at once the light broke forth. The Lord said: ‘I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and...your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions’ (Joel 2:28).”⁹ ¶ But the LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “But in thee the Shekinah of the Lord shall dwell, and His glory shall be revealed upon thee.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But upon thee the Lord will shine and ⁵ President John Taylor, “Slain for the Testimony of Jesus,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 3 August 1879. JD 20:254a. President John Taylor also taught: “We talk about being a good people ... but we ought to be twenty times better than we are today. And if we, as Latter-day Saints, were to strictly observe the Sabbath day, and pay our tithes and offerings, and meet our engagements, and be less worldly minded, be united in temporal and spiritual things, Zion would arise and shine, and the glory of God would rest upon her. And it would not be long before all nations would call us blessed.” (Elder John Taylor, “Honor the Sabbath,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 7 July 1878. JD 20:24). Furthermore, Elder John Taylor testified: “Israel will rise and shine, and the power of God will rest upon his people, and the work that he has commenced will roll forth ‘until the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God, and his Christ; and he shall rule for ever and ever’ (Revelation 11:15)” (Elder John Taylor, Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 7 October 1874. JD 17:211).

⁶ Elder John Taylor, “Instructions to Missionaries,” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 14 April 1867. JD 12:23b.

⁷ The American Continent also experienced such darkness after the death of Christ.

⁸ President Gordon B. Hinckley, “The Dawning of a Brighter Day,” April 1981 General Conference.

⁹ Elder Richards in 1960, Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, 1960-1966, p. 3.

his glory over thee will be conspicuous.” Instead of arise, the Peshitta (ܣ) has shine. ¶ Nyman quotes the prophet Joseph Smith in relation to this verse: “Consider for a moment, brethren, the fulfillment of the words of the prophet; for we behold that darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the inhabitants thereof—that crimes of every description are increasing among men ... the rising generation growing up in the fullness of pride and arrogance ... and indifference toward the things of eternity increasing among those who profess a belief in the religion of heaven ... and denying the faith of Jesus (TPJS, p. 47).” Elder Dallin H. Oaks spoke about “the deterioration in religious faith that has happened in my own life,” especially in regards to the divinity of Jesus Christ. As an antidote to this growing cancer, Elder Oaks said, “That is one reason the Lord inspired his prophet, Ezra Taft Benson, to have us reemphasize our study and testimony of the Book of Mormon, whose mission is ‘the convincing of Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God’ (Book of Mormon, title page).”¹⁰ The Doctrine and Covenants similarly has: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, darkness covereth the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people, and all flesh has become corrupt before my face” (D&C 112:23, emphasis added, also see 112:19-34). Elder Wilford Woodruff taught, “When I was a boy, fifty years ago, the kingdom of God had not been established among men; the angels of God had not visited the earth; the Lord Almighty had not clothed his servants with the Priesthood and commanded them to go and warn the nations of the earth of the judgments which awaited them. There was not the wickedness then that there is today. The wickedness committed today in the Christian world in twenty-four hours is greater than would have been committed in a hundred years at the ratio of fifty years ago. And the spirit of wickedness is increasing...”¹¹ ¶ To summarize, the Restoration burst forth as a light upon a dark world. Since then, the light found in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints stands as a beacon in contrast to much of the increasing darkness; a light that is ever attracting the honest at heart to the Gospel of Jesus Christ and membership in His Church.

3 And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.

And the Gentiles shall come to thy light. The LXX (6) reads, “And kings will walk by thy light.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And the Gentiles shall walk in thy light.” ¶ I prefer to here translate גוֹיִם as nations, with the idea that the light of the Gospel is what will attract Israel as scattered upon the Gentile nations and throughout the world. Birks points us to Revelation 21:24. Keith suggests: “As the bright dawning of the sun arrests the eye, so will the favoured condition of Israel, when the glory of the Lord shall be seen upon her, excite the notice and the interest of the Gentiles, and they shall go to witness and to participate in her blessings.” הָלַךְ, and walk, from the root, הָלַךְ. Alexander explains: “And nations shall walk in thy light] The Hebrew preposition לְ does not correspond to our to as a particle of motion or direction, but expresses relation in the widest and most general manner ... In this case it seems to mean that they shall walk with reference to the light in question, which in English may be best expressed by in, but not as a literal translation.” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff said: “Whether men believe or not, this Zion so often spoken of in holy writ, has got to arise and put on her beautiful garments; these mountain vales have got to be filled with the saints of God and temples reared to his holy name, preparatory to the time when ‘the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.’ And this time will come when the nations are fully warned by the preaching of the servants judgments commence to be poured out upon the world, in fulfillment of the revelations of St. John (Revelation 16:1-21)”¹² After quoting ISAIAH 60:3, Elder Orson Pratt said: “... showing clearly, and plainly that the Gentiles, and even the kings of the earth, will in that day be excited by the glory of God, that will shine forth upon Zion, which will be as a city set on a hill whose light cannot be hid.”¹³ Elder Wilford Woodruff taught that ISAIAH 60:3 would begin to be fulfilled in his day: “These things are to come to pass in our day, and the beginning has ¹⁰ Elder Dallin H. Oaks, “Witnesses of Christ,” October 1990 General Conference.

¹¹ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Eventful Times.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 1 January 1871, JD 14:3. This verse has been frequently quoted by the Brethren including: Elder Charles W. Penrose, “Insufficiency of Mere Belief in Christ.” Salt Lake Assembly Hall, 25 April 1880. JD 21:88; Elder Charles W. Penrose, “The Work of Restitution of All Things.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 17 August 1879. JD 20:294-295; Elder Wilford Woodruff, “The Gospel Embraces All Truth.” General Conference, New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 7 April 1873. JD 16:37; Elder Orson Pratt, “Book of Mormon.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 18 July 1875. JD 18:164; Elder Orson Pratt, “The Setting Up of God’s Kingdom in These Latter Days.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 4 February 4, 1872, JD 15:74b; Elder Orson Pratt, “The Apostasy.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, June 14, 1868, JD 12:248; Elder Orson Pratt, JD 16:83, 15 June 1873. Also, see Elder Orson Pratt, “Zion.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 March 1872, JD 14:355.

¹² Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Fulfillment of Prophecy.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 June 1878, JD 19:359b.

¹³ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Rise of Zion in the Last Days.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 15 June 1873, JD 16:83a. Also see Elder Orson Pratt, “Fulfillment of Prophecy.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 August 1875, JD 18:153-154.

commenced, and the end will come by the power of God and in fulfillment of his promises; and it is at our hands the work is required. Therefore I feel to bear my testimony today that this is the work of God, that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God ... We are called to build on the foundation he laid, until Zion shall arise and put on her beautiful garments and the people of God become united as the heart of one man; until the little stone, cut out of the mountain without hands, becomes a mountain and fills the whole earth, and accomplishes all God has spoken concerning it.”¹⁴ ¶ And kings to the brightness of thy rising. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And kings to thy brightness.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And nations by thy splendour.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has in rather than to. ¶ President Heber C. Kimball explains the term kings: “You all say that we are to become a kingdom of kings and priests, of queens and priestesses.”¹⁵ See also, Keith’s comments in ISAIAH 61:6. No doubt, among the traditional kings, there will also be much interest in the manifest goodness and light coming from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. There also is an allusion to the kings of the earth that played a role in the restoration of Israel as a nation.

4 Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at [thy] side.

Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: The Targum (ⲧ) has this about Jerusalem, and the second clause, “And see all the children of the people if thy captivity.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Raise thine eyes around.”

¶ Delitzsch says: “Zion is now exhorted, as in ISAIAH 49:18, to lift up her eyes, and turn them in all directions; for she is the object sought by an approaching multitude.” Barnes has: “Jerusalem is here addressed as a female with eyes cast down from grief. She is directed to lift them up, and to see the great multitudes that were flocking to her.” Gill suggests: “... the vast number of converts flocking from all parts of the world to join themselves to the church of Christ, and to behold the wonderful work of God among the Jews now converted.” ¶ All they gather themselves together, they come to thee: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Who are gathered together.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And behold thy children gathered together.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “All these are gathered together, they are come to thee.” ¶ Fausset has: “The Gentile peoples come together to bring back the dispersed Hebrews, restore their city, and worship Jehovah with offerings.” Delitzsch suggests: “The multitude that are crowding together and coming near are the diaspora of her sons and daughters that have been scattered far away (ISAIAH 11:12).” Gill likewise has: “This seems to have respect ... to the Jews themselves, who are scattered up and down in the world; but now, being in a wonderful manner converted, shall gather together in a body, and go up to Jerusalem, where a Christian church of them will be formed, and to which they will join themselves.” This will happen after Jerusalem is under attack on all quarters and the Savior stands on the Mount of Olives. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “There will be millions ... who will come up to Zion, besides the Saints of God; they will come to behold the glory of God which will rest upon Zion.”¹⁶ The world’s attention will be focused on The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

¶ Thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at [thy] side. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Thy sons shall come from far into thy midst, and thy daughters shall be carried upon the arms (literally, ‘on the sides’).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “All thy sons are come from afar, and thy daughters shall be carried on shoulders.” Instead of thy side, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has cradles. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, for the second clause, “And thy daughters shall rise up at thy side.”

¶ Gesenius explains: “עַל צֶדֶק at the side, i.e. on the arms where children are carried.” Cowles explains: “The Hebrew means, borne as a child in the arms, and not strictly ‘nursed’ as the English version has it.” Some other translations include: “Thy sons are coming from afar, and thy daughters are brought along in arms” (Leeser); “Thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be carried in the arms” (ASV); and “Your sons shall come from afar, and your daughters shall be carried on the hip” (ESV, also see Henderson, Nägelsbach, and Skinner). הָאֵמְנָה from the root אָמַן, means “not only to nurse, but also to bear, carry” (Keith). TDOT also includes the idea of caring for, and HAL, “to occupy oneself constantly with,” and BDB to support. In other words, to dangle the daughters on the hip, but more than that, to truly take care off a child with parental interest. This clause seems to be a reference to the children of Israel being gathered from every nation under the heavens with the utmost care, as that which is given to those who hear the gospel from the missionaries. Birks well says: “The sons and daughters are ... [the] children [of Israel] returning from their former dispersion, when ‘he that scattered Israel will gather him’ (Jeremiah 31:10).”

¹⁴ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Eventful Times.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 1 January 1871, JD 14:6.

¹⁵ President Heber C. Kimball, “Gathering of the People of God in The Last Days—Return to Jackson County.” Great Salt Lake City, 17 February 1861. JD 8:349. See also “And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel” (Exodus 19:6).

¹⁶ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Kingdom of God.” Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 8 July 1855, JD 3:73-74.

5 Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, [✓] the forces [✓] of the Gentiles shall come unto thee.

✓ or, noise of the sea shall be turned toward thee

✓ ✓ or, wealth

Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Then thou shalt see and be enlightened (or, ‘be made to shine’), and thou shalt be struck with awe (i.e., ‘to fear with reverence’), and thine heart shall be enlarged on account of the terror of sinners.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Then thou wilt look and be filled with awe and astonished at heart.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Then thou shalt see and shine; thou shalt rejoice and thy heart shall enlarge.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Then shalt thou see, and abound, and thy heart shall wonder and be enlarged.” ¶ The context of פחד here is not one of fear but one of joy as in the Peshitta (Ⲥ). פחד is often used with the idea of trembling (TDOT), but one can tremble with joy or to be startled, shiver or tremble (HAL). “Estremecerse de emoción” or tremble with emotion, is what is suggested by the Diccionario de Hebreo Bíblico (DHB). TLOT well explains: “The original meaning of the root, evident throughout, is ‘to quiver, shake’ (cf. Job 4:14 hip ‘il; P. Joüon, Bib 6 [1925]: 175; Becker, op. cit. 7f.). It produces both the meaning ‘to shake with joy’ (ISAIAH 60:5 ‘your heart will shake and become wide [רחב qal],’ Jeremiah 33:9 par. רננ ‘to tremble’) and the dominant meaning ‘to shake with terror.’” AMP thus offers: “Then you shall see and be radiant, and your heart shall thrill and tremble with joy.” ASV renders it: “Then thou shalt see and be radiant, and thy heart shall thrill and be enlarged.” Bishops’ has, “Then thou shalt see this and be glorious, thou shalt maruayle exceedingly, and thyne heart shalbe opened.” HCSB translates it: “Then you will see and be radiant, and your heart will tremble and rejoice.” Horsley likewise has: “Thine heart shall fear and be enlarged] Rather, ‘thine heart shall beat and be enlarged.’ I imagine that פחד, when לב is its subject, may denote the accelerated beating of the heart from the sudden emotion of any other passion as well as fear.” Westermann beautifully says: “Thrilled and trembling with joy, what she [Zion] sees first of all are the strangers bringing Zion’s sons and daughters ... Some editors connect this with the pilgrimage of the nations to Zion in ISAIAH 2 and Micah 4.” In Isaiah we there have: “And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the LORD’s house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem” (ISAIAH 2:2–3). ¶ The next clause through ISAIAH 60:7 seem to speak of the great wealth that would be obtained from the ocean and from the earth, with precious materials for the construction of the House of the Lord—and probably also that of the New Jerusalem as well as Jerusalem. ¶ Because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For the riches of the west shall be transferred unto thee.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Because the riches of the sea and of nations and peoples will pour in upon thee.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “For the abundance (or riches, Lamsa) of the sea shall return to thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has multitude instead of abundance. ¶ Most translations have the idea of the HCSB, “because the riches of the sea will become yours.” Oswalt suggests: “Whenever people who have groped in darkness find the light, especially the light of life, their reaction is gratitude, and that is what is described here.” In other words, the converts would come ready to give all, as they live the law of consecration. ¶ The forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “treasures” for forces. The BPE (Ⲥ) has as in the margin ¶, “And the riches (or strength, Lamsa) of the nations shall come unto thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has strength rather than forces. ¶ Cowles has: “The cause is touched briefly in the last clause where the words ‘abundance’ and ‘forces’ may mean either the wealth or the multitudes of people. Probably both ideas are embraced—the masses of people coming with their substance, as the prophet goes on to show. The view of such incoming hosts, not poverty-stricken hordes, but caravans laden with wealth; people coming to enrich the holy city and adorn her godly temples—how could it fail to agitate her throbbing bosom!” Barnes says: “The forces of the Gentiles] Margin ¶, ‘wealth.’ The margin ¶ has undoubtedly the correct interpretation. The word used here (חיל), usually, indeed, denotes strength, might, valor; an army, forces, host; but it also means riches, wealth (Genesis 24:29; Deuteronomy 8:17-18; Ruth 4:11; Job 20:15. The LXX (Ⲭ) renders the passage, ‘The riches of the sea, and of the nations, and of the people will come over to thee.’ The sense is, that the wealth of the pagan world would be consecrated to the service of the church.” Cambridge points us to Haggai

2:7, “And I will cause to quake all the nations, and the precious things of all the nations shall come hither: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts” (Leeser). ¶ Of the Ten Tribes, see D&C 133:26–28, 30–31).

6 The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold and incense; and they shall shew forth the praises of the LORD.

The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: The Targum (ܬ) has, “A multitude of Arabians shall cover thee round about, the dromedaries of Midian and Holad (according to the Royal Polyglot עִפָּה, the Hebrew text signifying ‘weariness,’ answering to the Arabic هَلَد, ‘weary.’ Midian was a son of Abraham by Keturah, and Ephah = Holad the son of Midian. Genesis 24:4), all of them from Sheba (Sheba was another son of Abraham by Keturah) shall come.” The LXX (8) reads, “And for thee will come herds of camels and those of Madiam and Gaipha will cover thee, and those of Saba will come.” ¶ Keith offers: “‘The multitude [שְׂפָעָה (שְׂפָעָה)—GB] of camels,’ is expressed still more strongly in the original, which signifies ‘an inundation of camels.’ The significance of the expression is understood by those who have witnessed the immense herds of those animals which are reared in the East, and which form a common and large item of property, and an index of wealth.” Alexander similarly has: “Ewald has greatly improved upon the usual translation of שְׂפָעָה by exchanging multitude for stream or flood, the version given by Jerome (inundatio), and not only more expressive than the other, but in perfect accordance with the etymology, and with the usage of the noun itself in Job 22:11, 38:34 ... This explanation of שְׂפָעָה throws light upon the phrase shall cover thee, a term elsewhere applied to water (e.g. ISAIAH 11:9), and suggesting here the poetical idea of a city not merely thronged but flooded with Arabian caravans.” Nägelsbach points out: “The multitude of camels glorified thee] A multitude of camels, without the definite article [i.e., a rather than the, without the ה]—GB].” Whitehouse notes: “The word multitude in the original properly means abundance or overflow (applied to water in Job 22:2, 38:34, to animals, i.e. horses, in Ezekiel 26:10, and to human beings in 2 Kings 9:17).” Birks, speaking of ‘A stream of camels.’ A lively figure to describe their constant succession, laden with Eastern treasures. Not the Queen of the South alone, as in the days of Solomon, nor a few, like the wise men, but ‘all they from Sheba shall come’ with tributes of which these were only dim earnest. Midian, Ephah, Sheba, Kedar, Nebaioth, all children of Abraham after the flesh, the sons of Keturah (i.e. incense) and of Ishmael (God shall hear), will have a main share in the promise, when the words are fulfilled;—‘In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed,’ (Genesis 22:18; Acts 3:25).” Rawlinson notes: “The ‘Sheba’ intended is doubtless that whose queen visited Solomon, and brought with her gold in abundance, and ‘of spices very great store, and precious stones’ (1 Kings 10:10) ... The dromedaries] Rather, the young camels, or the camel colts ... they (the camels of Midian and Ephah) shall come all together from Sheba.” Gesenius explains: “בֶּכֶר a young he-camel, already fit for carrying light burdens ... To this answers the Arab. بَكْر a young camel, which they observe signifies the same age as الغَي a young man, in men.” Henderson says that Arabs refer to the camel as “the ship of the desert.” ¶ President Heber C. Kimball explained: “Who is to gather the people of God? You all say that we are to become a kingdom of kings and priests, of queens and priestesses; and the Bible supports this doctrine. Now, the truth is, you are the very kings and priests that have got to gather the Saints, and your wives have got to school them and nurse them. I might put this in different language, but this will answer the purpose and convey to you the true meaning of the text. We are informed in the Bible that in the last days the sons of God shall be brought from afar, and his daughters from the ends of the earth; and also that the elect will be gathered from the four quarters of the globe. Now, this will most assuredly be fulfilled, and this is the work which you and I have got to perform. How shall we bring them together? The Scriptures say they shall come upon swift beasts and dromedaries; and I will add mules and oxen.”¹⁷ President Orson Hyde has: “The Savior says, the kingdom of heaven is like a fish net that is cast into the sea, which took of every kind, both good and bad, and by and by they brought the net to the shore, and gathered the good into vessels, and cast the bad away. So shall it be in the last days, in the end, when the gathering dispensation shall be introduced, and the Gospel net be drawn to shore; not in some foreign clime or mountain, beyond the bounds of time and space; but on the shore that skirts the margin of the water, as testified by this figure; so on earth, the gathering of the people will be. We are also told the manner in which they shall come. They shall come upon swift beasts upon dromedaries and camels; and the ships of Tarshish shall bear them home, and a highway shall be cast up for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in. That highway is not an immaterial one, that leads to mansions in the sky, but it is a highway that has to be cast up on earth; and it may be that the very railroads that are being cast up are one means by which this operation of the gathering will be greatly facilitated ... The old Prophet had his eye upon the increased speed of ships; but our translators have made him to say that swift messengers¹⁸ shall be sent to the nations afar off in vessels of bulrushes ...”¹⁹ ¶ They shall bring gold and incense; and they shall shew forth the praises of the LORD. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They shall be laden with gold and frankincense, and those that are coming with them, shall shew forth the praises of the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Bringing gold and will also bring frankincense, and with joy proclaim the salvation of the Lord.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “They shall bring gold and frankincense, and shall publish abroad the praises of the LORD.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Bringing gold and frankincense: and shewing forth praise to the Lord.” ¶ These precious materials were among those brought to the child Christ: “And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh” (Matthew 2:11). It is clear from ISAIAH 60 that similar gifts will be poured out in the end of days. Also note the hymns of praises towards the Lord.

¹⁷ President Heber C. Kimball, “Gathering of the People of God in The Last Days—Return to Jackson County.” Great Salt Lake City, 17 February 1861. JD 8:349.

7 All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory.

All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Arabians” for Kedar. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And all the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together; and the rams of Nabaioth will come.”

¶ Cowles reminds us: “Nebaioth and Keder are Arab names. They were respectively the first and second sons of Ishmael (Genesis 25:13).” Wade has: “shall minister unto thee] i.e., shall serve thy needs in providing victims for thy sacrifices (cf. ISAIAH 60:10; 56:6).” The term flocks, לְבָנִים, here, all flocks, stand for the “Small cattle, i.e., sheep and goats,” while rams, אֵילִם, are the male sheep. The Lord promised that Ishmael’s posterity would also be blessed. Brother James A. Toronto shared: “As early as 1855, at a time when Christian literature generally ridiculed Muhammad as the Antichrist and the archenemy of Western civilization, Elders George A. Smith (1817–75) and Parley P. Pratt (1807–57) of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles delivered lengthy sermons ... speaking highly of Muhammad’s leadership. Elder Smith observed that Muhammad was ‘descended from Abraham and was no doubt raised up by God on purpose’ to preach against idolatry ... Elder Pratt went on to express his admiration for Muhammad’s teachings, asserting that ‘upon the whole, ... [Muslims] have better morals and better institutions than many Christian nations.’ Latter-day Saint appreciation of Muhammad’s role in history can also be found in the 1978 First Presidency statement regarding God’s love for all mankind. This declaration specifically mentions Muhammad as one of ‘the great religious leaders of the world’ who received ‘a portion of God’s light’ and affirms that ‘moral truths were given to [these leaders] by God to enlighten whole nations and to bring a higher level of understanding to individuals.’”²⁰ ¶ They shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “offered up with acceptance” instead of come up with acceptance. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And acceptable offerings will be made on mine altar, and my house of prayer will be glorified.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “They shall be offered upon my acceptable altar, and I will glorify the house of my majesty.” ¶ THE acceptable sacrifice would be provided by the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Cowles has: “Isaiah in vision sees far in the future the glorious diffusion of the gospel among the nations of the earth and its wonderful fruits in the complete and unreserved consecration of wealth and of soul to the service and worship of God.” ¶ Birks says: “The question of the bearing of this passage on the revival of animal sacrifice is too wide for a brief and passing notice.” Jennings acknowledges that many squirm with the idea of a renewal of animal sacrifice, but he accepts it: “No Christian will admit for a moment that any animal sacrifice can ever rival, and still less replace, that one Offering, the efficacy of which has abolished them in that sense of rivalry forever. That is surely true. But that must not be allowed to evaporate all meaning from what is here so clearly stated, that in a coming day Israel’s sacrifices shall be accepted.” The Prophet Joseph Smith taught that animal sacrifice would be restored in the last days: “These sacrifices, as well as

¹⁸ See ISAIAH 18.

¹⁹ President Orson Hyde, “Gathering the Saints.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 8 October 1854. JD 2:62a.

²⁰ James A. Toronto, “A Latter-day Saint Perspective on Muhammad.” Ensign, August 2000.

every ordinance belonging to the priesthood, will, when the temple of the Lord shall be built [in Jerusalem—GB], and the sons of Levi be purified, be fully restored and attended to in all their powers, ramifications and blessings.”²¹

8 Who [are] these [that] fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Who are these that are coming openly like swift clouds, and tarry not? the captives of Israel, who are gathered together, come to their land, lo, as doves which return to their dove-houses.” The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “Who are those? They are flying like clouds, and like doves with their young towards me!” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Who are these, that fly as clouds, and as doves to their windows?” ¶ Regarding אֲרָבֵיתָהּ-אֵל, Horsley suggests, “Rather, ‘to their holes.’ The wooden boxes, with a narrow entrance to each, usually fixed against the sides of houses, for doves to make their nests in, are commonly called pigeon-holes, and seem to be intended here.” Several exegetes, including Alexander, describe the holes as latticed windows. Gesenius gives as one of the acceptations of אֲרָבֵיתָהּ, a dove house. ¶ In terms of the gathering of Israel, Birks has: “The ships of Tarshish, with their outspread sails, crowding the seas to restore the wanderers [i.e., the scattered of Israel, also see the idea of fast vessels in ISAIAH 18—GB], are compared to a fleecy cloud before the wind, or doves flocking home to their young.” Cowles says: “The spirit of the verse is analogous to that of ISAIAH 49:21. ‘Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these? Whence come these throngs of my children?’ Surprise and joy blend in their strongest and most thrilling emotions.” Keith has: “This verse describes the return of the remnant of Israel by the comparison of a cloud and of a flight of doves. These may denote either the numbers of Israel, or the rapidity of their return, or both may be combined. A cloud is a scriptural symbol of numbers, —‘so great a cloud of witnesses,’ —and a cloud driven rapidly before the wind is a natural symbol of speed. Doves also, from their multitude in the East, and from the celerity of their flight on their return in the evening to their dove-cots to their young, from every quarter of the surrounding country over which they have scattered themselves, symbolize the same things. Probably, however, the figure is here a single one, in allusion to the fact that in the East, as in some other countries, the flights of doves are often on so great a scale as to extend as far as the eye can reach, obscuring the sun and literally forming a cloud. The suddenness of Israel’s final return is repeatedly foretold, — ‘Shall a nation be born in one day?’” Cheyne connects these doves to the gathering of Israel as spoken in Hosea: “They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove out of the land of Assyria: and I will place them in their houses, saith the LORD” (Hosea 11:11). ¶ Elder John Longden commented: “Is the airplane flying in the skies from one country to another a sign? The heavens are filled with them, and people are fulfilling the prophecy of ISAIAH 60:8. ‘Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?’”²² Elder Charles W. Penrose taught: “Those who receive the Gospel come in here ‘as the doves to their windows.’ From the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, God is gathering His elect from the four quarters of the earth.”²³ Elder Penrose also said: “Isaiah saw [the gathered of Israel] coming ‘as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows;’ and through him the Lord has said, ‘I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth’ (ISAIAH 43:6).”²⁴ ¶ President John Taylor wrote, “It may be proper here to remark, that there will be two places of gathering ... the Jews are to be gathered to Jerusalem in unbelief, as spoken of in Zechariah; and when the Messiah appears among them, being ignorant of Jesus, they shall ask, ‘What are these wounds in their hands?’ Then he shall answer, ‘Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends’ (Zechariah 13:6). And then a fountain shall be opened for the house of David, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and they will enter into the covenant by baptism (Zechariah 13:1). But the people of Zion, the Lord will take them one of a city, and two of a family, and bring them there, and give them pastors after his own heart, that shall feed them with knowledge and understanding (Jeremiah 3:14,15) ... Jesus said, ‘My sheep hear my voice, and know me, and follow me, and a stranger they will not follow, for they know not the voice of strangers.’ Those who love truth, and desire to be governed by it, will embrace it, and enter into the covenant which the Lord will make with his people in the last days, and be gathered with them; they will be taught of the Lord in Zion, will form his kingdom on the earth, and will be prepared for the Lord when he comes to take possession of his kingdom ... The prophets hailed this day with pleasure [when Zion would be built], as the ushering in of those glorious times, which were to follow ... Isaiah with rapture gazed upon the scene, and in ecstasy cried out, ‘Who are these

²¹ HC 4:207-12; in Discourses of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

²² Elder John Longden, “The Second Coming of Christ.” April 1964 General Conference.

²³ Elder Charles W. Penrose, “Divisions of Modern Christendom.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 17 July 1881, JD 22:167-168.

²⁴ Elder Charles W. Penrose, “Partaking of the Lord’s Supper.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 1 May 1880, JD 22:95a.

that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows? Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring they sons from afar, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord they God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee. And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee’ (ISAIAH 60:8-10).”²⁵ ¶ President George Q. Cannon taught: “When I hear of people coming from remote lands, impelled by their faith, who have heard the preaching of the Elders who have gone forth in their weakness, and in many instances, yes, in the most of instances, in their scholastic ignorance, to proclaim the Gospel—when I see the wonderful results of their preaching, men and women from foreign lands with the testimony of God in their hearts, that this is His work, which they have received through repentance and being baptized by a man having the authority, each man testifying in his own language ... all flocking together like doves to their master’s windows, many of them never having seen an Elder from Utah, but having heard men who had the authority to teach this Gospel—all coming from the various points of the compass, testifying in all humility and in the name of Jesus, that God has given unto them a knowledge of the truth—when I see these things my heart is filled with gladness and thanksgiving.”²⁶ ¶ President Brigham Young taught specifically of the restoration of the Lamanites: “The kingdom rises, increases, and spreads out to the right and left—it goes to the east, to the west, to the north, and to the south; and when the Gentiles are faithfully warned by the words of life freely given to them, and they utterly reject them, you will then find that the blood of Abraham that is scattered upon the islands of the sea and on this continent, will come like doves to the windows, and like clouds before a mighty torrent of wind. They will come and acknowledge the truth, though not at once, and they will greatly increase in the knowledge of their fathers. We can say to the praise of God’s name, and to the praise of the industry of the Saints, that this will commence, and hundreds and thousands of them begin to turn from their wickedness, forsake their folly and their loathsome degradation, wash themselves, and begin to live more as men and women should, and to learn at the hands of the servants of God. They will go into the waters of baptism, confessing their sins, and taking upon them the new and everlasting covenant, by thousands; and it will increase; and many generations will not pass away before they become a white and delightsome people (2 Nephi 30:6).”²⁷ Elder Orson Pratt felt that these words also applied to the Gentile nations: “Now how do we know, but when the gates of Zion shall be open to the nations, that the Gentiles will come flocking in, like a flowing stream? A flowing stream is one that runs continually; and the Gentiles will, in that day, come to us as a flowing stream (ISAIAH 66:12) and we shall have to set our gates open continually (ISAIAH 60:11), they will come as clouds and as doves in large flocks.”²⁸ Elder Orson Hyde, in his very last discourse, taught: “The Elders of this Church, my brethren and sisters, have faithfully labored during the last half century in almost every nation on the globe ... knowing that the world would not be converted by the preaching of the Gospel ... [yet those who would be gathered] will ‘come like clouds, and like doves to their windows.’”²⁹

²⁵ Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852. Also see President John Taylor, “Gathering.” 17th Ward Meetinghouse, 15 December 1878, JD 20:226. Also see Elder John Taylor, “Revelation.” Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 20 September 1857, JD 5:264.

²⁶ President George Q. Cannon, “Hopes for the Future.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 24 September 1882, JD 24:106.

vv. 9-14. More is taught about the gathering of Israel. The nations would come and bring their resources and build up temples to the Lord. Henderson says: “Monarchs shall regard it as a privilege to aid in the work, by employing whatever legitimate influence they may possess in advancing [the restoring Judah to the land of Israel].”

9 ¶ Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the LORD thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee.

Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish (תַּרְשִׁישׁ) first. See ISAIAH 23:1. The Targum (ܬ) has, “Surely, the isles shall wait for my Word, and those that embark in the ships of the sea.” The LXX (Θ) reads, “For me the islands waited, and among the first the ships of Tarsis.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For, the islands wait for me, and the ships of the sea in the beginning.” ¶ The Isles, as we have said throughout, often represent the American Continent, Hawaii and the South Pacific and Rapa Nui, where a large number of persons belong to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Rawlinson has: “The ‘isles,’ or maritime countries of the West, have long waited for a Redeemer.” Not just a Redeemer, but the Redeemer, as we know from the Book of Mormon, where the coming of Christ was much anticipated and known. To wait means to serve the Lord. The idea of vessels being used to gather Israel—or to send latter-day Saint missionaries to recover her we argued, along with Horsley, in ISAIAH 18 (please see notes there, especially about missionaries bringing a present to the Lord). Birks has: “The judgment (ISAIAH 2:16), on ‘the ships of Tarshish’ and ‘all their pleasant merchandise,’ is here exchanged for a blessing, and their merchandise will become ‘holiness to the Lord’ (ISAIAH 23:14, 18) ... Britain and America, the great maritime powers, will probably take precedence in the steps which minister to Israel’s final recovery.” So also Keith, “The assistance which will be given by other nations in forwarding the return of Israel, and in re-establishing them in their own land, is here foretold.” Although Alexander himself ridicules the idea, his comments are stimulating: “It is an interesting question, therefore, what we are to understand in this connection by the ships of Tarshish, to which such extraordinary prominence is given in the work of restoration ... the ships of Tarshish are ... identified with the commercial navy of Great Britain and perhaps America ... consisting of a literal return to the literal Jerusalem.” ¶ The ships of Tarshish seem to have originally been ships built in Spain, but here they may well represent a type. President Orson Hyde explained: “They shall come upon swift beasts, upon dromedaries and camels; and the ships of Tarshish shall bear them home, and a highway shall be cast up for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in.”³⁰ These speak of both the restoration of Ephraim (northern tribes) and of Judah (southern tribes). ¶ To bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “The hand that stretcheth out their sails shall be first (or, ‘as at the first’), to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “To bring thy children from afar and their silver and their gold with them.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, for the first clause, “That I may bring thy sons from afar.” ¶ Cowles suggests: “[Bringing] their silver and their gold with them, as the best proof that their hearts are in this coming, and with a Hebrew reference also to beautifying and furnishing God’s temple at Jerusalem ...” Daniel H. Ludlow quotes Elder Woodruff as the latter prophesied regarding the riches of the Jews being used to bring back Judah to the land of Israel: “The time is not far distant when the rich men among the Jews may be called upon to use their abundant wealth to gather the dispersed of Judah and purchase the ancient dwelling places of their fathers in and about Jerusalem and rebuild the holy city and temple ... The Lord has decreed that the Jews should be gathered from all the Gentile nations where they have been driven, into their own land, in fulfillment of the words of Moses their law-giver (MS 41:244, also see JD 22:173)”³¹ ¶ As I have read accounts of the formation of latter-day Israel, these prophesies have been fulfilled. I wonder if these treasures of silver and gold do not also represent much more than riches, but also other contributions such as knowledge of the arts and sciences; government and sport; medicine and construction of temples and other buildings; and all manner of wisdom, to help build Zion and uplift others. When we look at the top scholars in most fields of endeavor, do we not find LDS among them? ¶ Unto the name of the LORD thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And because of the holy name of the Lord, and because the Holy One of Israel is glorious.” ¶ Whitehouse suggests: “To the name of Yahweh” Here ‘name,’ as elsewhere, means personal presence.” Gill has: “That is, their persons shall be brought unto him, and their riches also; they shall give up themselves, and all they have, to the Lord, and devote themselves and their substance to his glory, and the good of his interest.” So also Barnes who says: “The idea is, that all this wealth would be devoted to Yahweh, and employed in his service ... [and because he hath glorified thee] He has honored thee by imparting to thee the true religion.”

²⁷ President Brigham Young, “God Will Take Care of His Own Work.” Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 28 June 1857, JD 4:371.

²⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, “Redemption of Zion.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 20 May 1855, JD 3:16a.

²⁹ Substance of a Discourse by Elder Orson Hyde, “Preparation for Coming Events.” Delivered at Mount Pleasant, Sanpete County, Utah, on 3 November 1878, said to have been the last delivered by him while living in the flesh, JD 20:99b.

10 And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favour have I had mercy on thee.

And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Therefore strangers shall rebuild thy walls and their kings shall wait upon thee.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has children instead of sons. Oswalt well suggests regarding בְּנֵי-יָכָר: “sons of foreigners” The presence of the same phrase in ISAIAH 56:3, 6 makes plain that the persons referred to here are not to be considered as slaves but as those who have joined themselves to the covenant.” Several exegetes point out that kings would not be coerced into service but would do so voluntarily. Luther suggests that even kings shall be converts to the cause of Christ. ¶ And their kings shall minister unto thee. In connection to the kings, Shalom Paul mentions that שָׂרָה generally, but not always, is associated with temple service. Keith remarks: “The singular circumstance of the most despised of nations becoming the most honoured, is often predicted in language very similar to the text; ‘The Lord will yet choose Israel—and the people shall take them and bring them to their place, and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the Lord for servants and for handmaids,’ (ISAIAH 14:1-2a); ‘They shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord³² out of all nations, upon horses and in chariots, to my holy mountain Jerusalem’ (ISAIAH 66:20) ... It may even be said that the work of ministering to Israel by kings is already on a small scale begun. The monarchs of England and Prussia have erected a Protestant church in Jerusalem, and the recent presence of consuls there from different kingdoms [give in a small scale weight to these prophecies of Isaiah].” ¶ President Heber C. Kimball spoke, as we said, of a kingdom of kings and priests, of queens and priestesses. President John Taylor said, “And thus we will go on, and God will assist us in the work in which we are engaged. He will yet make us the richest of all people.³³ He will pour wealth into our laps, inasmuch as we keep His commandments. And what else is said? ‘Sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee’ (ISAIAH 60:10). Men shall call you the ministers of our God (ISAIAH 61:6). And we want to minister for God in time and throughout the eternities that are to come.”³⁴ ¶ For in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favour have I had mercy on thee. The Targum (Ⓢ) only contains the second clause. The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “For on account of my wrath I smote thee, but for mercy’s sake I have loved thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, “For in my wrath have I struck thee, and in my reconciliation have I had mercy upon thee.” ¶ This reminds us of ISAIAH 54:7-8: “For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer.” It is part of the Hosea Principle, wherein the Lord, after chastising us, will manifest His love for us.

³⁰ President Orson Hyde, “Gathering the Saints.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 8 October 1854, JD 2:62.

³¹ Daniel H. Ludlow, Companion to your study of the Old Testament. Also see David B. Galbraith, D. Kelly Ogden, and Andrew C. Skinner, Jerusalem: The Eternal City, p.4, 527, who also quote Zechariah 14:14. Emphasis added.

³² Once again, see ISAIAH 18.

³³ President Brigham Young warned that these riches would yet constitute the greatest test for the Latter-day Saints: “The worst fear I have about this people is that they will get rich in this country, forget God and His people, wax fat, and kick themselves out of the Church and go to hell. This people will stand mobbing, robbing, poverty, and all manner of persecution and be true. But my greatest fear is that they cannot stand wealth” (Doctrine and Covenants and Church History Student Study Guide. The Legacy of President Brigham Young: A Latter-day Moses).

³⁴ President John Taylor, “Manifestations to Be Looked For.” Delivered at the time of the Dedication of the Temple, in the Tabernacle, Logan, Cache County, 18 May 1884, JD 187-188.

11 Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that [men] may bring unto thee the forces[✓] of the Gentiles, and [that] their kings [may be] brought.

✓ or, wealth

Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night. The LXX (Ⓢ) reads, “And thy gates shall be open continually (by day or by night they shall not be shut).” Birks, citing Revelation 21:25, explains at least one reason why the gates will be open continually, “And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.” Cowles suggests: “So great is the pressure upon her of these throngs of returning converts, that her gates must needs stand open day and night.” Henderson, who wrote in the 19th Century, said: “Modern travelers greatly complain of the inconvenience to which they are put, when they do not reach Jerusalem before the gates are closed.” Of this verse, Alexander says: “The two ideas expressed are those of unobstructed access and undisturbed tranquility.” ¶ President Spencer W. Kimball spoke about the increasing amount of work to be carried out in the temples: “The day is coming and not too far ahead of us when all temples on this earth will be going night and day ... There will be a corps of workers night and day almost to exhaustion, because of the importance of the work and the great number of people who lie asleep in the eternity and who are craving, needing, the blessings that can come to them (Address given at Priesthood Genealogy Seminar Banquet, Aug. 4, 1977, Archives of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 4-5).”³⁵ ¶ Elder Orson Pratt said: “We shall in due time walk forth into Jackson County and build up the waste places of Zion. We shall erect in that county a beautiful city after the order and pattern that the Lord shall reveal, part of which has already been revealed. God intends to have a city built up that will never be destroyed nor overcome, but that will exist while eternity shall endure; and he will point out the pattern and show the order of architecture; he will show unto his servants the nature of the streets and the pavement thereof, the kind of precious stones that shall enter into the buildings, the nature of the rock and precious stones that will adorn the gates and the walls of that city; for the gates will be open continually says the Prophet Isaiah, that men may bring in the force of the Gentiles. The nature of the city of Zion is nowhere fully described. John the revelator has described in his 21st chapter, two cities coming down from God out of heaven. The first one is the New Jerusalem. That will come down on the land of Joseph. After John had seen that, one of the angels who had one of the vials of the seven last plagues came to him and said, ‘Come hither, John, and I will show you another city, that is that great city, the holy Jerusalem.’ He took him to the summit of a high mountain and showed him that great city descending from God out of heaven, and John describes that city, the height of its walls, the number of its gates, the names that are to be upon the gates, and a great many particulars in relation to that city are clearly revealed. But the New Jerusalem is nowhere so fully described, only as the Psalmist David says, ‘Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King.’ David also says, in speaking of this same city, ‘Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.’ From these declarations we can at least believe that Zion will be a very beautiful city—‘the perfection of beauty,’ whether it is constructed after the order of the old Jerusalem or not. Suffice it to say that God by revelation will inspire his servants and will dictate to them the order of the buildings of that city—the number and width of the streets, the kind of houses, the character of the Temple that is to be built therein, the kind of rock, timber and the various materials that will have to be brought from a distance to enter into the composition of that beautiful city.”³⁶ ¶ That [men] may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and [that] their kings [may be] brought. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “treasures” for forces; and specifies that these kings shall be brought in chains. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “To introduce to thee the wealth of nations and their kings pompously attended.” ¶ Once again, I like the idea of the kings and priests, and queens and priestesses that President Heber C. Kimball has spoken off above, as Israel is gathered in the last days. Birks makes a similar comment: “‘Their kings shall be brought,’ not as reluctant captives, but willing trophies of the love and grace of the King of Zion [i.e., of Jesus Christ—GB].” ¶ The forces of the Gentiles, חֵיל גּוֹיִם, is rendered by many as the wealth of the nations, or as the riches of the nations. Additional definitions of חֵיל include ability, strength, virtue and hosts (Gesenius) or armies (HAL). What are the wealth or riches of the nations but the converts of the house of Israel, the gift to the Lord mentioned in ISAIAH 18:7a, “In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled.” Elder Orson Pratt said: “Mighty nations not a few, ere long will come up to Zion to seek wisdom and knowledge from the counselors in Zion ... [And people shall say] ‘surely the God of Israel is in your midst. Come, let us go up to Zion, let us hear from the wise legislators of Zion, and let us hear the laws proclaimed therein; let us learn of the wisdom that dwells in the servants of the Most High’ ... and the gates of Zion will be open day and night, and never be shut, to admit the forces that will come rushing in from all nations, to learn the wisdom, knowledge, and instruction that are poured out from the heavens upon the servants of the Most High.”³⁷ Even now, dignitaries from the nations of the world come to Salt Lake City and meet with the Brethren, and inquire of the Church regarding food storage, tithing, and a host of other topics, just as Elder Pratt explained. Cheyne suggests that the kings of the earth will be anxious to have positive dealings with Israel because: “The prosperity of Gentile nations shall depend on their relations to Israel.”

³⁵ The Life and Ministry of Spencer W. Kimball. Teachings of Presidents of the Church: Spencer W. Kimball, (2006), xiv-xxxvii.

³⁶ Elder Orson Pratt, “Return to Jackson County—Glory of Zion.” 16th Ward Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, 9 March 1873, JD 15:365. Elder Orson Pratt also observed: “Hundreds and thousands, and tens of thousands of the Gentiles among the various nations of the earth will yet bow to the fulness of the Gospel; and they will come, and the gates of Zion will not be shut day nor night, that the forces of the Gentiles may flow unto her. The Lord will continue to work among both Israel and Gentiles [most likely meant Gentile nations—GB], and His power will increase, the more we send the Gospel among Israel; the more the servants of God seek for the seed of Jacob, the more will the powers of heaven be displayed for the redemption of that people. They are the promised seed; God has not forgotten the prayers of their fathers; Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob prayed for their posterity, and they had faith for them, and in them all the nations of the earth are to be blessed ... Then will be fulfilled that which was written by the Prophet Ezekiel, that the Lord will gather them with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with fury poured out: and He will assemble them in the wilderness, and there will He plead with them face to face, like as He plead with their fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt; thus saith the Lord, by the mouth of Ezekiel. He will plead with them by His power; He will plead with them by His angels; and He will plead with them by the revelation of His own face.” Elder Orson Pratt, “Preaching to Israel—The Times of the Gentiles.” New Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 7 April 1855. JD 2: 262–263.

12 For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, [those] nations shall be utterly wasted.

For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish. The Targum (ⲧ) makes these nations as serving Jerusalem. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “For the nations and kings which will not serve thee shall perish.” Birks has: “This promise, applied literally to Zion and the people of Israel, has nothing strange and unaccountable (Alexander). It results naturally from the whole tenour of sacred history. The first promise to Abraham contains the germ of this threatening, ‘I will curse him that curseth thee.’ Subordination, in heaven and earth, is the great law of the kingdom of God. To refuse honour to those whom God has honoured, is rebellion against His authority. When ‘the Holy One of Israel’ crowns His ancient people with signal honour after ages of judgment and sorrow, the sons of pride alone will find it strange or irksome to honour God himself in the people of His choice; and them that walk in pride He is able to abase.” Henderson notes: “In our most esteemed commentaries there is a perpetual vacillancy between the literal and the spiritual, the Jews and the Gentiles, the past and the future, which is anything but satisfactory. From many of them, indeed, it is evident that their authors, notwithstanding their strong propensity to apply these predictions to the past and present privileges of the Christian Church, as made up of Gentile converts, and the still fuller enjoyment of these privileges during the Millennium, have been compelled to admit that the Jews are not altogether to be excluded, though they still begrudge them a reestablishment, as a converted community, in the land of Palestine ... Not that he loses sight of the Gentiles: on the contrary, they are repeatedly brought forward, though it certainly is rather for the purpose of gracing the triumphs of his own people, than of exhibiting them in the all-engrossing light in which they have usually been presented.” Even the so called Gentiles mentioned as the converts of the latter-days are, for the most part, but the literal children of scattered Israel throughout the Gentile nations. ¶ Cowles has: “All kings and all people must come to Christ to serve him in his Zion, or must perish.” Orelli points us to Zechariah: “And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain” (Zechariah 14:16-17, emphasis added—see Rain in Due Season for the rain symbolism). ¶ The United States was formed under the motto, “In God we Trust.” To the degree this was true in former days, she was blessed. Elder Orson Pratt taught: “What will become of this great republic ... which is spreading forth continually? If they will comply with the ordinances of Zion, repent of their sins and be prepared for this great and glorious day, God will save them; but if they will not they will be utterly wasted away.”³⁸ ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff testified: “The hand of God has guided this Church from its incipency to the present time. God will continue to direct its affairs, and there is no power on the earth or under the earth that can ever stop its progress, for he himself, has decreed that the Zion of the latter days shall never be overthrown; but on the contrary, as he has said through the mouth of the Prophet Isaiah, ‘For the nation and the kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.’ Pretty strong doctrine to be taught by a humble man of God. Nevertheless, time will bring it about and it is not in the power of man to prevent it. I am a believer in revelation. I am a believer, from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet, with every particle of spirit in me, that God will bring about, literally and to the very letter, all that he has spoken through his servants, ancient and modern.”³⁹ Elder Wilford Woodruff also said: “Point me out an individual or a people who have ever taken a stand against Joseph Smith or Brigham Young, the Zion of God or the Elders of Israel, and who have sought to overthrow this work, but what the curse of God has rested upon them. Show me one of that class who has not gone down to the dust, and as it has been in days past so it will be in days to come. Woe to that nation, kindred, tongue and people under the whole heavens who war against Zion in the latter days; every weapon shall be broken that is formed against her, and that nation that will not serve her shall be utterly wasted away saith the Lord of hosts.”⁴⁰ ¶ Yea, [those] nations shall be utterly wasted. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Such nations indeed shall be utterly laid waste.” Instead of wasted, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has destroyed by the sword (Lamsa) / thrust through by the sword (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓔ) has, “And the Gentiles shall be wasted with desolation.” ¶ Elder Orson Hyde taught, speaking of the governmental persecutions related to the time when the members of the Church practiced plural marriage: “I have no objection to any and all federal officers coming here to execute the laws, impartially in the spirit of justice and truth. I say, they have my cordial good will to do so. But when they come full of wrath, with a determination to immortalize their names by squelching out ‘Mormonism,’ pandering to the prejudices of an ungodly age, I cannot find language sufficiently strong to express my disapproval and contempt for their administration ... ‘For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.’”⁴¹ Elder Charles W. Penrose testified: “I will bear my testimony to this congregation in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that this is not the work of man; that ‘Mormonism’ is the work of the Great God, and no power can overturn it. And I testify further, that every nation and kingdom that shall rise against this work shall perish and be utterly wasted away.”⁴²

³⁷ Elder Orson Pratt, “Emigration of the Saints and the Nations.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 7 October 1854, JD 2:60-61.

³⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, “Zion.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 March 1872. JD 14:355b.

³⁹ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Faith.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 June 1878. JD 19:363.

⁴⁰ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Zion to Be Built Up.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Semi-Annual Conference, 8 October 1873. JD 16:271-272.

⁴¹ Elder Orson Hyde, “The Judgments of God upon the Wicked—Opposition to Polygamy.” Mount Pleasant, Sanpete County, Utah, 3 November 1878, said to have been the last delivered by him while living in the flesh. JD 20:98-99.

13 The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious.

The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “The glory of Lebanon also shall come to thee, with the cypress and the pine and the cedar, to adorn the place which is dedicated to me.” ¶ Jenour notes: “The place of my sanctuary means the temple.” Keith speaks here about the construction of the latter-day temple in Jerusalem, for the glory of Israel. Rabbi Ibn Ezra has: “To beautify the place of my sanctuary] To build the house of the Lord.” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff testified: “The predictions of the Bible never would have been fulfilled, had not the Lord, in these last days raised up a prophet as an instrument in his hands to again establish his Gospel on the earth, and gather together the house of Israel to the valleys of these everlasting hills, according to his decree to old father Jacob; and his seed have yet to make this western desert to blossom as the rose, bringing forth ‘the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary.’ The whole history of this people has been foretold by the prophet Isaiah, thousands of years ago; and it has been a steady growth from the commencement to the present.”⁴³ ¶ And I will make the place of my feet glorious. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Shekinah” for feet. ¶ The sense I make of the expression place of my feet is that it relates to the Holy Temples to be established in the last days. Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, explains that the Temple is “God’s footstool.” Birks explains: “The place of God’s feet denotes sometimes the Ark of the Covenant (1 Chronicles 28:2; Psalm 99:5; sometimes the temple (Ezekiel 43:7).” Cowles has: “In figure, this rebuilds Jerusalem and her temple with cedars of Lebanon and all the best varieties of choice wood.—By ‘the place of my sanctuary,’ some understand the city as being the locality of the temple—perhaps correctly.

⁴² Elder Charles W. Penrose, “Difference Between the Latter-Day Saints and All Other Professing Christians,” Salt Lake Assembly Hall, 11 April 1880. JD 21:145b. Also see Elder Wilford Woodruff, “No Man Can Build Up the Church of Christ without the Priesthood,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 6 June 1880. JD 21:125; and President Spencer W. Kimball, “The Time to Labor Is Now,” October 1975 General Conference.

⁴³ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Faith—Fulfillment of Prophecy,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 June 1878. JD 19:359.

‘The place’ of Jehovah’s feet conceives of the city as his foot-stool, even as in ISAIAH 66:1, he represents the earth to be. ‘Heaven is my throne and the earth my footstool.’ In this sense Jerusalem was yet more specially the place of his feet.” Shalom Paul tells us that in Psalm 132:7, “The Temple is also referred to as הַדְּרוֹם רַגְלָיו (‘footstool’).” ¶ President Daniel H. Wells said, “It is the inestimable privilege of this people, if they will receive and honor it, to establish the principles of righteousness and truth, and to establish that kingdom which shall stand forever and ever ... We want to build up cities, and to cultivate and beautify the earth, and make the place of the Lord’s feet glorious. Every excellence, power, and blessing belongs to the Saints of the Most High God, if they will prove themselves worthy to receive them. We have means to perform foreign missions, to save the people; we have also means at home to bring forth the grain, to build up cities and temples, and to go forth upon the right and upon the left to protect the right, and to develop the resources of the land into which the Lord has brought us; to shield ourselves from the wicked and ungodly, and thwart them in all things.”⁴⁴

14 The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee, The city of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.

The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “enslaved” for afflicted. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And to thee shall come trembling the sons of them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓐ) has, “And the children of them that afflict thee, shall come bowing down to thee.” ¶ Cowles explains: “Public feeling toward the church of God is reversed; her old enemies bow submissively and humble themselves low at her feet, acknowledging that the true God is with her—there and there only.” In ISAIAH 18:2 we saw מְבוֹסָה for a nation treaded down, while here we have a people afflicted, מַעֲנִיָּה, also defined as depressed or oppressed (Gesenius). ¶ The expression used here, to come bending, means to bow down. Alexander has: “The act described is the oriental prostration as a sign of the profoundest reverence.” Beside the physical prostration, there is quite often a self-effacing manner in conversation where one of the parties seems to come bending. ¶ Elder George A. Smith said: “They will come to us by thousands by-and-by, saying—‘Can you not feed us?’⁴⁵ Can you not do something for us?’ It is said by the prophets they shall come bending, and shall say you are the priests of the Lord (ISAIAH 61:6). What priest could administer greater earthly blessings than food to the hungry, who have fled from a country where the sword, famine, and pestilence were sweeping away their thousands?”⁴⁶ ¶ And all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “provoked the to anger” for despised. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Who afflicted and humbled thee.” Instead of despised, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has provoked. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And all that slandered thee shall worship the steps of thy feet.” ¶ Bow down is not a literal act but rather an expression of gratitude. The only one to whom we may bow is to God. My feeling is that this clause refers to the work that will take place in the Spirit World, or the work that will take place among some who have despised us here on earth. Yet we will have the opportunity to serve them as we bringing the saving ordinances into their lives. These individuals will be filled with gratitude. It will also be speaking of the hungry who will be so grateful to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and its members, for the service carried forth in their behalf—which already takes place after earthquakes, floods and other natural disasters. How beautiful it is to serve those who may have despised us. What joy it brings to our heart to see their hearts soften. Furthermore, even to those who have not known us, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints sends plane loads of food when disasters hit. Everywhere we see the LDS with their Mormon Helping Hands t-shirts helping others from other faiths. Is this not glorious? ¶ And they shall call thee, The city

⁴⁴ President Daniel H. Wells, “Responsibilities Resting Upon the Saints,” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 4 May 1862. JD 9:352.

⁴⁵ President Orson Hyde shared: “There is more salvation and security in wheat, than in all the political schemes of the world, and also more power in it than in all the contending armies of the nations. Raise wheat and lay it up in store till it will bring a good price; not dollars and cents, but kingdoms, countries, peoples, tribes, and tongues. ‘They have sold themselves for nought; and must be redeemed without money!’ It will take wheat to redeem them! Raise wheat and lay it up securely and it will preach the ‘gathering’ more eloquently, successfully, and extensively than all the missionaries that we can send out to sweep through the nations, with the proclamation of the judgments of God abroad in the land! If I feel at our approaching Conference as I now do, I shall ask to move that our home missions be not diminished, but increased, if possible; and all set to raising wheat, and make Zion a house and city of refuge for the Saints and for the sons of strangers [I feel the ‘strangers’ here spoken off by President Orson Hyde refer to גוֹיִם or the converts spread out through the gentile nations of the world.—GB], that they may come and build up our walls, even as the old Prophet hath spoken. Many of you have finished your seeding, perhaps, for the season; but suppose you add another edition, enlarged, if not revised. Trust in God! And if your works be good, and plenty of them, your faith will not be questioned!” (President Orson Hyde, “The Saints and the World.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City. 18 March 1855, JD 2:207a).

⁴⁶ Elder George A. Smith, “Storing Up Grain.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 9 October 1867, 12:142b.

of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “The Zion in which the Holy One of Israel delights.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And thou shalt be called, City Sion of the Holy one of Israel.” ¶ Elder John Taylor said: “You will find by reading the 14th verse, that this place is to be called ‘The City of the Lord; the Zion of the Holy One of Israel.’ Here we find, that the Lord will have a house built; that it shall be upon the tops of the mountains, and be exalted above the hills; that many nations shall go there, to learn the will of the Lord, and that the law shall go forth from Zion; that the people shall come as clouds to it; that they shall take their silver and gold with them; that God’s worship will be known, and the religion of the Lord will lose its forbidding aspect; and God, and his religion, be popular among the nations of the earth.”⁴⁷ President Brigham Young said, “I am extremely happy for the privilege of living with those who are seeking to do the will of God. We are gathered together in the tops of these mountains for the express purpose of building up Zion, the Zion of the last days, the glory of which was seen by the prophets of the Almighty from the days of old. ‘And they shall call thee,’ says Isaiah, ‘The city of the Lord, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.’”⁴⁸ ¶ Birks explains: “This title of God, ‘the Holy One of Israel,’ almost peculiar to Isaiah, comes here for the last time, with especial force. It has been forgotten or denied by Zion’s oppressors in the ages of her degradation; but will shine out at length with redoubled brightness, when He, who has been ‘the light of the Gentiles,’ reveals Himself as ‘the glory of His people Israel.’”

vv. 15-22. Apostle Orson Pratt places the context of these verses in the Millennium: “Zion upon this great western hemisphere will have a city called the New Jerusalem (because it has never been built before) and God will preserve it by His divine power. Read what the Psalmist, David, has said in the 50th Psalm: ‘Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.’ ... Is it a difficult thing for the Lord to make his people rich when they are prepared for it, after days of tribulation, after passing through a great many afflictions and difficulties, tossed to and fro; would it be a difficult matter for the Lord to open up whenever He pleases, means of unmeasurable riches, more than all the Latter-day Saints would know how to use? Hear what the Lord says: ‘For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron. Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders.’ Who were the people here spoken of? They were people that should be clothed upon with this light that I have been speaking of, this glorious light; the presence of the Lord will be in their midst, and it will radiate over their temples, it will light their city by night and by day. ‘But are you sure,’ says one, ‘that such a thing will take place?’ I have no time to read all the Lord says on the subject, but if you read the 60th chapter of Isaiah, you will find that the sun shall be no longer necessary by day, nor the moon by night, to give light to a certain people. Why? Because ‘the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down.’ Not like our sun which arises in the morning and exists above the horizon for a few hours, then descends, and darkness covers the earth. Not so with this light, the glorious divine light that will lighten up the heights of Zion. It will never go down, it will be a standing miracle by day and by night, from one week to another, month after month, year after year, until the one thousand years shall have rolled away over the heads of the people that dwell on the earth.”⁴⁹

⁴⁷ Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852.

⁴⁸ President Brigham Young, “Why They Are Gathered.” Old Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 January 1868, JD 12:151.

15 ¶ Whereas thou hast been forsaken and hated, so that no man went through [thee], I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations.

Whereas thou hast been forsaken and hated, so that no man went through [thee]. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “outcast” for forsaken. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Because of thy having been forsaken and hated when there was no helper.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “Because thou wast forsaken, and hated, and there was none that passed through thee.” ¶ And hated, וְשִׁנְאוֹתָ. Rawlinson notes: “Zion has been a wife repudiated for her adulteries, ‘forsaken’ by her husband, and the object of his just ‘hate.’ So that no man went through thee] The mixed metaphor is awkward, but readily intelligible. Zion is at once a city and a wife. As a wife, she is ‘hated and forsaken,’ [yet] as a city, no man goes through her.” Cheyne points out: “The word ‘hated’ is used in Genesis 29:31, Deuteronomy 21:15, of a less beloved wife.” ¶ Delitzsch well explains it of Jerusalem: “The expression ‘no one walked through thee’ applies only to the desolate city as she lay in ruins.” This could not apply to the whole of the Holy Land—as some exegetes suggest—because she was a major thoroughfare and the only land connecting this part of Africa and Asia. Two such major ways included the King’s Highway and the International Coastal Highway. ¶ I will make thee an eternal [עוֹלָם] excellency, a joy of many generations. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “I will make thee an eternal glory, the house of joy for generation and generation.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I will make thee an everlasting boast—a joy for perpetual generations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, “I will make thee to be an everlasting glory, a joy unto generation and generation.” ¶ True joy, Oswalt suggests, can only come through God—the rest are counterfeit and short lasting. Furthermore, Oswalt observes: “The word used here, מְשׁוֹשׁ, is a particular favorite of Isaiah {10 of its 17 OT occurrences are in this book: ISAIAH 8:6; 24:8 (bis), 11; 32:13, 14; 62:5; 65:18; 66:10}.” Gill suggests: “The church will be the joy of God and Christ, of the saints, and of the whole world, age after age, for a long period of time.” ¶ President Brigham Young noted regarding Zion: “Again, ‘Whereas thou hast been forsaken and hated, so that no man went through thee, I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations.’ ... We talk and read about Zion, we contemplate upon it, and in our imaginations we reach forth to grasp something that is transcendent in heavenly beauty, excellency, and glory. But while contemplating the future greatness of Zion, do we realize that we are the pioneers of that future greatness and glory? Do we realize that if we enjoy a Zion in time or in eternity, we must make it for ourselves? That all who have a Zion in the eternities of the gods organized, framed, consolidated, and perfected it themselves, and consequently are entitled to enjoy it.”⁵⁰

16 Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breast of kings: and thou shalt know that I the LORD [am] thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.

Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breast of kings: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And thou shalt be satisfied with the riches of the nations, and in the spoil of their kings thou shalt delight thyself.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And thou shalt suck the milk of nations, and feed on the wealth of kings.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓜ) has, for the second clause, “And thou shalt be nursed with the breasts of kings.” ¶ Young suggests the following was an inspiration for Isaiah: “They shall call the people unto the mountain; there they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness: for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas, and of treasures hid in the sand” (Deuteronomy 33:19, emphasis added). ¶ Cowles has: “The figures in the first clause need not be mistaken. She shall draw abundantly from the resources of all the Gentile nations and their kings; shall be enriched by their wealth and labors, and built up by their consecration to her interests. In her own joyful experience Zion shall know that Jehovah is her Savior; that her own Messiah is the Almighty God” (emphasis added). Orelli says: “God’s Church attracts to itself the best of all nations.” Keith remarks: “As readily as the mother suckles her babe, will the great and rich give of their wealth for Israel’s glory.” Wordsworth has: “[This is] a remarkable expression, showing that the royal care which God prescribes for the Church, is not to be rigid or despotic, but tender and parental, and even maternal.” ¶ And thou shalt know that I the LORD [am] thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob. The LXX (6) reads, “And shalt know that I the Lord am thy Saviour, and that thy Redeemer is the God of Israel.” The children of Jacob will come to a knowledge of Jesus Christ as their Savior and Redeemer, including the children of Judah: “And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn” (Zechariah 12:10).

⁴⁹ Apostle Orson Pratt, “Exhortation from Isaiah—New Jerusalem.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 26 October 1879. JD 24:27-29.

⁵⁰ President Brigham Young, “Building Up and Adornment of Zion by the Saints.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 23 February 1862. JD 9:282.

17 For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron: I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness.

For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron: The Targum (7) has, “For the brass which they spoiled thee of, O Jerusalem, I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for the stones iron.” The LXX (6) reads, “And instead of brass I will bring thee gold; and instead of iron I will bring thee silver; and instead of wood I will bring thee brass and instead of stones iron.” ¶ Margalioth, as seen earlier, considers the thesis and antithesis of this verse, using the words instead of / and instead of, תחת / תחת, “And it shall come to pass, that INSTEAD OF sweet smell there shall be stink; AND INSTEAD OF a girdle a rent; AND INSTEAD OF well set hair baldness; AND INSTEAD OF a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning INSTEAD OF beauty” (ISAIAH 3:24) and contrasts them to those here in the second half of Isaiah. Whereas in ISAIAH 3 the comparison was of something good turned bad; the same words are inverted so that instead of good there would be something even better. While the AV uses, “and for” here, the Hebrew matches exactly that of ISAIAH 3:24, תחת, so substituting and instead of in place of and for we then have: “For brass I will bring gold, AND INSTEAD OF iron I will bring silver, AND INSTEAD OF wood brass, AND INSTEAD OF stones iron: I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness” (ISAIAH 60:17). See also ISAIAH 55:13; and 61:3. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “And I expect that when we go from these mountains, by hundreds of thousands, down to that land⁵¹ to purchase it and to occupy it, that we will take with us a great deal of gold and silver—for the Lord will in those days make his people very rich, in fulfillment of another promise made in the same revelation, in which he says, that we shall become the richest of all people. If this is to be the case, the Lord will probably fulfil that prediction by Isaiah, contained in the 60th chapter of his book—‘For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron;’ and he will bestow upon his people riches that they will not know what to do with them, unless directed by the counsels of the servants of the living God. With this we will purchase the land, and go down and inherit it ... You have heard of the Center Stake of Zion, but did you ever read in the revelations of God that the place where the New Jerusalem is to be built is called a stake? There are other places, called Stakes of Zion, but they will be round about the city. And we will be multiplied by hundreds and thousands; and we will build, throughout the region of country, our meetinghouses, our schoolhouses, our academies and universities; and we will see to it, that all of our children have equal advantages,⁵² as far as possible, of becoming acquainted with all necessary and useful learning.”⁵³ ¶ President Brigham Young warned ⁵¹ “I am, and I presume a great many others who are acquainted with the revelations of God, as contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, are looking for the period of time to come, in the history of the Latter-day Saints, when we as a people shall possess a very different country from the one we are now inhabiting ... We do not expect that when that time shall come, that all Latter-day Saints, who now occupy the mountain Valleys, will go in one consolidated body, leaving this land totally without inhabitants. We do not expect any such thing. But we do expect, that there will be a period in the future history of the Church when many hundreds of this people—our youth, for instance, who will grow up in those days, when they will be consolidated as a body, and will go to the eastern portions of the state of Kansas, and also to the western portions of the state of Missouri to settle” (JD 21:149). Also see Elder Orson Pratt, “Fulfillment of Prophecy.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 August 1875. JD 18:154.

⁵² In other words, not “distinguished by ranks, according to their riches and their chances for learning” (3 Nephi 6:12b).

⁵³ Elder Orson Pratt, “Progress of the Saints to Union in Faith and Practice.” Tabernacle, Logan City, 1 November 1879. JD 21:151-152.

against the love of money, as he has done in other occasions: “Do you not know, brethren, that the day will come of which the Lord says, ‘For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron;’ and yet if those things were now delivered into our hands, there would be selfishness. I have seen that spirit manifested, and I am afraid of it. I am more afraid of covetousness in our Elders than I am of the hordes of hell. Have we men out now of that class? I believe so. I am afraid of such spirits; for they are more powerful and injurious to this people than all hell outside of our borders. All our enemies in the United States or in the world, and all hell with them marshaled against us, could not do us the injury that covetousness in the hearts of this people could do us; for it is idolatry.”⁵⁴ I love these words from Elder George Q. Cannon: “Speaking about the Zion of the last days, Isaiah says that the Lord will bring for brass gold, for iron silver, for wood brass, and for stones iron to build up the Zion of God. When will that be done? When we are united, so that we shall not consume the wealth that God will give us upon our lusts, upon creating class distinctions, raising one class above another, one class living in luxury and another class groveling in poverty; but when we are so organized that there will be no rich and no poor, but all partaking alike of the bounties that God shall give unto us, then, and in my opinion, not till then, can he bestow upon us the wealth that he has promised.”⁵⁵ ¶ I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “I will also make thy pastors peace, and thy rulers righteousness.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And I will make thy chiefs peaceful and thine overseers righteous.” Instead of extractors, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has rulers (Lamsa) / princes (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And I will make thy visitation peace, and thy overseers justice.” ¶ President Brigham Young taught: “We [are] engaged to sustain the good ... until we become one, and act as with one voice in maintaining every temporal and spiritual interest of the political kingdom of our God on earth, whose officers shall be peace and whose exactors shall be righteousness. Our judges will be of our own selection, who will deal out justice and righteousness to the people.”⁵⁶ President Brigham Young also said: “The kingdom that the Almighty will set up in the latter days will have its officers, and those officers will be peace. Every man that officiates in a public capacity will be filled with the Spirit of God, with the light of God, with the power of God, and will understand right from wrong, truth from error, light from darkness, that which tends to life and that which tends to death ... The kingdom of God will be extended over the earth; and it is written, ‘I will make thine officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness.’ Is that day ever coming? It is; and the doctrine we preach leads to that point.”⁵⁷

18 Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise.

Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And violence shall no more be heard in thy land, nor destruction nor misery in thy borders.” Instead of wasting, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has spoil. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, for the first clause, “Iniquity shall no more be heard in thy land.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught: “Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders.’ Who were the people here spoken of? They were people that should be clothed upon with this light that I have been speaking of, this glorious light; the presence of the Lord will be in their midst, and it will radiate over their temples, it will light their city by night and by day.”⁵⁸ In relation to this scripture, Elder Orson Pratt also taught: “Wars will cease in those days.”⁵⁹ Such comments make it clear that the millennial day is here spoken off. ¶ But thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They shall proclaim salvation on thy walls, and on thy gates there shall be those that praise.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “But thy walls shall be called Salvation and thy gates, sculpture.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And salvation shall possess thy walls, and praise thy gates.” ¶ Shalom Paul explains that it was not altogether uncommon to name walls in the ancient world. Cowles has: “Her walls synonymous with salvation; her gates with praise. God’s never failing protection, her bulwarks and city walls; justice always administered at her gates, to the honor of the gospel and the praise of God. The cry of violence heard no more in the land; the ravages of war never pass over her fair fields and glorious city again. The old calamities of her former time never return.” Orelli suggests: “The Church of Christ is the new free Jerusalem, whose wall as

⁵⁴ President Brigham Young, “Extent of the Latter-Day Work.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 25 October 1857, JD 5:353b.

⁵⁵ Elder George Q. Cannon, “Seek For Perfection.” Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 8 October 1874, JD 17:243-244.

⁵⁶ President Brigham Young, “Liberty of the Saints.” Old Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 January 1868, JD 12:155.

⁵⁷ President Brigham Young, “Human and Divine Government.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 31 July 1859, JD 6:345.

⁵⁸ Apostle Orson Pratt, “Exhortation from Isaiah.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 26 October 1879, JD 24:28b.

⁵⁹ Elder Orson Pratt, “Zion.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 March 1872, JD 14:355b.

salvation (cf. the name Jesus), whose gates stand always open to admit the elect of the nations desiring to serve the true God and publish His praise.” Gill has: “But thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise] or, ‘call Salvation thy walls, and Praise thy gates’; having no need of any other walls but the salvation of God, temporal and spiritual; nor of any other gates but the praise that will be in the hearts and mouths of the saints, on account of it; though temporal salvation may be included, which will be for walls and bulwarks to the church: yet spiritual and eternal salvation is chiefly meant, which flows from the invariable love of God.”

19 The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.

The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And thou shalt no more have the sun for a light by day nor shall the rising of the moon enlighten thy night; but the Lord will be to thee an everlasting light; and thy God will be thy glory.” For the final clause, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has “and the days of your mourning (Lamsa) / lamentation (BPE) shall be ended.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓔ) has, for the second clause, “Neither shall the brightness of the moon enlighten thee: but the Lord &c.” ¶ Henderson has us note that: “The LXX (Ⓔ) and Targum (Ⓒ) have read, or at least supplied, לַיְלָה, which may have originally been omitted by an ellipsis.” More likely, the absence is an implied ellipsis; one that is easily understood. Shalom Paul reminds us of ISAIAH 30:26. Both contexts are certainly very similar. Skinner well suggests: “It is not implied that the sun and moon shall cease to exist; all that is said is that the New Jerusalem shall not be dependent on these natural luminaries.” So also Cowles: “Raising to its sublimest height the common Hebrew figure which represents calamity as darkness and prosperity as light, the prophet here sees such light and glory as no earthly sun and moon could produce. Hence the sun and the moon fade out as our stars are wont to do when the sun arises, and now God alone becomes the great Sun in the heavens of his Zion, irradiating her city by day and by night, for really there is no night there. This glorious sun never sets ... The reader will note in this chapter the twofold use of light as a figure; first, to represent moral truth—its source and its power; and secondly; its results in the blessedness of the people thus enlightened. First, Christ rises with his gospel as a light upon Zion, and through her instrumentality, upon the Gentile nations; and then the blessed fruits of this light are represented as a glorious and perpetual day, of which God himself is the sun that never sets” (emphasis added). ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff testified: “I do know that God will build up in Jackson County, Missouri, a great, and wonderful, and beautiful city, that shall be called ‘the perfection of beauty,’ the New Jerusalem. I do know that God will light up the habitations of that city by his power, by his glory, by a cloud in the day time, and by a pillar of fire in the night.”⁶⁰ Elder Orson Pratt attested: “Zion will not need the sun when the Lord is there, and all the city is lighted up by the glory of his presence. When the whole heavens above are illuminated by the presence of his glory we shall not need those bright luminaries of heaven to give light, so far as the city of Zion is concerned ... for the Lord will be there and his glory will be upon all their assemblies. So says Isaiah the Prophet, and I believe it.”⁶¹ President Brigham Young observed: “I am extremely happy for the privilege of living with those who are seeking to do the will of God. We are gathered together in the tops of these mountains for the express purpose of building up Zion, the Zion of the last days, the glory of which was seen by the prophets of the Almighty from the days of old. ‘And they shall call thee,’ says Isaiah, ‘The city of the Lord, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.’ ‘The Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.’ We are removed far away from those who bore rule over us and oppressed us, and who deprived the Saints of their constitutional rights. The Lord has led His people to a land where they can enjoy as much liberty as they are disposed to live for.”⁶²

20 Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the LORD shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.

Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Thy kingdom shall cease no more, and thy glory shall not be removed.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For thy sun shall not go down nor shall thy moon ever wane.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) is missing ISAIAH 60:20. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓔ) has, for the second clause, “And thy moon shall not decrease.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt speaks about the earth’s various stages, including that before the fall, the fall, the Millennium and its celestial condition: “But what says the revelation, called the ‘Olive Leaf,’ given December

⁶⁰ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “The Authority of the Priesthood, Etc.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 19 September 1880. JD 21:313b.

⁶¹ Elder Orson Pratt, “Zion.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 March 1872, JD 14:355b-356.

⁶² President Brigham Young, “Liberty of the Saints.” Old Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 January 1868. JD 12:151-152a.

27th, 1832, on this subject? We are told in this that the earth shall die, and pass away, but it shall be quickened again, for God shall quicken the earth upon which we live. It will become a new earth; but will be prepared more perfectly than it was under the three other conditions in which it was placed; first its spiritual creation, secondly its temporal, in which its spiritual and temporal were combined. The next condition is that of restoring it from the fall back to a temporal condition, and then a still greater change, like unto the death of our bodies, when our bodies crumble back to mother earth and pass themselves among the elements. So it will be with this earth. It will crumble, or in other words, the elements will be separated asunder, and the world will pass away from his presence. What next? Another great change to be wrought. The same elements, constituting the earth, and the atmosphere will be brought together again, in such a manner and way, that the new earth will look like unto a sea of glass, and those who are worthy of the celestial glory will inhabit it forever. What will be the condition of the people who dwell upon that glorious celestial world? They will have the presence of God the Father with them. They will be permitted to dwell where he is. He will light up that world; they will have no need of the rays of the sun, as we now have, neither of the moon, nor stars, so far as light is concerned, for the Lord God will be their light and their glory from that time henceforth and forever.”⁶³ At some point, as we read below, the Lord will remove the earth from its present orb and multiple suns will provide God’s light upon the world. While we do not understand the exact sequence and nature of all of these changes, they will indeed be glorious. President Orson Hyde suggests that the earth will be removed from its present location to one wherein light from multiple suns will shine upon it: “The earth will have to be removed from its place, and reel to and fro like a drunkard. The fact is, it has got to leave the old track in which it has roamed in time passed, and beat a new track; and saith the Lord, ‘come up here.’ What is He going to do with it? Why, take it where the sun will shine upon it continually, and there shall be no more night there; and the hand of God will wipe away the tears from all faces. ‘Come up here, O earth! For I want the Saints who have passed through much tribulation to be glorified with you, and then I will give the earth to the meek. For I will take the curse from it, and rebuke the destroyer for your sakes, and bring all things in subjection to you, and you shall dwell in everlasting light.’ Now it is half day and half night, but I tell you it is not going to be half and half, but there will be no night there. We have but one sun to shine upon us, but when the earth is taken out of this orbit, it will come in contact with the rays of other suns that illuminate other spheres; their rays will dazzle our earth, and make the glory of God rest upon it, so that there will be no more night there.”⁶⁴ Regarding the celestialized nature of the future earth, Birks says (although he himself does not subscribe to the idea): “From these verses it has been inferred (Stier) that a time is meant ‘when there will be no more turning into the shadow, when the whole planetary system, including the earth, will be changed, and the earth itself become a sun, &c.” ¶ For the LORD shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “For the Lord will be to thee an everlasting light; and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “For the Lord shall be unto thee for an everlasting light &c.” The idea of everlasting light [לְאֹרֶךְ עוֹלָם] is repeated in ISAIAH 60:19 and 20. Shalom Paul further contrasts these to “everlasting joy”—in ISAIAH 60:15 we have the joy of many generations [or joy of generation and generation, מְשׁוֹשׁ דִּיּוֹרָא וְדִיּוֹרָא], which is but a synonym of עוֹלָם. This same word [עוֹלָם] was used in conjunction with excellency a few words earlier in the ISAIAH 60:15 passage, and so a synonym was called for. Luther does well in alluding to: “The LORD is my light”⁶⁵ and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?” (Psalm 27:1, emphasis added). ¶ Elder Orson Pratt said: “We read in Isaiah of a time when a certain people called Zion should be clothed upon with the glory of God, and their city be lighted up with a cloud by day and the light of a flaming fire by night, and they should be so highly favored that, so far as light was concerned, they should not need the light of the sun by day, nor the moon by night, for the Lord their God would be their everlasting light, and the days of their mourning would be ended.”⁶⁶

⁶³ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Millennium—The Final Change.” Mount Pleasant, 12 November 1879. JD 21:204-205a.

21 Thy people also [shall be] all righteous: they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified.

Thy people also [shall be] all righteous: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And thy people shall be all righteous.” The Peshitta (ܣ) renders it, “All of your righteous people.”

⁶⁴ President Orson Hyde, “The Earth.” General Conference, Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 October 1853. JD 1:130.

⁶⁵ Luther says “The Lord is my light,” in ISAIAH 60:21, but it fits better here.

⁶⁶ Elder Orson Pratt, “Final Triumph of Light and Truth.” 13th Ward Assembly Rooms, 24 November 1872. JD 15:238b. Also see notes by Elder Orson Pratt under ISAIAH 60:14.

The Douay-Rheims (V) has just for righteous. ¶ Birks says that these words have not been fulfilled as of yet and rather, “It belongs, then, to restored Israel, when the branches have been grafted once more into their own olive-tree.” At the beginning of the Millennium, only the righteous will be resurrected. ¶ They shall inherit the land for ever [לְעוֹלָם]. The LXX (G) also reads, “They shall inherit the land forever.” ¶ It is interesting that the Savior, speaking to the inhabitants of the Americas, reiterated the promises made in Rain in Due Season, speaking to them about the Abrahamic Covenant, the great promise of His presence among the people,⁶⁷ and the inheritance of the American Continent to include the New Jerusalem: “And behold, this people will I establish in this land, unto the fulfilling of the covenant which I made with your father Jacob; and it shall be a New Jerusalem. And the powers of heaven shall be in the midst of this people; yea, even I will be in the midst of you” (3 Nephi 20:22). ¶ President Brigham Young admonished: “As the Prophet has said—‘Thy people also shall be all righteous: they shall inherit the land forever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified.’ We are longing for this state of things, then why not begin to work for it today? Why not commence the work today by ceasing to do evil, by ceasing to give strength to the hand which would pierce us through with many sorrows? Why not begin today by sustaining those who will sustain the kingdom of God? This is my text for the Latter-day Saints, and I wish it to be constantly held before them until they exemplify it in their lives, by becoming of one heart and of one mind in all things in righteousness and holiness before the Lord.”⁶⁸ ¶ The branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified. The Targum (T) has, “The plant of my delight, the work of my might, that I may assuredly be glorified.” The LXX (G) reads, “Preserving the plant, the works of their hands, for glory.” The Peshitta (S) has, “The branch of my planting, the work of my hands shall be glorified.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “The work of my hand to glorify me.” ¶ Keith says: “The expression ‘the branch of my planting,’ implies also the security of Israel, for then every plant that the Father hath not planted will be rooted up⁶⁹.”

22 A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation; I the LORD will hasten it in his my time.

⁶⁷ “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people”—Leviticus 26:12, emphasis added.

⁶⁸ President Brigham Young, “Liberty of the Saints.” Old Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 January 1868. JD 12:155b-156a.

⁶⁹ Matthew 15:13. Also see Elder Orson Pratt, “Zion.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 10 March 1872, JD 14:353.

A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation. The Targum (T) has, “He that is little amongst them shall become a thousand, and he that is weak shall become a strong nation.” The LXX (G) reads, “The fewest in number shall become thousands, and he who is smallest, a great nation.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The least shall become a thousand, and a little one a most strong nation.” ¶ The Savior, in Doctrine and Covenants, speaks that these things are necessary for our preparation to meet the bridegroom and partake of His glory: “And for this cause, that men might be made partakers of the glories which were to be revealed, the Lord sent forth the fulness of his gospel, his everlasting covenant, reasoning in plainness and simplicity—To prepare the weak for those things which are coming on the earth, and for the Lord’s errand in the day when the weak shall confound the wise, and the little one become a strong nation, and two shall put their tens of thousands to flight.⁷⁰ And by the weak things of the earth the Lord shall thrash the nations by the power of his Spirit” (D&C 133:57-59). Brother Thomas B. Marsh, upon returning to the Church from his apostate condition, testified: “God is at the head of this kingdom, and he has sustained it. I was along in the start of it, and then Joseph [Smith] was the little one; but, as the Scriptures say, ‘The little one shall become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation;’ and Joseph lived to become a thousand, and this people are fast becoming a strong nation.”⁷¹ President Wilford Woodruff taught: “There is no power organized beneath the heavens that can stay the hand of Almighty God. He has set His hand to carry out His purposes. The world hate this people, because the Lord has called them forth out of the world, the same as He called His disciples of old. This is the position we occupy today, as His people. Though our numbers are small, yet ‘a little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation:’ and the Lord will hasten it in His time. A little one has already become more than a thousand, or a hundred thousand, and in spite of all opposition this small one will become a great nation, and God will hasten it in His time, because God is our friend.”⁷² Elder Erastus Snow shared: “Many years have elapsed since this message began to be communicated to the sons of men; and we have become, comparatively speaking, a great people. A little one has indeed become a thousand. We, who a few years ago were only numbered by units and tens, now are numbered by thousands and tens of thousands, yea hundreds of thousands. And the Priesthood is correspondingly increasing in numbers and in ability to labor, and acquiring means to carry on the work of preaching the Gospel and of gathering Israel.”⁷³ Elder Wilford Woodruff invited: “If the elders of Israel had the vision of their minds opened to see Zion in her beauty and glory, they would have no time to sin or do evil; but they would rise up in the strength of the Lord God of Israel and accomplish all that he requires at their hands. Zion is yet in her weakness, but the little one shall become thousands, and the small one a great nation.”⁷⁴ ¶ I the LORD will hasten it in my time. The JST makes it clear that it is the Lord who is speaking through the Prophet Isaiah. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “I the Lord will bring it to pass in its time.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I the Lord in due time will gather them.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “I the Lord will suddenly do this thing in its time.” Rabbinic thought is full of the hope of a Messiah, not just a Messianic age: “Rabbi Alexandri said, Rabbi Joshua ben Levi pointed out a contradiction, it is written, in its time [will the Messiah come], whilst it is also written, I [the Lord] will hasten it! — if they are worthy, I will hasten it: if not, [he will come] at the due time. R. Alexandri said: R. Joshua opposed⁷⁵ two verses: it is written, And behold, one like the son of man came with the clouds of heaven whilst [elsewhere] it is written, [behold, thy king cometh unto thee ...] lowly, and riding upon an ass! — if they are meritorious, [he will come] with the clouds of heaven; if not, lowly and riding upon an ass. King Shapur [I] said to Samuel, ‘Ye maintain that the Messiah will come upon an ass: I will rather send him a white horse of mine.’ He replied, ‘Have you a hundred-hued steed?’” (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 98a, Talmud, Soncino). ¶ The Doctrine and Covenants has: “Behold, I will hasten my work in its time” (D&C 88:73). These days of tribulation, says the Lord, will be shortened: “And except those days should be shortened, there should none of their flesh be saved; but for the elect’s sake, according to the covenant, those days shall be shortened” (Joseph Smith—Matthew 1:20; also see Matthew 24:22). ¶ In 1872, Elder Wilford Woodruff said: “What principle has sustained the Elders of Israel for the last forty years in their travels? They have gone forth without purse or scrip, preached without money or price; they have swam rivers, waded swamps, and traveled hundreds of thousands of miles on foot to bear record of this work to the nations of the earth ... and here they are today, from all those nations, gathered in the valleys of the mountains. And this is but the beginning; it is like a mustard seed, it is very small; but the little one is to become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation. The Lord will hasten it in his own time. Zion shall be called a ‘city Sought out’ (ISAIAH 62:12). The Lord is watching over us.”⁷⁶ ¶ President John Taylor urged: “The work of God is growing and increasing, and it will continue to do so until the words of the prophet will be fulfilled who said, ‘A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation: I the Lord will hasten it in his time,’ but He expects every man in his place to magnify his calling and to honor his God ... And it is for every man and every woman to do his and her part.”⁷⁷

⁷⁰ An allusion to Rain in Due Season where we are told that if Israel will be righteous, few will have the power of many, and furthermore, that the Lord will multiply His people (Leviticus 26:8-9).

⁷¹ Brother Thomas B. Marsh spoke for a few moments, at the request of President Brigham Young, “Return of Thomas B. Marsh to the Church.” Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 6 September 1857. JD 5:208b. I strongly suggest reading both Brother Marsh’s comments as well as those of the Prophet Brigham Young. I was really moved by the power of these talks. President Young lovingly reproved Brother Marsh for the latter said he would never fall away again. The Prophet explained that none can so brag, especially someone who had already fallen away once. We can all profitably take these things to heart.

FIRST POSTED: 29 December 2016

⁷² President Wilford Woodruff, “No Power Can Stay the Hand of Almighty.” Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, 6 January 1884. JD 25:8a. Emphasis added.

⁷³ Elder Erastus Snow, “Present Revelation.” General Conference, 5 October 1883. JD 25:36a. Also see Elder Orson Pratt, “The Divine Authority of the Holy Priesthood.” General Conference, Salt Lake City, 10 October 1880. JD 22:35b.

⁷⁴ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Final Triumph of His Kingdom.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 22 October 1865. JD 11:247b. Also see Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Infidelity of the Christian World.” 6 April 1876. JD 18:191b. Also see Elder Wilford Woodruff, “The Signs of the Coming of the Son of Man.” 13th Ward Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, 12 January 1873. JD 15:279b.

⁷⁵ Contrasted, rather. I include the Rabbinic view to point out that the Rabbis did believe in a Messiah to come, not just a Messianic age. Also note the lack of understanding over the First and Second Advent.

⁷⁶ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “The Fulfilling of Prophecy.” Tabernacle, 6 April 1872. JD 15:11a. Emphasis added.

⁷⁷ President John Taylor, “Growth and Progress of God’s Work.” Logan Conference, 6 August 1882. JD 23:221a.

Isaiah 61

Christ's divinity is put forth. In the meridian of times He comes to expiate for our sins and to heal us in every way. In the last days there will be judgment. The Savior plants His garden and it gives forth fruit. We may compare this to an olive vineyard with the fruitful trees being the trees of righteousness. Israel will be gathered from every corner of the earth and in the latter days become a kingdom of priests and an holy nation. It is robbery to act in the name of Christ without authority of the Priesthood of God. The Lord's disciples will be able to be distinguished from among the people and in due time will be clothed with celestial robes.

vv. 1–3. Jesus Christ testifies of His divinity. He is called to bind up the brokenhearted and to open the prison doors. The language is that of the jubilee. The Savior is the gardener and His disciples the trees that will grow up to righteousness.

1 ¶ THE Spirit of the Lord GOD [is] upon me; because the LORD hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to [them that are] bound;

Cheyne says: "Precisely the same statement is made respecting the Servant in ISAIAH 42:1." There it also refers to the Messiah. Birks explains: "These opening words were chosen out by our Lord at Nazareth for the solemn introduction of His public ministry." ¶ In one of my favorite scriptures in the New Testament, the Savior quotes Isaiah, or the words that He gave Isaiah, and applies them to Himself: "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read. And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written, 'The Spirit of the Lord is upon me,¹ because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.' And he closed the book,² and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him. And he began to say unto them, 'This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears'" (Luke 4:16–21). Note that it was the custom of the Jews at the time to read the scriptures standing up and then to sit down to interpret what had been read. The Savior here testified that in Him, the very Son of God, these Scriptures were fulfilled. ¶ THE Spirit of the Lord GOD [is] upon me; because the LORD hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek. The Targum (ܬ) has, for the first half, "The prophet said, the spirit of prophecy from the presence of the Lord God is upon me." The LXX (ε) reads, "THE SPIRIT of the Lord is upon me, for the business for which he anointed me. He hath sent me to publish glad tidings to the poor." The Douay-Rheims (ϑ) has, "Because the Lord hath anointed me: he hath sent me to preach to the meek." ¶ Birks says, "That Messiah himself speaks in these words rests on His own Divine authority." Gills, speaking of the Rabbis says: "According to the Targum (ܬ), these are the words of the prophet concerning himself; and so say Ibn Ezra and Kimhi; but the latter elsewhere says (Sepher Shorash. rad. מִשְׁחָ) they are the words of the Messiah, who should say, 'because the Lord hath anointed me.'" So here, also, the Masoretic text (מס) has מָשַׁח, the root for Messiah, Anointed One, מְשִׁיחַ.³ ¶ At a time when Christ's divinity is being questioned more than ever, I appreciate the testimonies of all who valiantly declare these Scriptures as pointing to Jesus Christ of the New Covenant and Jehovah of the Old, even the Son of God the Eternal Father. ¶ The spirit of the Lord is upon me. That is, the Holy Ghost: "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him" (John 3:34). ¶ He hath sent me to bind up [לְהַבְשִׁי] the brokenhearted. The Targum (ܬ) has "strengthen" for bind up. The LXX (ε) reads, "To heal them who are broken hearted." The Douay-Rheims (ϑ)

¹ In the Masoretic text (מס) we have רִיחַ אֱלֹהֵי יְהוָה עָלַי, Spirit of Lord Jehovah upon me, for Christ speaking through Divine Investiture. The literal Hebrew translation is "The Spirit of the Lord Jehovah is on Me" (LITV). It is the Jewish tradition, however, to read it as Lord God.

² As Jenour points out, more likely, "rolled up, the book."

³ The kings of Israel were also anointed and the term מְשִׁיחַ used for them. But here in ISAIAH 61:1, the reference is to Jesus Christ, the Anointed One, the Holy Messiah.

has, “To heal the contrite of heart.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “‘Binding up’ is an ordinary expression in Isaiah’s writings for ‘healing’ (see ISAIAH 1:6; 3:7; 30:26).” The sufferings that Christ endured for us through His expiation help us heal in terms of our sins, our physical pains and our broken hearts—or emotional challenges. This is similar to the “comfort [who] all that mourn” are in need off (ISAIAH 61:2). Oswalt sweetly speaks of “Those who are so broken by life⁴ that they have no more heart to try; those who are so bound up in their various addictions that liberty and release are a cruel mirage; those who think that they will never again experience the favor of the Lord ... those who think that their lives hold nothing more than ashes, sackcloth, and the fainting heaviness of despair.” And then Oswalt beautifully explains the tenderness with which the Lord will personally attend to the “oozing wounds that were the result of sin” and that needed binding up [חֲבָשָׁה, ISAIAH 1:6]. Shalom Paul speaks that such healing is usually carried out by Deity and points us to Psalm 147. “Praise ye the LORD: for it is good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant; and praise is comely. The LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel. He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds” (Psalm 147:1–3). Indeed, only the Lord can heal us through His atoning sacrifice. It is the Lord, even the Holy One of Israel who heals us, who is Emanuel. ¶ To proclaim liberty to the captives. The LXX (6) reads, “To proclaim a deliverance to captives.” Birks says: “The work of our Lord was to raise up all who were crushed by the bitter effects of their own sin.” Here we have an allusion to the year of jubilee. Orelli says about לְדָרוֹר, liberty: “To proclaim freedom ... is taken after Leviticus 25:10, from the arrangements of the jubilee year, when freedom was proclaimed to all slaves.” In Leviticus we have and proclaim liberty in the land, וְקָרְאתֶם לְדָרוֹר בְּאֶרֶץ. And then, “it shall be a jubile [יּוֹבֵל] unto you” (Leviticus 25:10). See especially ISAIAH 24:22; 42:7 and 1 Peter 3:19, regarding the preaching of the Gospel in the Spirit World. This liberty, then, would include those who have passed on into the Spirit World as well as all of us who live on earth and are blessed with God’s tender mercies in our efforts to leave Babylon behind. ¶ President Russell M. Nelson spoke about the role members play in helping liberate the captives by working on family history and temple work.⁵ Elder Wilford Woodruff likewise taught: “We are required to build Temples in which to attend to the ordinances of the house of the Lord, that the prison doors may be opened, and the prisoners go free.”⁶ Apostle Franklin D. Richards explained: “After His resurrection He called His Apostles together and commissioned them, saying, ‘Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.’ That was another feature of the work wherein He sends the Gospel ... to all the world. We see, then, that the great work of the brethren was to carry the Gospel to the whole human family first. But the Savior told them that if He went away, they should do greater works than He had done, because He went to the Father. What did He do? After He was crucified He went and preached to the spirits in prison, even to that great multitude that were destroyed through disobedience before the flood and by the flood. He unlocked the prison doors to those that were bound. While upon the earth the Savior and His brethren of the Twelve labored to impart the Gospel to those that were living ... The Gospel had to be preached to mortals first, and next to those in the spirit world.”⁷ Robert L. Millet and Joseph Fielding McConkie point us to a scripture in which Christ speaks about visiting the spirits of the departed in the Spirit World⁸: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man. Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice” (John 5:25–28). ¶ And the opening of the prison [פְּקֻחַ קִוְיָה]⁹ to [them that are] bound; The Targum (7) has “And to the prisoners! Appear in light!” The LXX (6) reads, “And a recovery of sight to the blind.” The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “And to preach a release to the captives, and deliverance to them that are shut up.” President Joseph Fielding Smith explained: “There was no work done for the dead until after the Savior turned the key when he visited the spirits in prison ... These references [after quoting ISAIAH 61:1–2] to the opening of the prison and the proclaiming of liberty to the captives evidently have reference to the dead who had been confined in darkness not knowing their fate ... That is to say, the time had come for the preaching of the gospel and the

⁴ Oswalt says speaking of the poor, but fits perfectly with the broken hearted.

⁵ Elder Russell M. Nelson, “The Sabbath Is a Delight.” April 2015 General Conference. Also see April 1991 General Conference, “Generations Linked in Love.”

⁶ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Parable of the Ten Virgins.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 September 1875. 18:115a.

⁷ Apostle Franklin D. Richards, “Preaching to the Spirits in Prison.” New Stake Tabernacle, Provo, 30 August 1885. JD 26:301.

⁸ Robert L. Millet and Joseph Fielding McConkie (2004), The Life Beyond, p.48–1.

⁹ Some exegetes render it as a single word, פְּקֻחָהּ.

redemption of both the living and the dead.”¹⁰ President George Q. Cannon explained: “[Jesus] was not only commanded to preach good tidings unto the meek, and to bind up the broken hearted, but He was sent to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that were bound. Thus was a part of His mission foretold by the Prophet Isaiah a long time before His birth. He Himself confirmed the correctness of the prediction by reading it in the ears of the people; and when He left the earth, after having established His Gospel upon it, after having commenced the work of salvation here, after having ordained men to the authority of the everlasting Priesthood which He held, the Priesthood of Melchizedek, after having done this and was slain by wicked men, suffered for the sins of humanity in the flesh, He then went, in the words that I have read in your hearing from this epistle of Peter, and preached to the spirits in prison which sometime were disobedient when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah (1 Peter 3:19–20). He went and proclaimed liberty to the captive; He went to open the prison doors to them that were bound. He alone could do this. No Prophet that preceded Him had the authority, for none of the Prophets that had preceded Him had this mission assigned them. It was His duty as the Son of God, as the Redeemer of the world, after, as I have said, committing the Gospel to men in the flesh, after ordaining men to preach that Gospel and administer its ordinances in the power and authority of the everlasting Priesthood, to preach to those spirits in prison. It did not take a great while to commence the work; for He was crucified on Friday, and was resurrected on Sunday; but in the interim, while His body laid in the tomb, His Spirit, as is correctly stated in one catechism—I believe that of the Episcopalians—‘descended into hell,’ and, according to the mission that had been assigned Him, according to the revelation that God gave to Enoch before the floods descended upon the wicked world, according to the predictions of Isaiah, and according to the power and authority which He exercised as the Son of God He went and opened the prison doors to them that were bound, preached to them the everlasting Gospel, once more, and gave unto them the privilege of receiving it in the spirit even as though they were in the flesh. Therefore says Peter, ‘By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing (1 Peter 3:19–20). Then he goes on and he says ... : ‘For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.’”¹¹ A little over three decades later, through the Prophet Joseph F. Smith, the Lord would correct some of the early notions we held regarding this matter: “And as I wondered, my eyes were opened, and my understanding quickened, and I perceived that the Lord went not in person among the wicked and the disobedient who had rejected the truth, to teach them; But behold, from among the righteous, he organized his forces and appointed messengers, clothed with power and authority, and commissioned them to go forth and carry the light of the gospel to them that were in darkness, even to all the spirits of men; and thus was the gospel preached to the dead. And the chosen messengers went forth to declare the acceptable day of the Lord and proclaim liberty to the captives who were bound, even unto all who would repent of their sins and receive the gospel. Thus was the gospel preached to those who had died in their sins, without a knowledge of the truth, or in transgression, having rejected the prophets. These were taught faith in God, repentance from sin, vicarious baptism for the remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, And all other principles of the gospel that were necessary ... Thus was it made known that our Redeemer spent his time during his sojourn in the world of spirits, instructing and preparing the faithful spirits of the prophets who had testified of him in the flesh; That they might carry the message of redemption unto all the dead, unto whom he could not go personally, because of their rebellion and transgression, that they through the ministration of his servants might also hear his words” (D&C 138:29–34a, 36–37). Thus we are taught: “Precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little” (ISAIAH 28:10b). This is the way we have been taught as a Church and this is the way we have been taught as individuals. And when it comes to the vicarious work for the dead, I believe that this is one of the most glorious principles we hold and cherish as The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It truly shows our Lord’s tender mercies toward each of His children—including those who never heard the name of Jesus Christ in their lifetimes. ¶ Brothers Joseph Fielding McConkie and Robert L. Millet wrote: “The Prophet Joseph Smith, as a part of his inspired translation of the King James Bible, provided the clarifying touch of divine inspiration in the first epistle of Peter: ‘For Christ also once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, that he might bring us to God.

¹⁰ President Joseph Fielding Smith, Answers to Gospel Questions.

¹¹ President George Q. Cannon, “Christ Preached to the Spirits in Prison between the Times of His Crucifixion and Resurrection.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 9 November 1884. JD 26:81b–82. Also see President George Q. Cannon, “Salvation for the Dead.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 25 May 1884. JD 173b–174a.

For which cause also, he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; some of whom were disobedient in the days of Noah... . Because of this, is the gospel preached to them who are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live in the spirit according to the will of God.’ (JST, 1 Peter 3:18–20; 4:6.) In a sermon on 12 May 1844, Joseph Smith taught: ‘... The sectarians have no charity for me, but I have for them. I intend to send men to prison to preach to them.’ (The Words of Joseph Smith, pp. 370, 371; spelling and punctuation modernized).¹²

2 To proclaim the acceptable year of the LORD, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn;

To proclaim the acceptable year of the LORD. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “To proclaim an acceptable year of the Lord.” The year of jubilee in ancient Israel was a year of forgiveness from debt and a year of liberty. ISBE has, in part: “שָׁנַת הַיּוֹבֵל, ‘year of jubilee’ (Leviticus 25:13), or simply הַיּוֹבֵל, ‘the jubilee’ (Leviticus 25:28; compare Numbers 36:4). The Hebrew word יוֹבֵל stands for קֶרֶן הַיּוֹבֵל, meaning the horn of a ram [horn of the ram—GB]. Now, such a horn can be made into a trumpet, and thus the word יוֹבֵל came to be used as a synonym of trumpet. According to Leviticus 25:9 a loud trumpet should proclaim liberty throughout the country on the 10th day of the 7th month (the Day of Atonement), after the lapse of 7 sabbaths of years = 49 years. In this manner, every 50th year was to be announced as a jubilee year. All real property should automatically revert to its original owner (Leviticus 25:10; compare 25:13), and those who, compelled by poverty, had sold themselves as slaves to their brothers, should regain their liberty (Leviticus 25:10; compare 25:39). In addition to this, the Jubilee Year was to be observed after the manner of the sabbatic year, i.e. there should be neither sowing nor reaping nor pruning of vines, and everybody was expected to live on what the fields and the vineyards produced ‘of themselves,’ and no attempt should be made at storing up the products of the land (Leviticus 25:11 f). Thus there are three distinct factors constituting the essential features of the Jubilee Year: personal liberty, restitution of property, and what we might call the simple life” (emphasis added). There is a strong connection between liberty and the joy of the year of jubilee. The Savior, in speaking of the acceptable year of the Lord, seems to be making allusion to the year of jubilee, and proclaiming—not just with horns, the יוֹבֵל or the שׁוֹפָר—liberty and salvation to the captives and prisoners from spiritual bondage. Each and every one of us is in need of that salvation which was brought about by Christ’s atoning sacrifice. Cowles explains: “So Jesus blew the gospel trumpet, proclaiming redemption through all the land, so that whosoever would might come out of bondage into liberty.” The Angel Moroni is most often represented blowing the trumpet. Each one of us as member missionaries also blows this trumpet of invitation for all to come unto Christ. ¶ Keith notes that the Scriptures speak of a year, in terms of the jubilee, but a day in terms of vengeance. The latter will be kept relatively short—the LORD will hasten it—in relation to our opportunity to repent and come unto Christ. ¶ After quoting Luke 4:17–21, Elder Theodore M. Burton said: “It is amazing to see what happened in the minds of his listeners when Jesus Christ proclaimed this marvelous doctrine and told the people that this work of salvation was his assigned task. [Quotes Luke 4:28–30]. Thus Jesus Christ was rejected by the people because he told them what saving work he would do for the captives then confined to a spiritual prison and for those who had been bruised in their souls through iniquity. Instead of rejoicing in this liberation, the people hated Jesus for being so presumptuous as to tell them that he had been anointed to open the prison doors. Even his very life was threatened. Nevertheless, he continued to preach this doctrine even more clearly, in the hopes that people would understand him and the importance of the work he had been called to do.”¹³ President Daniel H. Wells noted: “The plan of salvation is ample to save to the uttermost. God, in his mercy, designed it to save his children, because he delights to give good gifts to his children far more than an earthly parent does. The Almighty has sent forth his servants to plead with the children of men, to declare the acceptable year of the Lord, and to call upon them to repent lest the end come when no man can work.”¹⁴ ¶ And the day of vengeance of our God. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And a day of retribution.” Instead of vengeance, the Peshitta (ܣ) has salvation. The word נָקָם is most often translated as vengeance. If so, it would be vengeance upon the enemies of God’s people. TWOT suggests: “The prophets stressed ‘the day of the Lord’s vengeance’ (ISAIAH 38:8; 61:2; 63:4) as times in history when the Lord sets the record straight.” Perhaps we can say that God punishes us because He loves us and He cares about us. DCH, however, suggests that victory might be a good translation at times (see Psalm 58:11). The Peshitta (S) translates it as salvation. This fits with the context of the jubilee and the rejoicing associated with it. It also fits perfectly with both the comments associated with salvation of Elder Theodore M. Burton and President Daniel H. Wells, which we quoted above. ¶ On the other hand, Oswalt well points out that these concepts are paired in ISAIAH 63:1–6, where salvation is put side by side with vengeance. There are additional arguments to defend the traditional view of vengeance. Govett says: “The commencing verses of this chapter were read by our blessed Saviour in the synagogue at Nazareth as describing the intention of his ministry; after reading which, he added, ‘This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears.’ But the Lord’s omission of part of the second verse is highly significant. He read as far as the words which foretold that he came to ‘preach the acceptable year of the Lord,’ but he did not read the succeeding clause, ‘And the day of vengeance of our God.’ We conclude, therefore, that, as in other prophecies, the first and second advent are blended, so it is here.” So also Keith: “When he had read from the book of the prophet Esaias onward to the clause inclusive, ‘to preach the acceptable year of the Lord,’ he stopped; ‘He closed the book, and gave it again to the minister, and sat down.’ What follows, ‘the day of vengeance of our God,’ was not at that time fulfilled. He no doubt proclaimed it as he did on other occasions, as in Matthew 24:27. He foretold that it would come, but he did not proclaim it, as in the other case, as having then come. The break in his application of the prophecy clearly shows that it refers to two separate periods, and that while the former part received its accomplishment by his proclaiming the word of salvation when on earth, the other was not then fulfilled,—that it will receive its accomplishment at a future day.” ¶ In terms of a day of vengeance, the Lord makes it clear that He will clean His own house first: “Behold, vengeance cometh speedily upon the inhabitants of the earth, a day of wrath, a day of burning, a day of desolation, of weeping, of mourning, and of lamentation; and as a whirlwind it shall come upon all the face of the earth, saith the Lord. And upon my house shall it begin, and from my house shall it go forth, saith the Lord; First among those among you, saith the Lord, who have professed to know my name and have not known me, and have blasphemed against me in the midst of my house, saith the Lord” (D&C 112:24–26, emphasis added). ¶ To comfort all that mourn. The LXX (G) reads, “To comfort all who are mourning.” ¶ Rawlinson explains: “All who ‘sorrow after a godly sort’ (2 Corinthians 7:11)—all who mourn their transgressions and shortcomings ... with a hearty desire to be rid of them, and to serve God truly in the future.”

¹² McConkie, Joseph Fielding, and Robert L. Millet. Joseph Smith: The Choice Seer. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996.

¹³ Elder Theodore M. Burton, “The Spirit and Power of Elijah.” Conference Report, October 1970, pp. 33–36.

¹⁴ President Daniel H. Wells, “Character of the Deceased.” 14th Ward Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, 23 February 1873. JD 15:353b–354a.

3 To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified.

To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion. The Targum (T) adds, after the first clause, “That unto them be given a crown of ashes.” The LXX (G) reads, “That to the mourners in Zion may be given.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “To appoint to the mourners of Zion.”

¶ Wordsworth suggests: “Christ’s promise is not to the proud, and obstinate, and self-righteous, but to them that mourn in Zion for their sins. They receive comfort from Him, and they are made His ministers in comforting others. ‘Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted’ (Matthew 5:4).” ¶ Elder Dale G. Renlund reminded us: “President Thomas S. Monson has taught, ‘One of God’s greatest gifts to us is the joy of trying again, for no failure ever need be final.’ [Ensign, May 1987, 68.] Even if we’ve been a conscious, deliberate sinner or have repeatedly faced failure and disappointment, the moment we decide to try again, the Atonement of Christ can help us. And we need to remember that it is not the Holy Ghost that tells us we’re so far gone that we might as well give up. God’s desire that Latter-day Saints keep on trying also extends beyond overcoming sin. Whether we suffer because of troubled relationships, economic challenges, or illnesses or as a consequence of someone else’s sins, the Savior’s infinite Atonement can heal even—and perhaps especially—those who have innocently suffered. He understands perfectly what it is like to suffer innocently as a consequence of another’s transgression. As prophesied, the Savior will ‘bind up the brokenhearted, ... give ... beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, [and] the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.’ No matter what, with His help, God expects Latter-day Saints to keep on trying.”¹⁵ ¶ To give unto them beauty for ashes. The LXX (G) reads, “Glory instead of ashes.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And to give them a crown for ashes.” ¶ Margalioth, as already mentioned in ISAIAH 3, 55, 60, considers the thesis and antithesis of this verse, using the words instead of / and instead of, תַּחַת / תַּחַת, “And it shall come to pass, that INSTEAD OF sweet smell there shall be stink; AND INSTEAD OF a girdle a rent; AND INSTEAD OF well set hair baldness; AND INSTEAD OF a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning INSTEAD OF beauty” (ISAIAH 3:24) and contrasts them to those in the second half of ISAIAH. Whereas in ISAIAH 3 the comparison was of something good turned into something bad, the same words are inverted so that instead good there would be something better. The AV has for in place of וְלִי so we make the appropriate substitution: “To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty INSTEAD OF ashes, the oil of joy INSTEAD OF mourning, the garment of praise INSTEAD OF the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified” (ISAIAH 61:3). ¶ Gill says: “In times of mourning, it was usual to put on sackcloth and ashes (Esther 4:1), instead of this, Christ gives his mourners the beautiful garments of salvation, and the robe of his righteousness.” Almost all of the exegetes pause to mention the paronomasia here (Whitehouse calls it an “alliterative play of words”) between פָּאֵר and אָפֵר, beauty and ashes, “i.e., a nuptial tiara on the head,¹⁶ instead of ashes upon it” (Wordsworth). Rawlinson beautifully has: “A crown of glory in lieu of the ashes of repentance which it was customary to sprinkle upon the head.” Shalom Paul notes: “A transposition of the letters פָּאֵר – אָפֵר accentuates their reversal of fortune. Instead of the ‘ashes’ (אָפֵר) of mourning, the Lord shall place a turban (פָּאֵר) on their heads.” Ezekiel, as Shalom Paul notes, has: “Forbear to cry, make no mourning for the dead, bind the tire of thine [פָּאֵרְךָ, thy turban] head upon thee, and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy lips, and eat not the bread of men” (Ezekiel 24:17). ¶ The oil of joy for mourning. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Oil of joy to the mourners.” ¶ Gill has: “The Spirit without measure, with which Christ was anointed, is called ‘the oil of gladness’ (Psalm 45:7) and of the same nature, though not of the same measure, is the grace which saints have from Christ; the effect of which is joy and gladness, even joy unspeakable, and full of glory; which is had in believing in Christ.” Whitehouse explains: “The ‘oil of joy,’ or the oil which is expressive of gladness, is a reference to the Oriental custom of anointing the person with oil on festival days or weddings or other special times of rejoicing (Amos 6:6; Psalm 23:5; 45:8; Luke 7:46).” See also notes on ISAIAH 60:10, as associated with Leviticus 8. ¶ The garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. The Targum (ⲡ) has, “The spirit of praise for their spirit which is faint.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Robes of praise for the spirit of heaviness.” Instead of praise, the Peshitta (ܣ) has beauty. The Douay-Rheims

¹⁵ Elder Dale G. Renlund, “Latter-day Saints Keep on Trying.” April 2015 General Conference.

(ⲛ) has grief instead of heaviness. ¶ Barnes gives Apocryphal Judith as an example of change in clothing: “These expressions are figurative, and are taken from the custom which prevailed more in Oriental countries than elsewhere—and which is founded in nature—of expressing the emotions of the mind by the manner of apparel. These customs are stated in the book of Judith. She ‘pulled off the sackcloth which she had on, and pulled off the garments of her widowhood, and washed her body all over with water, and anointed herself with precious ointment, and braided the hair of her head, and put on a tire upon it (Greek, μίτρε mitre), and put on her garments of gladness wherewith she was clad during the life of Manasses her husband. And she took sandals upon her feet, and put about her her bracelets, and her chains, and her rings, and her ear-rings, and all her ornaments, and decked herself bravely to allure the eyes of all men that should see her.” ¶ Praise for heaviness is the spirit of thanksgiving toward God the Eternal Father and His beloved Son, Jesus Christ. We praise the Son for His atoning sacrifice that lifts from us the heaviness of sin. The pain and heaviness of disobedience is much worse than of any other type of pain. So it is that when the Lord lifts this burden from us we are left to exclaim our gratitude and sing praises unto Him. ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell spoke of the importance of giving honest, sincere praise, “Isaiah spoke of providing the ‘garment of praise.’ (ISAIAH 61:3.) Of course, there are times in rendering humanitarian service when we need to give an actual, physical cloak, but, most often, those with whom most of us work need material clothing less than the ‘garment of praise.’ (‘Successful Leadership in Organizations, Communities and Families.’)¹⁷ Elder Maxwell also said: “In a world more starved for love than food, how precious is the gracious individual who overlooks our weaknesses and mercifully clothes us instead in the much-needed ‘garment of praise.’”¹⁸ I have done quite a bit of work in organizations regarding putting back praise in performance appraisals. As a result, I have seen many lives change for the better.¹⁹ The giving of sincere praise is a way we show our gratitude. ¶ That they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified. The Targum (ⲡ) has, “They shall be called (Chaldee, ‘they shall call them’) princes of truth, the people of the Lord, that He may assuredly be glorified.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “That they may be called generations of righteousness, a plant

¹⁶ Regarding the tiara, festal turban or headdress, Whitehouse sends us to Exodus 39:28; and Ezekiel 44:18.

¹⁷ Maxwell, Cory H., ed. The Neal A. Maxwell Quote Book. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1997.

¹⁸ Elder Neal A. Maxwell, One More Strain of Praise, p.57, 62.

¹⁹ See Negotiated Performance Appraisal (NPA) in my book, Party-Directed Mediation. The PDF of the book is available at no cost from the University of California. Google Party-Directed Mediation. or in Spanish, Mediación Interpersonal.

of the Lord for glory.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “They shall be called men of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, which is glorious (or the Glorious, BPE).” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And they shall be called in it the mighty ones of justice, the planting of the Lord to glorify him.” ¶ Also, see notes on ISAIAH 60:21b, the branch of my planting, and ISAIAH 61:11, below.

¶ וְקָרָא לָהֶם אֵילֵי הַצִּדִּיק so [CJB, LITV, MKJV, NASB, Rotherham; others mostly have that or and] they might be called trees of righteousness. Oswalt explains that the ו [most often translated as and] here is “functioning as a waw apodosis expressing result.” The word that, says Oswalt, makes an even stronger connection than so. Keith suggests: “The expression ‘trees of righteousness,’ appears to signify trees bearing the fruits of righteousness.” ¶ Elder Levi Edgar Young said: “What will be the characteristics of a religion of Jesus Christ as humanity returns to the old way—the way of Christ our Savior? The followers will hold to the power of the priesthood of God, to authority, and liberty, to the doctrine of individual salvation, the spirit of truth that binds people into a Christian society. The unity of the Church of the living God will be envisaged by a society, for which Christendom waits. It will be the religion of Jesus Christ, and not a religion about Jesus Christ. Thus we come to the supreme test of religion—revelation. This was the fundamental teaching of the prophets of the Old Testament ... Our Savior came to save. He sought out the lost souls who had wandered far away. Sin was in the world then as it is today. He came to redeem the lost by the principle of repentance and holy baptism by one who has the power of God. If the Christian world has forgotten this, then it has lost its divine power. ‘All great truths,’ it has been said, ‘are simple truths.’ If the followers of Jesus will begin to teach the ways of the gospel of Christ in that humility which come of the genuinely pure heart and the high regard for the intellect, then the divinity of the gospel will take new root in the souls of men. It will be Christianity again.”²⁰ President Brigham Young similarly said, “The religion of Jesus Christ gives light for darkness. [He then quoted ISAIAH 61:1–3].”²¹ What does trees of righteousness stand for, precisely? It is clearly associated with the planting of the Lord, and gives the impression of human seeds or mortals who have matured into full righteousness, exaltation and eternal life. In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “But learn that he who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world and eternal life in the world to come” (D&C 59:23).

vv. 4–9. The disciples will play a vital role in preaching the Gospel to the world. Israel will be gathered from every quarter. In the last days truly, Israel shall become unto the Lord “a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation” (Exodus 19:6b). It is the Gardener who sanctifies the disciples. Judah shall eventually receive a double blessing. The Lord abhors priestcraft. The light of Christ shall be readily seen in His disciples.

4 ¶ And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations.

And they shall build the old wastes. The LXX (G) reads, “And the wastes of old times shall be rebuilt.” Instead of wastes, the Peshitta (S) has ruins. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And they shall build the places that have been waste from of old.” ¶ Keith says that this “predicts as distinctly as any language could, the rebuilding of the yet desolate cities of Judea.” Jennings says: “Apply the prophecy to the literal nation of Israel, and how simple it all is. Its cities shall be rebuilt; its wastes covered with fertile beauty, and its desolations throbbing with life. Foreigners shall do the rough servile work, while Israel’s own people shall be known as having peculiar access to God, and so a nation of priests.” Oswalt explains that while Jerusalem has been rebuilt, “Assyria and Babylon are piles of dust,” and that both of these conditions are fulfillment of prophecy. There seems to be a connection, also, with ISAIAH 58:12b, “The repairer of the breach” (ISAIAH 58:12). Apostasy brought a physical destruction, desolation, agricultural ruin, as well as spiritual darkness. Conversion brings spiritual joy which is often accompanied by the construction of beautiful temples and other edifices. ¶ They shall raise up the former desolations. The LXX (G) reads, “And former desolations shall be repaired.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And shall raise up ancient ruins.” ¶ Birks has: “The threatening of the Law [especially Rain in Due Season—GB] had been, ‘I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries into desolation... and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste’ (Leviticus 26:31, 33). So too Isaiah’s own commission began, in the last year of Uzziah. ‘Until the cities be wasted without inhabitants... and the land be utterly desolate’ (ISAIAH 6:11). The warning, which thus begins Isaiah’s message, is graciously reversed by this promise near its close.” This is precisely the type of reversal that Margalioth has been teaching us about,

²⁰ Elder Levi Edgar Young, “The Test of Christianity.” Conference Report, October 1944, pp. 83–85.

²¹ President Brigham Young, “Contrast between the Religion of Jesus Christ As Enjoyed By the Saints and that of Professed Christianity.” Bowery, 6 July 1862. JD 9:318a.

pointing to the unity of Isaiah. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained: “It is very evident from these predictions of the Prophet Isaiah, that he, by that spirit which opens the future, was able to see the calamities that would come upon the house of Israel, and not only upon the people, but also upon the Promised Land, the land of Canaan, now called Palestine. A curse was predicted upon that land, that instead of bringing forth those things that were necessary to sustain a people, it should bring forth briars and thorns. We are also told that this desolation²² should remain for a long period, until the Spirit should be poured out from on high, until, in the purposes of the Most High, he should pour out his Spirit, and that would produce a great change upon that land, but until that time it was to be desolate. All the houses of joy in the Jewish city were to be desolate, and, as it is recorded in other passages in Isaiah, they were to be the desolations of many generations. Not the desolation of seventy years, as happened to Israel in their Babylonish captivity, which only comprised about one generation, but the desolations were to be for many generations, during which that land was to lie uncultivated. The latter rains were to be withheld, and the land was to become dry and parched up, bringing forth thorns and briars, and this was to continue until the Lord poured out his Spirit from on high.”²³ ¶ And they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And wasted cities renewed which had lain in ruins for ages.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “and shall repair the desolate cities, that were destroyed for generation and generation.” On another occasion Elder Orson Pratt said: “This is what the Prophet says about it—‘And their desolate cities shall be built up and be inhabited by the Saints of the Most High.’ God will bring about this work; and as to our being overcome in these valleys of the mountains, it will not be, if this people do as they are told—if they are willing to do right in all things.”²⁴

5 And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien [shall be] your plowmen and your vinedressers.

And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And strangers shall come and feed thy flocks.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Zera’im, Berachoth 35b) suggests that strangers shall perform this work for the righteous so that they can dedicate themselves to the study of Torah. Alexander well proposes: “The simplest explanation of the verse is that which understands it as descriptive not of subjugation but of intimate conjunction, as if he had said, those who are now strangers and foreigners shall yet be sharers in your daily occupations, and entrusted with your dearest interests.” To me, this is the only explanation that makes sense, especially when we read: “And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God; And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone” (Ephesians 2:17–20, emphasis added). ¶ Elder George Q. Cannon was concerned about inequalities among the Saints: “When we are united, so that we shall not consume the wealth that God will give us upon our lusts, upon creating class distinctions, raising one class above another, one class living in luxury and another class groveling in poverty; but when we are so organized that there will be no rich and no poor, but all partaking alike of the bounties that God shall give unto us, then, and in my opinion, not till then, can he bestow upon us the wealth that he has promised. It would ruin us today if we had it, and God, as I view his providence, withholds these blessings from us because of the effects they would have upon us as a people. He does not wish to destroy us. But when we are organized aright, then what? Why, then will be fulfilled after a while another saying of Isaiah’s—‘And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers. But ye shall be named the Priests of the Lord: men shall call you the ministers of our God.’ All these problems of capital and labor²⁵ can be solved by this principle and in no other way, and there will be an incessant and never-ending conflict between capital and labor until they are solved in this manner.”²⁶ Throughout the Old Testament, the Lord has commanded that we love and care for the widow, the orphan and the foreigner. Perhaps what Elder George Q. Cannon is saying here is that until the Saints are ready to treat the stranger as a brother, these scriptures will not be fulfilled. ¶ And the sons of the

²² See also Rain in Due Season, Leviticus 26:22, 26, 31–32, 35.

²³ Elder Orson Pratt, “Fulfillment of Prophecy.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 August 1875. JD 18:144.

²⁴ Elder Orson Pratt, “Redemption of Zion.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 24 January 1858. JD 6:205b.

²⁵ My second area of specialty—beside conflict management—has been that of labor productivity. There are solutions that are a benefit for both capital and labor, but for these to function, to be truly sustainable, they must benefit both capital and labor in the long run. Few areas of my work have been more promising in this regard than that of piece-rate pay design. Yet, in almost every case greed enters the picture. See my book, Labor Management in Agriculture: Cultivating Personnel Productivity, also available as a free PDF download from the University of California.

²⁶ Elder George Q. Cannon, “The United Order.” Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 8 October 1874. JD 17:244.

alien [shall be] your plowmen and your vinedressers. The LXX (6) reads, “And foreigners shall be thy ploughmen and vine dressers.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And the sons of strangers shall be your husbandmen, and the dressers of your vines.” ¶ Shalom Paul notes that these particular employments, plowmen and vineyard workers, are also mentioned together in Joel 1:11; and 2 Chronicles 26:10. Keith suggests: “As the priests, by having their temporal wants ministered to by others, were enabled to give themselves wholly to the service of the Lord, so by the ministering of strangers to them will Israel be enabled the better to place themselves at their Lord’s disposal.” ¶ I see in both the shepherds and the plowmen a reversal of the curses in Rain in Due Season. There we saw: “Thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather the grapes thereof” (Deuteronomy 28:30b). Vineyard are among the most labor intensive agricultural enterprises, and a vinedresser would be required such tasks as plowing, weeding, pruning, thinning, irrigating, harvesting, and pant propagation. ¶ The reward here spoken off, suggests Jenour, may have nothing to do with flocks and vineyards in terms of animals and grape vines, but rather congregations of believers. Furthermore, “Their ministers, consequently, may be termed figuratively, shepherds, husbandmen, &c... . But strangers mean the Gentiles. The sense of the passage therefore is, that Gentiles should become ministers of the Church.” Now, if Jenour had had an understanding of the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ (he published his book on Isaiah in 1830, in England), he would realize he was almost correct, for out of the Gentile nations would the priests and ministers, or literal descendants of Ephraim and Manasseh, would be charged to begin this great work. They would then be joined by those of every tribe of Israel ending up with Judah.

6 But ye shall be named the Priests of the LORD: [men] shall call you the Ministers of our God: ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves.

But ye shall be named the Priests of the LORD: The LXX (6) reads, “But you shall be called priests of the Lord.” ¶ President N. Eldon Tanner said, “It is a great privilege, blessing, and responsibility to be a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where the priesthood and authority of God directs and administers the affairs of the Church. By and under this authority all ordinances of the Church are administered and received. It is even a greater privilege, blessing, and responsibility to hold this priesthood and authority, and it is about this divine power that I should like to write

... One of the distinguishing and important features of the Church is its priesthood, defined so beautifully by President Joseph F. Smith: ‘[The priesthood] is nothing more nor less than the power of God delegated to man by which man can act in the earth for the salvation of the human family, in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, and act legitimately; not assuming that authority, nor borrowing it from generations that are dead and gone, but authority that has been given in this day in which we live by ministering angels and spirits from above, direct from the presence of Almighty God’ (Gospel Doctrine, 1939 ed., pp. 139–40.) ... The authority of the priesthood cannot be assumed or arrogated to oneself, but must be delegated by God through one having authority. One of the reasons for confusion in the churches today is that man has assumed this authority without proper delegation from the Lord.”²⁷ ¶ [Men] shall call you the Ministers of our God: The Targum (7) has, “It shall be said of you that ye are those who minister before our God.” The LXX (6) reads, “Ministers of God.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “To you it shall be said: Ye ministers of our God.” ¶ Keith has: “‘Ministers’ [מְשָׁרְתִי] here is another name for priests (as in Ezekiel 44:11 [מְשָׁרְתִים, from the root שָׁרַת]).” Kay points out that the Apostle Paul “spoke of himself as being ‘a minister (λειτουργον) of Jesus Christ to the nations, ministering (ιερουργουντα) the Gospel of God’²⁸ [and that] Israel would at length realize its high vocation as ‘a kingdom of priests’ (Exodus 19:6; 1 Peter 2:5–9).” ¶ President John Taylor declared: “Men shall call you the ministers of our God. And we want to minister for God in time and throughout the eternities that are to come. We have started in, and we will try by the help of God and the light of His Holy Spirit, and the revelations that he will give to us from time to time—we will try and operate and cooperate with the Priesthood in the eternal worlds, either on this earth or in the heavens. We shall operate until the work that God has designed pertaining to this earth shall be accomplished, and the living and the dead saved so far as they are capable of being saved according to eternal laws that exist in the heavens, and according to the decrees of the Almighty. Don’t you think we have something to do? I remember when I was first called to the Apostleship some 46 years ago. I looked at the calling square in the face, and said, ‘Well, this is a life work: this is an operation that will last a lifetime.’ I have got other ideas since then, namely, that when I get through in this world I expect to officiate in the other. Hence it is an eternal operation, and that is the difference between what I then thought and what I now think. God has revealed unto us great and glorious truths, and He is prepared to reveal more if we will only place ourselves under His guidance and His direction.”²⁹ ¶ Ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles. The LXX (⚡) reads, “You shall eat the wealth of nations.” Both Elders George A. Smith³⁰ and Orson Hyde³¹ associated this verse with the importance of storing up grains and a food supply with which the Saints can feed the nations (see notes in ISAIAH 60:14, as well as ISAIAH 60:5–11). The general idea is that the converts will bring much to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in terms of economic or talent contributions. ¶ And in their glory shall ye boast yourselves. The Targum (⚡) has, “delight” for glory. The LXX (⚡) reads, “And for their riches be admired.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “And you shall pride yourselves in their glory.” ¶ Keith suggests this clause: “In the possession of what they gloried in, in the wealth of the Gentiles, ye shall boast.”

²⁷ President N. Eldon Tanner, “The Priesthood of God.” June 1973 Ensign.

²⁸ “That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles [i.e., nations], ministering the gospel of God, that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost” (Romans 15:16).

7 For your shame [ye shall have] double; and [for] confusion they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess the double: everlasting joy shall be unto them.

For your shame [ye shall have] double; and [for] confusion they shall rejoice in their portion. The Targum (⚡) has, “Instead of your having suffered shame, and confusion (literally, ‘that ye were ashamed’), I will bring unto you double mercies which I have promised you, and the gentiles who glory in their portion shall be confounded.” The Lamsa Peshitta (⚡) has, “Instead of your shame and your confusion, you shall have a double inheritance in their lands.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “For your double confusion and shame, they shall praise their part.” ¶ See also ISAIAH 40:1–2. Jenour says that the shame to be suffered was predicted in Rain in Due Season, Deuteronomy 28. Henderson has: “The Jews have been the subjects of ignominy among all nations. When restored, the honour conferred upon them by Jehovah, and the estimation in which they shall be held by believing Gentiles, will far overbalance the contempt in which they have been held.

²⁹ President John Taylor, “Blessings in Store for the Faithful.” Dedication of the Temple, in the Tabernacle, Logan, Cache County, 18 May 1884. JD 25:187–188.

³⁰ Elder George A. Smith, “Storing Up Grain.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 9 October 1867. JD 12:142b.

³¹ Elder Orson Hyde. “Storing up Grain.” 14 June 1857 JD 5:16a.

מִשְׁנֵה, double, i.e., ample, full.” ¶ Therefore in their land they shall possess the double: The LXX (⚡) reads, “Thus shall they again inherit the land.” The Lamsa Peshitta (⚡) has, “And you shall rejoice in their portion; everlasting joy shall be yours.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “Therefore shall they receive double in their land.” ¶ Not just the Holy Land associated with Israel, but also the American Continent. ¶ Everlasting joy shall be unto them. The LXX (⚡) reads, “And everlasting joy shall be on their head.” ¶ This is the joy that accompanies eternal life or exaltation. It is of eternal duration rather than a fleeting moment. ISAIAH 35:10 has: “And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.”

8 For I the LORD love judgment, I hate robbery for burnt offering; and I will direct their work in truth, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them.

For I the LORD love judgment. The LXX (⚡) reads, “For I am the Lord who love righteousness.”

¶ Rawlinson here speaks of Divine Investiture (emphasis added): “Either ‘the Servant’ here identifies himself with Jehovah, or he cites a declaration of Jehovah which he has authority to announce. Jehovah will restore the Israelites to their land because he ‘loves judgment’ (equivalent to ‘justice’) and hates injustice.” The Savior wished the widow, the orphan and the foreigner to be treated with love and care and for people to proceed in righteousness in all their affairs with their fellow beings. ¶ I hate robbery [נָזַל] for burnt offering. The Targum (⚡) has, “Lying and violence are an abomination in my presence.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “And hate the spoils of injustice.” The Peshitta (⚡) has “I hate robbery and injustice (BPE) / iniquity (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “And hate robbery in a holocaust.” ¶ Note that several ancient traditions translate “burnt offering” as injustice or iniquity. The Hebrew is עֲוֹלָה (Gesenius, contracted form of עֲוֹלָה). Cowles suggests: “This verse is logically connected with what immediately precedes. The Lord gives honor to his righteous people (as said there) because he loves judgment, right dealing; and also shame to those who oppress wrongfully because he hates unjust violence—literally, the tearing away with injustice, i.e., of what belongs to others. The word translated in the English version, ‘burnt-offerings,’ is now held by the best critics to mean injustice, wrong, the word coming by etymology from a root which means, to be distorted, wrested, and hence wrong; and not, as was anciently supposed, from the verb which means to go up, i.e., upon the altar, whence the usual word for burnt-offerings.” In addition to the multiple scholars, the context seems to better fit the idea of injustice, or one of its synonyms, for עֲוֹלָה. DCH (6:298) translates עֲוֹלָה as “injustice, wrong, evil, dishonesty, deceit.” Gesenius says in ISAIAH 61:8, “עֲוֹלָה:—(I.) contr. for עֲוֹלָה iniquity.” So also HAL, specifically for ISAIAH 61:8. Several other Lexicons suggest that עֲוֹלָה can be substituted for עֲוֹלָה. Some translations include: “For I, Jehovah, love justice, I hate robbery with iniquity” (ASV); “That’s because I am the LORD and I love justice. I hate stealing and everything that is wrong” (ERV); and “The LORD says, ‘I love justice and I hate oppression and crime’” (GNB). ¶ Robbing animals to carry out a burnt offering would be much like justifying gambling with the idea that we would pay tithing on the earnings. ¶ We also read: “The people of the land have used oppression, and exercised robbery [גָּזַל], and have vexed the poor and needy: yea, they have oppressed the stranger wrongfully” (Ezekiel 22:29). ¶ Regarding robbery [גָּזַל], Jennings says: “But robbery, [is] the assumption of that to which the pretender has no right.” A specific type of robbery under this definition is priestcraft. In the Book of Mormon we read: “Nevertheless, this did not put an end to the spreading of priestcraft through the land; for there were many who loved the vain things of the world, and they went forth preaching false doctrines; and this they did for the sake of riches and honor” (Alma 1:16). So, it is clear that the preaching of false doctrine is also a form of robbery or priestcraft. Elder Orson Pratt taught: “There are many of the honest in heart deceived by the cunning craftiness of the children of men, by priestcraft which lies at the foundation of all the persecutions endured by Latter-day Saints.”³² (See also Priestcraft under LDS Bible Topical Guide.) Is it not interesting that our Savior was accused of such priestcraft or robbery? “[Jesus testified] I and my Father are one. Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him. Jesus answered them, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me? The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God. Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law³³, I said, Ye are gods? If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken; Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?” (John 10:30–36). Paul said of Christ: “Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God” (Philippians 2:6, emphasis added). ¶ And I will direct their work in truth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And I will render the reward of their work in truth.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And I will give the righteous the fruit of their toil.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “And I will make their work in truth.” ¶ The Lord directs His work through revelation. From the Prophet Joseph Smith we have: “Having a knowledge of God, we begin to know how to approach Him, and how to ask so as to receive an answer. When we understand the character of God, and know how to come to Him, he begins to unfold the heavens to us, and to tell us all about it”;³⁴ and “A person may profit by noticing the first intimation of the spirit of revelation; for instance, when you feel pure intelligence flowing into you, it may give you sudden strokes of ideas, so that by noticing it, you may find it fulfilled the same day or soon; (i.e.) those things that were presented unto your minds by the Spirit of God, will come to pass; and thus by learning the Spirit of God and understanding it, you may grow into the principle of revelation, until you become perfect in Christ Jesus.”³⁵ ¶ And I will make an everlasting covenant with them. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And make an everlasting covenant with them.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has perpetual instead of everlasting. ¶ Birks notes: “The charge against Israel, at the opening of the whole book,³⁶ is criminal profaneness amidst their burnt offerings, ‘iniquity and solemn meeting,’ which God would not endure, a service sacred in name and form, polluted by flagrant wrong. Here, where the promise returns to Israel, after ages of sorrow, this charge is brought against the Gentiles, the nominal Christians, who have been foremost among their despisers and oppressors. Their burnt offerings and acts of worship have been joined with flagrant oppression and persecution of the Jewish people. They have, robbed them of their goods; and even of God’s promises, applying the curses to the Jews, and taking the blessings to themselves. This crime of the Gentiles is here reprov’d, a counterpart to the rebuke of Israel at the opening of the whole prophecy.” ¶ President Wilford Woodruff also accused the Gentiles of robbing the Jews: “Because that curse of God rests upon [the Jews] and will rest upon them until Shiloh comes, until they are regathered to Jerusalem and re-build the city in

³² Elder Orson Pratt, JD 24:30a, “Exhortations from Isaiah.” 26 October 1879.

³³ See Psalm 82:6.

³⁴ Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 6:303, 308, 312.

³⁵ Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 3:381.

³⁶ See ISAIAH 1.

un-belief.³⁷ You cannot convert a Jew.³⁸ They will never believe in Jesus Christ until he comes to them in Jerusalem, until these fleeing Jews take back their gold and silver to Jerusalem and re-build their city and temple, and they will do this as the Lord lives. Then the gentiles will say, ‘Come let us go up to Jerusalem; let us go up and spoil her. The Jews have taken our gold and silver from the nations of the earth—come let us go up and fight against Jerusalem.’ Then will the prophecies that are before you be fulfilled. The Gospel was preached first to the Jews and then to the Gentiles. The Jews rejected the message: the Gentiles received it, and unto them was given all the gifts and blessings of the Gospel. But Paul³⁹ told them to take heed lest they fell through the same example of unbelief.”⁴⁰ Keith says, “The everlasting covenant is that of which it is said, ‘The days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah,’ &c. (Jeremiah 31:31–33).” This new covenant, which is the Abrahamic covenant, is now in full force, with the restoration of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the restitution of the various Priesthood keys.

9 And their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people: all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they [are] the seed [which] the LORD hath blessed.

³⁷ These comments from President Woodruff in 1881 have come to pass exactly this way. Those who first returned to Israel, for the most part, returned in unbelief. There were various Jewish groups in this respect. The Zionists who promoted the return (led by ‘Theodor Herzl in 1896,’ The Jewish Encyclopedia, 12:672) were opposed by some who felt God would visibly create the way for them to return: “It was supposed to be forcing the hand of Providence and to be contrary to the positive teachings of Orthodox Judaism in regard to the coming of the Messiah and the providential work of God in bringing about the restoration” (The Jewish Encyclopedia, 12:672). My grandparents, belonging to Reform Judaism, were non-Zionists. In other words, they did not take a stance for or against. With time, many of the anti-Zionists and non-Zionists joined in helping in the formation of the State of Israel. But the point is that it was the non-religious Jews who led the way.

³⁸ I would suggest that President Woodruff was speaking in general terms, that Judah would be the last of the tribes of Israel to join the Gospel. “Anciently [the Gospel] was preached to the Jews first and then to the Gentiles; in the latter times it will be first preached to the Gentiles and then to the Jews—the first shall be last and the last first” (JD 10:220, Wilford Woodruff, June 2, 1863); “The Gentiles were the last to receive the Gospel in ancient times, but on its restoration by the angel in the last days, they are to receive it first, and then the Jews” (JD 18:226, Orson Pratt, August 26, 1876)

³⁹ Romans 11:20–21, and also see Romans 11:23–27.

⁴⁰ JD 22:175, Wilford Woodruff, June 12, 1881.

And their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And their sons shall be magnified amongst the nations, and their sons’ sons amongst the kingdoms.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And their seed shall be distinguished among the nations? and their offspring in the midst of peoples.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) makes it sound as if these are two parallel statements, rather than speaking first of the seed and then of the seed’s seed. The BPE (Ⲥ) preserves the same translation as the KJV for the second clause, “and the descendants of their descendants among the nations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And they shall know their seed among the Gentiles, and their offspring in the midst of peoples.” ¶ Gill suggests: “Not only the Jews will be converted as a body in the latter day, but there will be a succession of converts among them in later ages, and will be known among Christian Gentiles by their faith and love, and good works and holy conversation; and will be taken notice of and acknowledged by them as brethren, and will be famous among them for religion and godliness.” Keith quotes Zephaniah “I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame” (Zephaniah 3:19). ¶ Alexander speaks of the seeming contradiction between God’s people being gathered, on the one hand, and their being recognized among all the nations they inhabit, on the other: “... the parallelism ... requires the usual one of being known, as corresponding better to the phrase they shall recognise them. Thus understood, the first clause means that they shall be known among the nations in their true character as a seed or race highly favoured of Jehovah.” In the next clause we shall see there is no contradiction at all. ¶ All that see them shall acknowledge them, that they [are] the seed [which] the LORD hath blessed. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Every one who seeth them will know them, that they are a seed whom God hath blessed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has know for acknowledge. Alexander continues: “Issue means progeny or offspring, as in ISAIAH 48:19. In order to apply this to the restored Jews [better, restored Israel beginning with Ephraim—GB], we must depart from the literal and obvious import of among and in the midst, and understand them as denoting merely that they shall be heard of; for how can they be said to be among and in the midst of the nations at the very time when they are gathered from them to their own land. And yet the whole connection seems to favour the first meaning, and to shew that they are here described as being scattered through the nations, and there recognised by clear distinctive marks as being God’s peculiar people.” Then Elder Russel M. Nelson answers this dilemma posed by Alexander: “The choice to come unto Christ is not a matter of physical location; it is a matter of individual commitment. People can be ‘brought to the knowledge of the Lord’ without leaving their homelands. True, in the early days of the Church, conversion often meant emigration as well. But now the gathering takes place in each nation. The Lord has decreed the establishment of Zion in each realm where he has given His Saints their birth and nationality. Scripture foretells that the people ‘shall be gathered home to the lands of their inheritance, and shall be established in all their lands of promise.’⁴¹ Finally, Alexander adds, “The true application of the verse is to the Israel of God in its diffusion among all the nations of the earth, who shall be constrained by what they see of their spirit, character, and conduct, to acknowledge that they are the seed which the Lord hath blessed.” ¶ Young asks if we are living in such a way that the Gospel light is reflected in us and points us to 2 Corinthians 3: “Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men: Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart” (2 Corinthians 3:2–3). ¶ President Harold B. Lee shared: “Jesus [said]: ‘Therefore, hold up your light that it may shine unto the world. Behold I am the light which ye shall hold up—that which ye have seen me do. Behold ye see that I have prayed unto the Father, and ye all have witnessed’ (3 Nephi 18:24). Our task is to ‘hold up’ to the world that which Jesus has done for man: the atonement, the example He set, and the teachings He has given us personally and through His prophets, ancient and modern. The Master also counseled us: ‘Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven’ (Matthew 5:16). In all leadership situations in which we seek to improve human behavior, it is difficult to overestimate the power of example—whether it consists of parents both showing and telling their children about the value of temple marriage or a returned missionary who shines forth as a result of the changes and maturation the gospel has wrought in him. ‘Ye are the light of the world; a city set upon a hill.’ What does that mean? Any Latter-day Saint in Church circles, in military service, in social life, or in the business community is looked upon not just as an individual, but as the visible Church today. Someone has said: ‘Be careful how you act, because you may be the only Standard Church Works some people may ever read.’ The Lord here warns us that the standard of living in the Church must be visibly higher than the standard of living in the world” (emphasis added).⁴²

⁴¹ Elder Russel M. Nelson, October 2006 General Conference.

⁴² “Sharing the Gospel,” Teachings of Presidents of the Church: Harold B. Lee, (2000), 153–63.

vv. 10–11. The Lord’s disciples are dressed in the robes of the Priesthood. Hymns of praise will come forth from the disciples who are made righteous in Christ.

10 ¶ I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh [himself] ✓ with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth [herself] with her jewels.

✓ decketh as a priest

I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Jerusalem shall say, I will greatly rejoice in the Word of the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in the salvation of my God.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they shall rejoice in the Lord with joy. Rejoice in the Lord, my soul.” ¶ Whitehouse, regarding this verse, says: “We seem to hear in this verse the welcome echo of Jeremiah 31:31 ff.” Keith well notes: “The burden [i.e., emphasis] of her song is neither the removal of her temporal curses nor the possession of temporal honours, but her possession of spiritual blessings.” Kimhi, in Rabbi Rosenberg, suggests that יהנה “is used to denote the Divine attribute of mercy;” אלהים, that of justice.” This may well be one of the few places where the Hebrew Bible preserves the distinct identities of the Father and the Son. Truly, it is the role of the Son, יהנה to advocate mercy for us before the Father, אלהים. Nyman suggests: “Israel’s preparation for her marriage to the Lamb in the last days, as described by John the Revelator (see Revelation 19:7–9; 21:2), is also described here by Isaiah.” ¶ For he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “He hath covered me with the upper garment of righteousness.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For he hath clothed me with the mantle of Salvation, and with an under garment of gladness.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has justice for righteousness. ¶ Cheyne says: “Garments of salvation] The figure reminds us of ISAIAH 59:17.” It also brings to mind the washings, anointings [oil of joy, ISAIAH 60:3] and dressing in priesthood robes as mentioned in Leviticus 8 (see heading there, “Aaron and his sons are washed, anointed, clothed in their priesthood robes, and consecrated before all Israel.”). Also see the white robes given to the righteous in Revelation 6:11; and 7:9. Furthermore, we read: “And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes” (Revelation 7:13–17). ¶ The Apostles of the Lamb will be among those who wear these white robes: “For the hour is nigh, and that which was spoken by mine apostles must be fulfilled; for as they spoke so shall it come to pass; For I will reveal myself from heaven with power and great glory, with all the hosts thereof, and dwell in righteousness with men on earth a thousand years, and the wicked shall not stand. And again, verily, verily, I say unto you, and it hath gone forth in a firm decree, by the will of the Father, that mine apostles, the Twelve which were with me in my ministry at Jerusalem, shall stand at my right hand at the day of my coming in a pillar of fire, being clothed with robes of righteousness, with crowns upon their heads, in glory even as I am, to judge the whole house of Israel, even as many as have loved me and kept my commandments, and none else” (D&C 29:10–12). ¶ The Kirtland Temple dedicatory prayer, further, includes these words: “And be adorned as a bride for that day when thou shalt unveil the heavens, and cause the mountains to flow down at thy presence, and the valleys to be exalted, the rough places made smooth; that thy glory may fill the earth; That when the trump shall sound for the dead, we shall be caught up in the cloud to meet thee, that we may ever be with the Lord; That our garments may be pure, that we may be clothed upon with robes of righteousness, with palms in our hands, and crowns of glory upon our heads, and reap eternal joy for all our sufferings” (D&C 109:74–76). ¶ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland taught: “Brothers and sisters, I testify that no one of us is less treasured or cherished of God than another. I testify that He loves each of us—insecurities, anxieties, self-image, and all. He doesn’t measure our talents or our looks; He doesn’t measure our professions or our possessions. He cheers on every runner, calling out that the race is against sin, not against each other. I know that if we will be faithful, there is a perfectly tailored robe of righteousness ready and waiting for everyone, ‘robes ... made ... white in the blood of the Lamb.’ May we encourage each other in our effort to win that prize ...”⁴³ ¶ Elder Boyd K.

⁴³ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, “The other prodigal.” April 2002 General Conference.

Packer said, “For he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness’ (ISAIAH 61:10). When we do ordinance work in the temple we wear white clothing. This clothing is symbolic of purity and worthiness and cleanliness. ... dressed in white and you feel a oneness and a sense of equality, for all around you are similarly dressed.”⁴⁴ ¶ As a bridegroom decketh [himself] with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth [herself] with her jewels. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Like a bridegroom who is happy in his bride-chamber, and like the high priest who decketh himself with robes, and like a bride who is adorned with her jewels.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He hath crowned me as a bridegroom with a crown and adorned me as a bride, with jewels.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲅ) has, “As a bridegroom decked with a crown, and as a bride adorned with her jewels.” ¶ Cowles explains: “The phrase, ‘The bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments,’ alludes in the Hebrew to the splendid turban or head-dress worn by the High Priest.” So also Orelli, who translates: “Like a bridegroom who puts on a priestly coronet, and a bride who clothes herself with her jewels.” Orelli further explains (see also back to ISAIAH 61:3, above): “He comes forward festively adorned, like a bridegroom, wearing a coronet in the manner of a priest, or like a bride in her jewelry. The first means the high priest’s⁴⁵ head-covering formed by winding a long piece of linen round the head, in such a way that it rose high above the head and ran out to a point; it is called מִנְבֶּעֶה or פֶּאֶר. That of the bridegroom, therefore, was similar.” Keith likewise has: “The clause, ‘as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments’ is literally ‘as a bridegroom decketh himself as a priest with ornaments’ (margin ||) in apparent allusion to the magnificent dress of the Jewish high-priest, and particularly to his mitre and crown.” Rawlinson explains: “That bridegrooms ordinarily wore crowns appears from the Mishna.” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff said: “The set time has come, and the world is preparing itself for these things. The Church and kingdom of God must adorn itself, and prepare for the coming of the Great Bridegroom.”⁴⁶

⁴⁴ Packer, Boyd K. The Holy Temple. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1980, pp. 71–72.

⁴⁵ Gesenius, however, suggests that this represents the headband or mitre of a priest rather than that of a high priest: מִנְבֶּעֶה (from the root נָבַע, fem. the mitre of the common priests, so called from its round form; different from מִצְנֶפֶת, the mitre of the high priest, Exodus 28:40; 29:9; 39:28.)

⁴⁶ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “The Work Progressing.” Provo Meetinghouse, 13 October 1877. JD 19:135b.

11 For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations.

For as the earth bringeth forth her bud. The LXX (6) reads, “And like the earth blooming with flowers.” Compare this verse with “For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it” (ISAIAH 55:10–11). Keith says: “As surely as the earth, at the return of spring, sends forth its shoots, will righteousness and praise yet arise from it.” ¶ And as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth. The LXX (6) reads, “And as a garden causeth its seeds to vegetate.” Instead of things that are sown, the Peshitta (S) has seed which is sown (Lamsa) / seed (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And as the garden causeth her seed to shoot forth.” ¶ Margalioth compares this verse with ISAIAH 1:30, in terms of a thesis and antithesis: “Each verse is composed of two clauses, of which the first opens with כִּי (for), the second with וְכִנְנָה (and as a garden). No example is to be found anywhere else. Nor does the expression appear elsewhere. גִּנָּה (garden in the feminine) appears in one other place in the Bible (Job 8:16) where the reading is גִּנָּתוֹ.” So it is that we have: “For ye shall be LIKE an oak whose leaf fadeth, AND LIKE A GARDEN which hath no water” (Isaiah 1:30) vs. “FOR AS the earth bringeth forth her bud, AND AS THE GARDEN causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations” (ISAIAH 61:11). Margalioth says, “Note the distress of the people, in the first verse, is compared to a fading growth, while their revival is compared to a flourishing one.” While the KJV has “and like a garden” in ISAIAH 1:30 and “and as the garden” in ISAIAH 61:11, in both instances the Hebrew is “and as a garden,” or וְכִנְנָה. ¶ Birks has: “The Lord God has sent his Anointed on this great errand of mercy, and it shall not be in vain. The phrase ‘spring forth’ (צִמְחָה) alludes to the earliest title of Messiah in this book, the Branch (צֶמַח) of the Lord (ISAIAH 4:2). The promise refers also to ISAIAH 35:1; 55:10–13, and includes all the fruits of the Gospel, from Pentecost onward to days still to come.” ¶ So the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations. The Targum (T) has, “Thus the Lord God shall reveal the righteousness and the praise of Jerusalem before all the nations.” The LXX (6) reads, “So will the Lord cause righteousness to spring up and joy in the presence of all nations.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “So shall the Lord God make justice to spring forth, and praise before all the nations.”

¶ The AV translates אֲדֹנָי יְהוִה from the Masoretic text (M) as Lord God, instead of the literal Lord Jehovah, following the Jewish tradition. ¶ Giving praise is part of gratitude. It comes forth through prayer, hymns and discipleship. See D&C 59:21. ¶ Rawlinson quotes Zephaniah: “At that time will I bring you again [another way of saying gathering—GB], even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the LORD (Zephaniah 3:20). ¶ Note the tight relationship with ISAIAH 61:3b, “That they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD.” The Lord is the Gardener. ¶ Keith has: “From the previous and subsequent verses referring to the righteousness of the Jewish nation, that alone may be intended here. It will be before all nations. So bright will be their light that it will attract the attention of the world; the Gentiles will come to it. As, when the curse of barrenness is removed from the land of Judea, the earth will give forth its increase; so, when the curse of spiritual barrenness is removed from the hearts of its people, the fruits of righteousness will appear.” Kay says: “So that the whole world is become Eden:⁴⁷ reclaimed for ever out of the hand of the unrighteous spoiler. In this Year of Jubile the earth is restored to its proper heirs, the righteous seed. For all those weary ages of wrong, compensation shall be made. The Priestly King will re-consecrate shame-stricken men, and they shall now be ‘kings and priests unto God’ (Revelation 1:6).” ¶ The Ten Tribes will also join in praises to the Lord: “And there shall they fall down and be crowned with glory, even in Zion, by the hands of the servants of the Lord, even the children of Ephraim. And they shall be filled with songs of everlasting joy” (D&C 133:32–33). ¶ These blessings to be enjoyed by Judah (southern tribes), we have also said, are also to be given to Ephraim (northern tribes), so that all of Israel will serve the Lord.

FIRST POSTED: 31 December 2016

⁴⁷ From our Articles of Faith—10b we have: “That Christ will reign personally upon the earth; and, that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory.”

Isaiah 62

The glory of Zion will shine forth like the rays of the sun that break forth after a night of darkness. Desolation will give way to blessings, including those of the temple. A way is prepared for Israel to be gathered back from all the nations under heaven. Once again, we have references to Jerusalem in the Holy Land as well as the New Jerusalem in Zion. Ironside says, “The chapter goes on to tell of the Lord in His grace restoring Israel to Himself and bringing them into all the blessing of the Abrahamic Covenant.” Finally, we discover here an oath formula that better helps us understand an oath formula in the Book of Mormon.

vv. 1–5. The Lord will not hold His peace but will work indefatigably towards the crowing of Zion. The nations shall see the glory of Zion. A new name shall be given by revelation by the Lord. Returning Israel shall be crowned by the children of Ephraim. The marriage feast will take place and Jerusalem and the New Jerusalem shall not be forsaken.

1 ¶ FOR Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp [that] burneth.

FOR Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Till I work salvation for Zion, I will give no rest to the nations, until I bring consolation to Jerusalem, I will give no rest to the kingdoms.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For Sion’s sake I will not be silent, and for the sake of Jerusalem I will not rest.” ¶ As Kay explains, these words are of the Messiah, “He who ‘makes intercession’¹ (ISAIAH 53:12) continually on behalf of His redeemed.” And furthermore, Kay observes: “Will not rest] s.w.a.² in Psalm 83:1, of God; in Ruth 3:18, of Boaz; in reference to his ‘performing the part of a kinsman’ (or, redeemer, נָסִיחַ).” The idea is not to rest until the task is accomplished: not to permit “grass to grow under the feet.” Cowles has: “Messiah is ... expressing his untiring zeal and unflagging interest in this promised enlargement of Zion. He will never rest till it be fully accomplished.” Alexander says, “Kimhi follows the Targum in explaining this verse as the language of Jehovah.” Some exegetes feel these are the words of Jehovah while others are just as convinced that they are the words of Messiah. As LDS we realize that Messiah is Jehovah. However, it is through the principle of Divine Investiture that we can more easily comprehend these things as Jehovah speaks the words of Elohim. ¶ Until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Till her light be revealed as the early dawn.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Until the righteousness thereof break forth as light.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Till her just one come forth as brightness.” ¶ Wordsworth suggests: “[Zion] has been commanded to enlarge the place of her tent, to lengthen her cords, and strengthen her stakes, so that the spiritual tent of the Church, which had its centre in Zion, should stretch itself forth with universal capaciousness, and enfold all Nations.” Kay points out that this is a “reversal of ISAIAH 59:9.” Barnes says: “Go forth as brightness] The word used here is commonly employed to denote the splendor, or the bright shining of the sun, the moon, or of fire (see ISAIAH 60:19; compare ISAIAH 4:5; 2 Samuel 23:4; Proverbs 4:18). The meaning is, that the salvation of people would resemble the clear shining light of the morning, spreading over hill and vale, and illuminating all the world [and reflecting on the next clause:] A blazing torch—giving light all around and shining afar.” In this beautiful spring day, the sun has just now come up from behind the Andes Mountains and the snow-filled volcanoes. I have to hide my eyes from its glorious brightness as its rays fall on Lake Llanquihue and all around. Kimhi, in Rabbis Slotki/Rosenberg has: “As the burning torch can be seen far and wide, so will Zion’s salvation be visible to all.” ¶ And the salvation thereof as a lamp [that] burneth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And her salvation shall burn as a lamp.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And my salvation blaze like a torch.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And her saviour be lighted as a lamp. Luther says: “The prophet describes the rise of the Gospel as torches and rays of the sun...” Gill has in part: “Which gives light, and is seen afar off; her open deliverance from all her enemies ... and her salvation by Jesus Christ, which will be more clearly published in the Gospel ministry in the latter day.” The Gospel of Jesus Christ will shine with purity upon the world, through The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

¹ Also see intercessory prayer, John 17.

² Same way as.

2 And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the LORD shall name.

And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: The LXX (6) reads, “And nations see thy righteousness, and kings this glory of thine.” The Douay-Rheims (2) has, “And the Gentiles shall see thy just one, and all kings thy glorious one.” ¶ President John Taylor declared, “We are here to build up the Church of God, the Zion of God, and the kingdom of God, and to be on hand to do whatever God requires—first to purge ourselves from all iniquity, from covetousness and evil of every kind: to forsake sin of every sort, cultivate the Spirit of God, and help to build up His kingdom; to beautify Zion and have pleasant habitations, and pleasant gardens and orchards, until Zion shall be the most beautiful place there is on the earth. Already Zion is attracting the attention of the people of the world. I have all kinds of people calling on me—Lords, Admirals, Senators, Members of the House of Representatives, Members of the Parliament of England, of the Reichstag of Germany, and the Chamber of Deputies of France—all classes come and they say, ‘You have a most beautiful place here!’ Why, yes. And by and by the kings of the earth will come to gaze upon the glory of Zion, and we are here to build it up under the instruction of God our Heavenly Father. Zion shall yet become the praise and the glory of the whole earth, and, as I have said, kings and princes shall come to gaze upon her glory, and we shall be able to teach their senators wisdom, and their philosophers intelligence; for we shall be all taught of God.”³ ¶ The Savior explained, “And when that day shall come, it shall come to pass that kings shall shut their mouths; for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider. For in that day, for my sake shall the Father work a work, which shall be a great and a marvelous work among them; and there shall be among them those who will not believe it, although a man shall declare it unto them” (3 Nephi 21:8–9, ISAIAH 52:15, emphasis added). These word have a direct relationship to our Savior Jesus Christ, in association with ISAIAH 53 (also, in terms of Messiah, see ISAIAH 59:19), but they are moreover related to the marvelous work and wonder associated with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Truly, the whole world shall see the glory of Zion—which is the reflected glory of Christ. ¶ And thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the LORD shall name. The Targum (C) has, “And they shall call thee by a new name, which the Word of the Lord shall declare.” The LXX (6) reads, “When he shall call thee by a new name which the Lord himself will give thee.” Instead of shall name, the Peshitta (S) has shall bestow upon you (Lamsa) / shall determine (BPE).

¶ With few exceptions the exegetes have suggested that the nation of Israel would receive a new name, such as those mentioned in ISAIAH 62:4. Elder M. Russell Ballard taught: “The Saints in New Testament times were called Christians because they professed a belief in Jesus Christ. That name, first used derogatorily by their detractors, is now a name of distinction; and we are honored to be called a Christian church.” ¶ Several versions use the expression the Lord will bestow rather than the Lord shall name. Shalom Paul has: “And you shall be called by a new name that the Lord Himself shall bestow” You shall be given a ‘new name’

(שֵׁם חָדָשׁ; the expression appears only here) ... and this name shall be bestowed on you by the Lord Himself ... For the expression שֵׁם (שֵׁם) (‘to bestow a name’), see Numbers 1:17; Ezra 8:20; cf. also Leviticus 24:11, 16 (twice).” ¶ A new name is also to be bestowed on individuals and is a gift from the Lord. In the Doctrine and Covenants we read: “Then the white stone mentioned in Revelation 2:17, will become a Urim and Thummim to each individual who receives one, whereby things pertaining to a higher order of kingdoms will be made known; And a white stone is given to each of those who come into the celestial kingdom, whereon is a new name written, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it. The new name is the key word” (D&C 130:10 – 11).” See also ISAIAH 65:15 {especially LXX (6)}. ¶ Elder Orson Hyde said: “After reflecting a little this morning, a passage of Scripture occurred to my mind—the words of John the Revelator, or the promise made to him. It says, ‘Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name.’”⁵ President Brigham Young also quoted John and tied these words to the ordinances to be received by our departed through temple work: “When we return to build up the waste places of Zion [ISAIAH 61:4—GB], then will the Scripture be fulfilled— ‘Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.’ The servants of God will officiate for the dead in the temples of God which will be built. The Gospel is now preached to the spirits in prison, and when the time comes for the servants of God to officiate for them, the names of those who have received the Gospel in the spirit will be revealed by the angels of God and the spirits of just men made perfect; also the places of their birth, the age in which they lived, and everything regarding them that is necessary to be recorded on earth, and they will then be saved so as to find admittance into the presence of God, with their relatives who have officiated for them. The wicked will be cleansed and purified as by fire; some of them will be saved as by fire. Some will be given over to the buffeting of Satan, that their spirits may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. Others will receive their bodies, but cannot be saved in the kingdoms and mansions that are in the presence of God. All the children of men will receive a glory in the mansions of God according to their capacities, and rewards according to their acts in the flesh. Brethren and friends, do you naturally despise such a doctrine as this, or does it find a response of welcome in your bosoms? My soul says, Hallelujah, every moment I think of the ample provisions God has made for his sons and daughters. They will not welter in hell to an endless eternity, but they will rise higher and higher, and continue to increase in intelligence and love of truth as they advance. There will be an eternal progress in the knowledge of God.”⁶ Elder Charles C. Rich explained: “As Latter-day Saints, it is important that we understand the principles of salvation, that we may be enabled to comprehend and obtain all the keys, principles, and blessings pertaining thereto. It was a long time after the Prophet Joseph Smith had received the keys of the kingdom of God, and after Hyrum and others had received many blessings, that the Lord gave Joseph a revelation, to show him and others how they could ask for and receive certain blessings. We read in the revelations of St. John, that the Saints are to receive a white stone, ‘and in the stone a new name, which no man knoweth save him that receiveth it.’ Joseph tells us that this new name is a key-word, which can only be obtained through the endowments. This is one of the keys and blessings that will be bestowed upon the Saints in these last days, for which we should be very thankful.”⁷

³ President John Taylor, “Zion Already Attracting Attention.” Bowery, Deseret, 18 June 1883. JD 24:201. Also see JD 26:111a.

⁴ By, by a/the name, as in Numbers 1:17, בְּשֵׁמוֹת.

⁵ Elder Orson Hyde, JD 1:122, 6 October 1853.

3 Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the LORD, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God.

⁶ President Brigham Young, JD 9:317, 13 July 1862.

⁷ Elder Charles C. Rich, JD 19:251–252, 10 February 1878.

Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the LORD. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Ye shall be a crown of glory before the Lord.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Then thou shalt be a crown of beauty in the hand of the Lord.”

¶ Henderson explains: “It has been thought by some that there is a want of congruity in representing the crown as in the hand, instead of its being upon the head; but it must be obvious, that with no propriety whatever could the church be spoken of as placed on the head of Jehovah. The language is designed to teach the high estimation in which Jerusalem shall be held by the Most High, and her perfect security under his protection.”

¶ Nyman (see also Victor Ludlow) well says: “In D&C 133:32 the ‘servants of the Lord, even the children of Ephraim’ – that is, the Latter-day Saints—are designated as those who will crown the lost tribes with glory when they return from the north countries.” ¶ And a royal diadem in the hand of thy God. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And a diadem of glory before thy God.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And a royal diadem in the hand of thy God.”

¶ As Henderson explains, “כִּנֹּרֶת is properly a turban or tiara wound round the head; and, as worn by Eastern monarchs, studded with the most valuable jewels.” Wordsworth suggests: “The mitre is called royal, because Christ is Priest and King (Hebrews 5:6; 7:17). Zion is said to be ‘a crown in the hand of the Lord.’ She is not worn on His head, as crowns are by earthly sovereigns. She is not His glory, but He is hers; and she is in His hand, because He will ever maintain her. The Church is crowned (says S. Jerome) with a multitude of believers; and she has a diadem, adorned with jewels, in the graces of her Saints and Martyrs, who shine like gems, which the Lord has made; whence St. Paul calls his beloved converts his ‘joy and crown’ (Philippians 4:1) ... [and returning to the gardener motif picking up flowers] And she is in the hand of God; for Christ Himself says concerning those who believe in Him, that ‘no one is able to pluck them out of His hand’ (John 10:28–29. S. Cyril).” Keith explains: “The diadem was a chaplet studded with jewels, &c., which, in early times, encircled the heads of monarchs—as is seen from ancient medallions—being used in place of the more modern crown. The same metaphor occurs in Zechariah 9:16.”

4 Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate: but thou shalt be called Delightful Hephzibah,[✓] and thy land Union Beulah;[✓] for the LORD delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married.

✓ THAT IS, My delight is in her

✓ ✓ or, THAT IS, Married

Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken [עֲזֻבָּה]. The LXX (6) reads, “And thou shalt no more be called, Forsaken.” ¶ In Israel’s history we see how the Lord divided the nation in two and then permitted her to be carried away captive. We read: “Because that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father” (1 Kings 11:33), the Lord removed the ten tribes, also known as Ephraim, from the nation of Israel. Throughout the scriptures the Lord repeatedly reproaches Israel for having forsaken Him (e.g., Deuteronomy 28:20; 29:25⁸; Judges 10:13; 1 Samuel 8:8; 1 Kings 11:33; Jeremiah 1:16; 2:13). As a result, Israel would feel forsaken of the Lord (it is interesting that when we forsake the Lord we feel forsaken of Him even though He has us continually present before His heart): “Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob” (ISAIAH 2:6a). We similarly have: “The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall no more rise: she is forsaken upon her land [note next clause, thy land ... desolate]; there is none to raise her up” (Amos 5:2). Now, all of this would change. They day would come when Israel and Jerusalem would no longer feel forsaken of the Savior. The Lord, in the Millennium will rule from His two main capitals, Jerusalem in the Holy Land and the New Jerusalem in Zion. ¶ Neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate [שְׁמִינָה]: The LXX (6) reads, “Nor shall thy land any more be called, The desert.” ¶ In Rain in Due Season we have: “And I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste” (Leviticus 26:33, emphasis added, also see Leviticus 26:22, 34–34, 43). We also read: “Your country is desolate, your cities are burned with fire: your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers” (ISAIAH 1:7, also see ISAIAH 6:11). This would change: “Thus saith the LORD, In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages” (ISAIAH 49:8; also see ISAIAH 49:19, 21; 54:1, 3). ¶ But thou shalt be called Delightful [חֶפְזִי בָהּ]. / For the LORD delighteth in thee. The Targum (C) has, “But thou shalt be called בְּרַעְיוֹתֵי בָהּ, i.e., those that do my will shall be in her.” The LXX (6) reads, “But thy name shall be called My delight.” Instead of Hephzibah, the Peshitta (S) uses the translation in the margin ||, my delight. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “but thou shalt be called My pleasure in her / Because the Lord hath been well pleased with thee.” ISBE has for *Hephzibah*⁹: “חֶפְזִי-בָהּ, ‘my delight is in her’) ... The new name of Zion (ISAIAH 62:4); Septuagint translates [Θέλημα ἐμόν, Thelema emon], ‘my delight.’” Almost all, like the Prophet Joseph Smith, translate the given names from Hebrew into English. Henderson has, “As the names here specified are merely symbolical, and will never be employed as proper names, I have deemed it right to give them in a translated form, rather than retain them.” Henderson’s own translation was: “Thou shalt no more be called, Forsaken; Neither shall thy land be any more termed, Desolate; But thou shalt be called, My-delight-is-in-her; And thy land, The Married Woman: For Jehovah shall delight in thee, And thy land shall be married.” Alexander questions Henderson’s assertion that none of these were used as given names and adds: “It is probable, however, that they were all familiar to the Jews as female names in real life. This we know to have been the case with two of them: the mother of Jehoshaphat was named Azubah (1 Kings 22:42), and the mother of Manasseh Hephzibah (2 Kings 21:1).” Alexander goes on to say that there should have been consistency, here, either all four in Hebrew; or all in English. Whitehouse says: “The Revised Version appropriately substitutes the meanings of the proper names. Hephzibah, ‘my delight is in her,’ and Beulah, ‘married.’” Except for Alexander, whose preference was to render them all in Hebrew, almost all the exegetes favor the translation of all the names, as was done by the Prophet Joseph Smith. ¶ And thy land Union [בְּעִילָהּ]; / and thy land shall be married. The Targum (C) has, “And thy land Inhabited: for the Lord shall delight in thee (Chaldee, ‘the pleasure from before the Lord shall be in thee’), and thy land shall be inhabited (i.e., ‘to marry,’ or ‘to possess one’s self of a wife’).” The LXX (6) reads, “And that of thy country, The inhabited land. Because the Lord is well pleased with thee therefore thy land shall be thickly inhabited.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And thy land inhabited / and thy land shall be inhabited.” ¶ ISBE for Beulah has:

⁹ Birks points out: “חֶפְזִי-בָהּ was the name of Hezekiah’s wife, the mother of Manasseh (2 Kings 21:1). And since her son was only twelve at his accession, her marriage was probably after Hezekiah’s recovery from sickness, that figurative resurrection of the king of Israel, when he went up after three days to the house of God. Isaiah would probably be present at these royal espousals, when the watch-words of joy were Hephzi-bah and Beulah. We have thus a delicate, indirect sign of the date and authorship of these chapters [i.e., favoring the unity of Isaiah—GB]. A very beautiful picture is borrowed from this recent marriage of Hezekiah, and the name and honour of the actual queen, or queen-mother, in the old age of Isaiah, to foreshadow the espousal of Zion, in the last days, to the risen and glorified Messiah, the true and exalted King of Israel.”

⁸ Rain in Due Season.

“בְּעוֹלָה [bèulah] “married”): A name symbolically applied to Israel: ‘Thy land (shall be called) Beulah ... thy land shall be married ... so shall thy sons marry thee’ (ISAIAH 62:4 f). In this figure, frequently used since Hosea, the prophet wishes to express the future prosperity of Israel. The land once desolate shall again be populated.” Wordsworth has: “The best exposition of these words [about the land] is to be derived from God’s promises to Abraham ... God said to Abraham, ‘I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth’ (Genesis 13:16), and as the stars of heaven (Genesis 15:5); and ‘I will multiply thee exceedingly;’ and ‘My covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. And I will establish My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant ... And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession’ (Genesis 17:1–8).” Cowles has: “The conception of marriage gave more prominence to this idea of possession than accords fully with our modern views. The sense here is that a young man takes a virgin as his own with the thought of possessing made prominent, as well as that of loving and cherishing ...” All of this makes the Prophet Joseph Smith’s inspired translation all the more glorious, as the word chosen here is union, which is much more of an equal partnership in marriage than that of a possession. So also Robert Hawker in his 1808 commentary, “Beulah means union and marriage” (emphasis added). Indeed, to unite is to become one flesh and to become one in purpose. In the Lord’s intercessory prayer we learn about the importance of being one “That they may be one, as we are” (John 17:11b). The unity which exists in the Godhead is the type of unity that is expected in our marriages and also among the Lord’s disciples. Furthermore we have: “I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one ye are not mine” (D&C 38:27b). Is that not a glorious principle for discipleship as well as for the marriage covenant? Hosea was known as the prophet of love. ¶ Elder Parley P. Pratt spoke of the uniting of the land masses, “[In ISAIAH 13:13,14 we read,] ‘The earth shall move out of her place, and be like a chased roe which no man taketh up.’ Also, ISAIAH 62:4, ‘Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzibath, and thy land Beulah: for the Lord delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married.’ In the first instance, we have the earth on a move like a chased roe; and in the second place, we have it married. And from the whole, and various Scriptures, we learn, that the continents and islands shall be united in one, as they were on the morn of creation, and the sea shall retire and assemble in its own place, where it was before, and all these scenes shall take place during the mighty convulsion of nature, about the time of the coming of the Lord.”¹⁰

5 For [as] a young man marrieth a virgin, [so] shall thy sons God marry thee; and [as] the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, [so] shall thy God rejoice over thee.

✓ with the joy of the bridegroom

For as a young man marrieth a virgin, so shall thy God marry thee. The Targum (T) has, “For as a young man dwelleth with a virgin, thus thy sons shall dwell in thee.” The LXX (G) reads, “And as a youth cohabiting with a virgin bride, so shall thy sons inhabit it.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For the young man shall dwell with the virgin, and thy children shall dwell in thee.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Mo’ed Katan 2a) gives these words the meaning of being settled: “It is written: For as a man be the husband [yib’al¹¹] of a maiden, so shall thy sons be as husbands unto thee and we render [in Aramaic], Behold as a young man settles down with a maiden, thy sons shall become settled in the midst of thee” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Without the JST, we would have to desperately search for some clever solution to the puzzle, “thy sons marry thee,” יִבְעִלוּךְ בָּנֶיךָ. But gladly, we do have the JST, for which I am most grateful. Interestingly, the BBE follows the JST with perfect correspondence: “For as a young man takes a virgin for his wife, so will your maker be married to you” (emphasis added). BDB interestingly uses the words builder as well as begetter, the latter being that of our God whose children we are: “Arabic ابْنُ (ibnun); Assyrian bin(u), LyonSargon 9, 1. 57; especially in bin-bin, grandson COTGloss., cf. DI infr.; Aramaic בִּר, בָּר (bar), pl. חֲבֵי. בְּנִין (bnin); cf. Palm., especially VogNo. 21. 31. 36 a al.; possibly orig. connected with בָּנָה build, so Thes, cf. Assyrian bânu, begetter (DIPr 104 & cf. BaZMG 1887, 638 ff.); but all traces of this √ lost in Heb. form.” So it is that YLT offers: “For a young man doth marry a virgin, Thy Builders do marry thee” (emphasis added). Lowth here offers—and is supported by Horsley: “thy restorer” בְּנִיךָ. Henderson has, in part: “Instead of בְּנִיךָ, thy sons, Lowth, Koppe, Michaelis, Döderlein, v. d. Palm, Tingstadius, Möller, and others, point בְּנִיךָ thy builders, and consider the plural to be used for the singular, as עֵשֶׂי, ISAIAH 54:5—Jehovah being meant in both instances.” The Prophet Joseph Smith, then, has the support of the world’s top Hebraists in this instance. Rawlinson has: “The people, regarded as a female (‘the virgin daughter of Zion,’ ISAIAH 37:22) is also married to Jehovah, and recognizes him as her Bridegroom (comp. ISAIAH 54:5). As Bridegroom, God calls his bride ‘Hephzi-bah’—‘my delight is in her.’” ¶ And as the bridegroom rejoiceth [שׂוֹשׁ] over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice [שׂוֹשׁ] over thee. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And as a bridegroom will rejoice in his bride, so will the Lord rejoice over thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And the bridegroom shall rejoice over the bride, and thy God shall rejoice over thee.” ¶ Young has: “The figure is designed to express the utmost of rejoicing. Rejoicing is an inner accusative; and with the rejoicing of a bridegroom, etc.” Some have suggested it is the joy of newlyweds before the honeymoon has ended. Truly, the rejoicing of newlyweds is almost unspeakable and indescribable. But honeymoons do not have to end.¹² It can be an enduring joy, like that of a temple marriage that has been sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise; one where a man’s wife never ceases to be his bride and eternal companion, the tender and dear wife of his youth. So is the rejoicing of the Lord over His people. ¶ As Kay points us, this is a direct allusion to Rain in Due Season: “And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again rejoice [שׂוֹשׁ] over thee for good, as he rejoiced [שׂוֹשׁ] over thy fathers” (Deuteronomy 30:9). Indeed, the promise is that in the latter days, after the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the Lord would once again rejoice over His people Israel. In modern Scripture we have the Lord’s angels repeatedly rejoicing over the righteous: “Nevertheless, ye are blessed, for the testimony which ye have borne is recorded in heaven for the angels to look upon; and they rejoice over you, and your sins are forgiven you” (D&C 62:3); “Behold, this is pleasing unto your Lord, and the angels rejoice over you; the alms of your prayers have come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, and are recorded in the book of the names of the sanctified, even them of the celestial world” (D&C 88:2); and “Behold, I say unto you that your brethren in Zion begin to repent, and the angels rejoice over them” (D&C 90:34).

¹⁰ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Also quoted in Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852.

¹¹ יִבְעִלוּךְ

¹² Download my free book from the University of California, Party-Directed Mediation: Facilitating Dialogue between Individuals. Read Chapters two and four on listening skills and learning interpersonal negotiation.

vv. 6–9. The prophets and the Lord’s disciples shall not cease to pray for Zion nor cease to direct people to do rightly before God. The day will come in which the cursings (which at the end are nothing but blessings from a loving Father correcting His children) mentioned in Rain in Due Season shall give way to blessings. The children of Israel shall partake of His blessings in the courts of holiness, or the temple. The Savior taught: “And now, verily saith the Lord, that these things might be known among you, O inhabitants of the earth, I have sent forth mine angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel, who hath appeared unto some and hath committed it unto man, who shall appear unto many that dwell on the earth. And this gospel shall be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people. And the servants of God shall go forth, saying with a loud voice: Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come” (D&C 133:36–38).

6 ¶ I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, [which] shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the LORD, ~ keep not silence,

✓ or, are the LORD’s remembrancers

I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Behold, the work of thy righteous fathers, O city of Jerusalem, are right.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Now upon thy walls, Jerusalem, I have set watchmen.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “Upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, I have appointed watchmen.” ¶ Birks suggests: “The figure seems thus to be not, as usually explained, of watchmen placed on the walls when rebuilt, but of watchers or overseers, to whom a charge is given to help on the rebuilding of Zion out of its ruins.” ¶ We may well change the word ruins to that of apostasy. In other words, the building of Zion after the restored Gospel has sprung forth and the long night of apostasy ended. Wordsworth notes: “Christ, the King of Zion, sets Watchmen, Prophets Apostles, and Evangelists, and all to whom He has committed the Ministry of the Word and Sacraments, to guard the walls of the spiritual City, and to give warning of the approach of the enemy.” Jenour observes: “The watchmen of the Church therefore are its ministers, who are appointed by Jehovah to be the guardians of its safety by preaching the true doctrines of the gospel, and giving warning against false ones. A constant succession of such persons¹³ is here promised by God himself ... the apostle [Paul has:] ‘And he hath given some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; for the perfecting of the saints,' &c. (Ephesians 4:2)." ¶ President John Taylor spoke about the importance of watchmen on the walls, "Has God not given to every man a portion of His Spirit to profit withal? Yes. Has He not done more than this to the saints who are true and faithful? Has He not given to them the gift of the Holy Ghost? He has, and they know it and realize it. They are brought into communion with each other, and into communion with God and the heavenly hosts. But having this Spirit do we need others to guide us? Yes, all the time. Why? Because of the powers of darkness, the influence of Satan and the weakness of human nature. We need watchmen upon the towers of Zion, who are on the alert to look after the interests of Israel, and see that God's people do not go astray."¹⁴ President Taylor went on to specifically mention home teachers as watchmen. Truly, home teaching is one of the greatest beauties of the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ. Elder Jeffrey R. Holland recently pleaded: "Brethren, the appeal I am making tonight is for you to lift your vision of home teaching. Please, in newer, better ways see yourselves as emissaries of the Lord to His children."¹⁵ ¶ [Which] shall never hold their peace day nor night: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And kept by me all the day and all the night, continually." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "All the day; and all the night, they will not cease continually." The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "All the day, and all the night, they shall never hold their peace." ¶ Cowles beautifully says: "The special point here is that that [the watchmen or ministers of the Lord] shall never hold their peace, even as the Messiah declares of himself (ISAIAH 62:1), 'I will not hold my peace'; 'I will not rest,' until Zion's righteousness shall go forth as brightness. This is therefore essentially His command to his gospel ministers to imbue their souls with his quenchless spirit of zeal, love and labor, and to prosecute their work as he does his." ¶ Ye that make mention of the LORD, keep not silence. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "The remembrance of thine excellencies is declared before the Lord, it shall not fail you." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "To mention the Lord; for there is none like you." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) adds after keep not silence, the clause nor be still. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, "You that are mindful of the Lord, hold not your peace." ¶ Lowth has: "O ye that proclaim] The faithful, and in particular the priests and Levites, are exhorted by the Prophet to beseech God, with unremitted importunity (compare Luke 18:1. &c.), to hasten the redemption of Sion. The image in this place is taken from the temple service: in which there was appointed a constant watch, day and night, by the Levites: and among them this service seems to have belonged particularly to the singers; see 1 Chronicles 9:33, Now the watches in the East, even to this day, are performed by a loud cry from time to time of the watchmen, to mark the time, and that very frequently, and in order to show that they themselves are constantly attentive to their duty. Hence the watchmen are said by the Prophet, ISAIAH 52:8, to lift up their voice; and here they are commanded, not to keep silence; and the greatest reproach to them is, that they are dumb dogs; they cannot bark; dreamers, sluggards, loving to slumber: ISAIAH 56:10." Wordsworth has: "Ye that make mention of the Lord] Ye that make mention of the Lord, and exhort others to remember Him, and who also are 'the Lord's remembrancers,' and implore Him to remember His People. The word has both senses ... These words describe the double work of the Evangelical Priesthood and Ministry, in exhorting the Lord's People to bear in mind His attributes and acts; and also in entreating Him to remember His promises to them in His well-beloved Son, their Divine Head, Who has died to redeem them, and to reconcile them to the Father." ¶ Here we have the idea of importuning God in prayer: "And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves; For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him? And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee. I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth. And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" (Luke 11:5–13).

¹³ Since the restoration of the Gospel, we have had not only a constant succession of authorized Prophets, Seers and Revelators, but also an unbroken one.

7 And give him no rest, [✓] till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.

✓ silence

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Their remembrance shall not cease from before Him, till He establish and make

¹⁴ President John Taylor, "What is Required of the Saints." Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Semi-Annual Conference, 6 and 7 October 1884. JD 25:308a.

¹⁵ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, "Emissaries to the Church," October 2016 General Conference.

Jerusalem a praise in the earth.” The LXX (6) reads, “When he shall have re-established and made Jerusalem a boast on the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has silence as in the margin||. Rashi, in Rabbi Rosenberg, translates the expression: “And give him no rest (or silence)’ [אֵל-דָּמִי לָכֶם] as ‘Let there be no silence to you’” ¶ Cowles explains this: “The antithesis between the last clause of ISAIAH 62:6 and the first in ISAIAH 62:7 is not so distinct in our English version as it might have been. Literally, ‘Give no rest [דָּמִי] to yourselves and give no rest [דָּמִי] to him,’ the same word for ‘rest’ [דָּמִי] being used in both clauses. The word means specially the rest of silence, and might be read, Let there be no silence to you, and allow no silence to him.” This verse is a command that we pray for missionary work. Over the years I have seen that we not only pray for the missionaries and missionary work in general, but also that we may have a role in helping missionaries find people to teach. Zion is being established and in due time a temple will be constructed in Jerusalem, even the temple that Ezekiel saw in vision. Oh, how glorious Jerusalem will be at that time, the praise of the earth. A similar situation will take place in Zion or the New Jerusalem.

8 The LORD hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, Surely I will no more give ~ thy corn [to be] meat for thine enemies; and the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast laboured:

✓ If I give, &c.

The LORD hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength. The LXX (6) reads, “The Lord hath sworn by his glory and by the power of his arm.”

Skinner points out: “The Lord hath sworn by his right hand &c.” i.e. so surely as He has the power to help.” The image is that of taking an oath by the lifting of the right arm and hand. In the next clause within this verse we have an idea of the formulation of the oath itself, one of special interest to readers of the Book of Mormon. The bottom line being that which the Lord says will be accomplished will surely be accomplished. ¶ Surely I will no more give thy corn [to be] meat for thine enemies. The Hebrew Masoretic text (21) reads, אֵל-דָּמִי לָכֶם, if give. That is understood as if I give, and here has an elliptical oath associated with it. Most translators instead give the bottom line meaning, such as we have here, I will not give, or may even include the oath in a different form by saying surely I will not give. We shall examine this point below. The LXX (6) reads,

“I will no more give thy corn and thy food to thine enemies.” ¶ Alexander (so also very similarly, Young), speaking of “the elliptical formula of swearing,” explains: “If I give (i.e. I will not give) thy corn any more as food to thine enemies, and if the sons of the outland shall drink thy new wine which thou hast laboured in (I am not God).” Cowles, similarly, suggests: “The form of this oath is in the peculiar Hebrew idiom, but specially emphatic and solemn. Literally it is not, ‘Surely I will no more give,’ etc., but ‘if [אֵל-דָּמִי]¹⁶ I shall any more give’ etc., then (the implication is) I am no longer God. It will be because I have not power to prevent it. The point of the affirmation is that Zion shall be pillaged and devoured by her enemies no more.” While the idea that God ceases to be God is given as an elliptical one in our Hebrew Bible, in the Book of Mormon the oath is spelled out, but also not completely. The Hebraic expression in the Book of Mormon is: “... if so, God would cease to be God” (Alma 42:13b, also see Alma 42:25; Mormon 9:19—each of these contains either an if so or an if not). May I suggest that the if so in the Book of Mormon is an oath expression, similar to if not, and is not a suggestion that God would ever cease to be God. Rather, it should be understood something to the effect of, “I give it to you as a solemn oath that before that would ever happen [i.e., the issue associated with the oath, such as the destruction of justice], God would have to cease to be God—but the one thing we know above all things is that this would not happen, for God will never cease to be God.” This, then, is another example of a Hebraic expression in the Book of Mormon. The elliptical portion of the expression in the Book of Mormon, that is, what is left out because it is understood, is different than what is left out in the Bible. It is truly fascinating, as the Bible sometimes does fill in what is normally elliptical. ¶ Let us look at some of the comments associated with Hebrews 3:10 as they related to the oath formula: “So I swear in my wrath, ~They shall not enter into my rest.” Where the || reads: “GREEK. If they shall enter. See Psalm 95:11 marg. || So Mark 8:12 (GREEK).”¹⁷ In Psalm we have: “Unto whom I swear in my wrath, ~That they should not enter into my rest (|| Heb. If they enter into my rest. Numbers 14:23. So || Psalm 89:35.)”¹⁸ Barnes explains: “So I swear in my wrath] God is often represented in the Scriptures as ‘swearing’—and usually as swearing by himself, or by his own existence. Of course this in figurative [language], and denotes a strong affirmation, or a settled and determined purpose. An oath with us implies the strongest affirmation, or the expression of the most settled and determined purpose of mind. The meaning here is, that ... he solemnly resolved that they should never enter into the land of Canaan. They shall not enter into my rest] Margin ||, As in the original, ‘if they shall enter.’ That is, they shall not enter. The word (אם) ‘if’ has this negative meaning in Hebrew, and this meaning is transferred to the Greek word ‘if;’ compare 1 Samuel 3:17; 2 Samuel 3:35; 2 Kings 6:31.”

¹⁶ Besides if, there are other possible translations for אֵל-דָּמִי, depending on the context. But it is very true that, as Cowles says, oaths are often elliptical in this way. If not [אֵל-דָּמִי], is often translated as surely. Keith also agrees with Cowles’ construction.

¹⁷ The Cambridge Paragraph Bible: of the Authorized English Version (1873). (Heb 3:11). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

¹⁸ The Cambridge Paragraph Bible (Psalm 95:11).

Vincent¹⁹ has: “They shall not enter into my rest (εἰ ἐλεύσονται εἰς τὴν κατάπαυσιν μου). Lit. if they shall enter, etc. A common Hebraistic formula in oaths. Where God is speaking, as here, the ellipsis is ‘may I not be Jehovah if they shall enter.’ Where man is speaking, ‘so may God punish me if’; or ‘God do so to me and more if.’ Comp. Mark 8:12: LXX (Θ), Genesis 14:23; Deuteronomy 1:35; 1 Kings 1:51; 2:8. Sometimes the ellipsis is filled out, as 1 Samuel 3:17; 2 Samuel 3:35.” Meyer has, “εἰ εἰσελεύσονται εἰς τὴν κατάπαυσιν μου] not enter, shall they, into my rest. εἰ is an exact imitation of the negative Hebrew particle אם in formulas of swearing, and is to be explained from an aposiopesis of the latter clause.”²⁰ Bengel has: “εἰ, if] The Apodosis omits something for the sake of euphemism, which has the force of the oath itself.”²¹ Poole has: “They shall not enter into my rest] the punishment is expressed in an expostulatory form, which is vehemently asserting the negative of the question; They shall never enter into my rest. If they enter in, then I am neither true nor God.”²² Cambridge has: “εἰ ἐλεύσονται, ‘if they shall enter’;” but “They shall not enter” (Hebrews 3:18 μὴ εἰσελεύσεσθαι) is here a correct rendering (AV, RV) of the Hebraism. It is an imitation of the Hebrew אם, and the apodosis is suppressed (aposiopesis, see Winer, p. 627).²³ Whedon has: “I swear] Made an affirmation, to be held as sure and firm as the divine existence. So Numbers 14:21, ‘As truly as I live;’ and Numbers 14:28–29, ‘As truly as I live.’”²⁴ Once again, God will no more cease to be God than He will cease to live, for the latter is a frequent oath on His part. In the following example we have two oath expressions piled together): “Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD; Surely ...” (Ezekiel 5:11); or in a more literal translation we would have, “Therefore, as I live, declares the Lord Jehovah, if not ...” לָכֵן חַי־אֲנִי נֶאֱמַר אֲדֹנָי יְהוִה אֱמֹל לֹא ... ¶ From all of these citations we conclude that the anantapodoton²⁵—when the apodosis (the then in if-then statements, protasis-apodosis) is only implied, or elliptical—is left to the conclusion of the reader. As has been noted above, the apodosis is not always implied, but at times it is given. Such is the case with the Book of Mormon examples above. There, however, an elliptical expression also exists. In this case, that we are dealing with an oath expression, where part of the protasis is given and part is elliptical.²⁶ In regards to ISAIAH 62:8b, the Lord is reassuring the children of Israel that the day would come that they would no longer be receiving the punishment for disobedience mentioned in Rain in Due Season. They would, instead, be able to reap the fruits of their labors because the day would come when the children of Jacob would be faithful and true to the Abrahamic covenant. This comforting assurance continues in the next clause. ¶ And the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast laboured: The LXX (Θ) reads, “Nor shall the sons of strangers any more drink thy wine, for which thou hast laboured.” This is a clear allusion and contrast to the cursings mentioned in Rain in Due Season: “Thou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather the grapes thereof” (Deuteronomy 28:30, but also see Deuteronomy 28:31, 33, and others). Not anymore, for now Israel would reap the blessings of her righteous endeavors. Shalom Paul has: “The term תִּירוֹשׁ refers to new wine that has yet to complete the fermentation process.” Gesenius has: “תִּירוֹשׁ & תִּירוֹשׁ m. must, new wine (so called, because in intoxicating, it takes possession of the brain, from the root יָרַשׁ, compare Syr. ܝܪܫܝܕ id.), Gen. 27:28. אֶרֶץ דִּבְרֵן וְתִירוֹשׁ a land abounding in corn and new wine, Deuteronomy 33:28; 2 Kings 18:32; ISAIAH 36:17.” As we have explained in ISAIAH 5, 24, 30, and 56, new wine is wine that has gone through the first and main fermentations, but still has not fully completed the second fermentation.

¹⁹ Vincent Word Studies. Studylight.

²⁰ Heinrich Meyer's Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the New Testament (1832). Studylight.

²¹ Johann Albrecht Bengel's Gnomon of the New Testament (1897). Studylight.

²² Matthew Poole's English Annotations on the Holy Bible (1685). Studylight.

²³ F.W. Farrar. Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges (1896). Studylight.

²⁴ Whedon, Daniel. Whedon's Commentary on the Bible (1874–1909). Studylight.

²⁵ Bullinger, E. W. (1898). Figures of speech used in the Bible. London; New York: Eyre & Spottiswoode; E. & J. B. Young & Co.

²⁶ “Ellipsis may be found in protases as well as in apodoses” say Joüon, P., & Muraoka, T. (2006) in, A grammar of biblical Hebrew (p. 594). Roma: Pontificio Istituto Biblico.

9 But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the LORD; and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness.

But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the LORD. The LXX (Ⓞ) reads, “But they who reap the harvest shall eat and praise the Lord.” Rashi and Ibn Ezra, in Rabbi Rosenberg, explain that the eating refers back to the grain or corn; and the drinking back to the wine, mentioned in ISAIAH 62:8. ¶ Once again, this is the very opposite of the curses in Rain in Due Season, as we quoted above, Deuteronomy 28:30. Instead, the people of Israel will benefit from the labor of their hands, instead of having it taken by their enemies. ¶ And praise the LORD. Feelings of gratitude lead to praise. The Lord frequently asks that we remember in gratitude. Two examples of this were given earlier this chapter. President Brigham Young has, “My soul says, Hallelujah, every moment I think of the ample provisions God has made for his sons and daughters.”²⁷ From Elder Charles C. Rich, we have: “This is one of the keys and blessings that will be bestowed upon the Saints in these last days, for which we should be very thankful.”²⁸ ¶ And they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, for the first half, “And they that tread out the wine.” The LXX (Ⓞ) reads, “And they who gather the vintage shall drink wine in my holy courts.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the last clause, “Shall drink it in my holy courts.” ¶ Some of the language we have here has reference to the harvesting of fruit, tithing, and the temple, as we find in the Torah. Lowth explains: “This and the following line have reference to the law of Moses: ‘Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil;—but thou must eat them before the Lord thy God; in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose;’ (Deuteronomy 12:17, 18). ‘And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised: three years it shall be as uncircumcised unto you; it shall not be eaten of. But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be holy to praise the Lord withal. And in the fifth year ye shall eat the fruit thereof.’ (Leviticus 19:23–25). This clearly explains the force of the expressions, ‘shall praise JEHOVAH,’ and ‘shall drink it in my sacred courts.’” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, explains it of the “second tithe and the vintage of the fourth year, both of which must be eaten in Jerusalem” (see also Deuteronomy 26:12–15). Young suggests: “According to the law the food was to be consumed before the Lord (i.e., in the sanctuary; cf. Deuteronomy 14:22–27) ... What is meant by these types and symbols is that in the redeemed Zion men will enjoy abundantly the presence of the Lord ...” Perhaps an allusion to your God – my people. Gill suggests: “[This is an] allusion is to the priests and Levites eating and drinking holy things, within the compass and bounds of the temple; and may signify the converted Jews, partaking of the Gospel and Gospel ordinances in the house of God, as well as the Gentiles, being all now made priests unto God.”

vv. 10–12. Elder Orson Pratt taught: “Now Isaiah said that when his people should get up into the mountains a highway should be cast up in the desert. ‘Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.’ What! Is it made for the Lord? Yes. What is the Lord going to do with it? He is going to gather his people from all the nations on this highway through the desert. Do you want to know anything more about this highway? Read another chapter in Isaiah; he gives more particulars than what I have mentioned. What I have read in the 40th chapter of Isaiah about the highway in the desert, is only one thing connected with it. In another chapter he says—‘Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him.’ Here is the same thing spoken of again, only it speaks of tunnels, or, in other words, gates—‘Go through, go through the gates.’ I have no idea but what Isaiah, in gazing down upon future generations, saw the time when a long train of carriages would be whirled across a continent, without any apparent animal force or power. He perhaps did not understand the modern terms for tunnel through a rock, and hence he calls them gates. ‘Go through, go through the gates; prepare the way of the people; cast up, cast up a highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people.’ Then comes in this universal proclamation—‘Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed from the ends of the world.’ Now, from the ends of the world, we should naturally suppose that Isaiah, standing in Palestine, and delivering this, would see a work that was to transpire on a very distant land. He could find no better language to describe it, than the expression ‘to the ends of the world.’ Not a work to transpire in Palestine, in his own neighborhood, but, ‘Behold the Lord should proclaim from the ends of the world, to all people, Behold, your salvation cometh.’ That is, the Lord was coming with a strong hand, and this proclamation coming from the Lord was to be sounded to all the inhabitants of the earth, a standard was to be raised, and a way prepared by this highway being cast up. There are a great many in this congregation who took part in casting up this highway. We built the most difficult portions of this railroad, through these mountains, some four hundred miles in extent. Did you work with a good cheerful heart, when you were engaged in gathering out the stones, and when you were making these gates that Isaiah speaks of, through which he saw a long train of carriages dart into the mountain, losing sight of them for a time, then seeing them come out again with great speed, from the mountain? How could he describe it any better than by saying—‘Go through, go through the gates?’ But what kind of a people were these to be who should be gathered from the ends of the world by this proclamation? Read the next verse—‘They shall call them the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord.’ Says one—‘Well, you are called anything else but that; instead of being called a holy people, you are represented, by the priests and everybody else, as a very unrighteous people.’ Very well, the Lord will, in his own due time, enable you to distinguish between the righteous and the wicked. ‘Behold, they shall call them the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord; and behold, they shall be called, sought out, a city not forsaken.’”²⁹ Truly, I believe Elder Orson Pratt was inspired with these words. Yes, the prophecies of Isaiah have been fulfilled in these ways. In a not too distant future, we will also have to explain to our descendants that Ezekiel’s prophecy about people holding two books in their hands (Ezekiel 37:15 ff.) had a literal fulfillment. It may be hard for some of them to understand as their books may mostly be in some electronic format.

²⁷ President Brigham Young, JD 9:317, 13 July 1862.

²⁸ Elder Charles C. Rich, JD 19:251–252, 10 February 1878.

10 ¶ Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people.

Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people. The Targum (T) has, “O prophets, pass through and return through the gates; turn the heart of the people into the right way; bring good tidings of good things, and consolations to the righteous, who remove the thoughts of an evil imagination, which are like a stone of stumbling; lift up a standard for the people.” The LXX (G) reads, “Go through my gates and prepare the way for my people and throw the stones out of the way. Erect a standard for the nations.” ¶ Lowth underscores this point: “The LXX indeed reads עַמִּי, my people.” Or, in Greek, λαῶ μου. Instead of cast up, cast up the highway, the Peshitta (S) has make the highway smooth (Lamsa) / prepare the way (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Go through, go through the gates, prepare the way for the people, make the road plain, pick out the stones, and lift up the standard to the people.” ¶ Young has: “The reference is ... to the Zion of God, and the picture is that of Zion’s exaltation at the great influx of people.” Young says that the return from the Babylonian exile is but a type. Shalom Paul notes: “The urgency of the return to Zion is emphasized in a series of seven imperatives.” These would be: (1) Go through, (2) go through the gates; (3) prepare ye the way of the people; (4) cast up, (5) cast up the highway; (6) gather out the stones; (7) lift up a standard for the people. Wordsworth writes: “Israel had been commanded to rise up from its captivity, and to go forth from the gates of Babylon, and to return to Zion. But now the Preachers of the Gospel are exhorted to go forth from the gates of Sion, and to cast up a highway, and gather out the stones (which might be stumbling-blocks to travellers on it), and to lift up a standard for the peoples ... and to deliver the dispersed of Israel among all nations from captivity, and to proclaim the glad tidings of the Gospel to the end of the earth.” Whitehouse similarly has: “According to Dillmann the gates of Babylon are meant, and the prophetic words are addressed to the exiles who were still living in Babylonia. The subsequent clauses then follow in natural order. A highway is cast up for the caravan of exiles who have passed out of Babylon to cross over to the homeland.” As LDS we would also think of the world leaving mystical Babylon and coming to the Zion of our God. Although he does not subscribe to the idea himself, Whitehouse says: “... reference is definitely made to the temple in Jerusalem. Accordingly most recent critics assume that the gates are those of the Jerusalem temple into which the returning exiles are to enter.” Kay suggests that they will “Pass on through the gates of Zion, which is the city spoken of throughout this chapter.” Skinner, leaning on Duhm, says: “The gates must then be those of Jerusalem or of the Temple.” ¶ Here there is certainly an allusion to Zion, and to the New Jerusalem (as well as Jerusalem in the Holy Land) and the temples therein, wherein we found out that the “gates shall be open continually” (ISAIAH 60:11b) to receive Israel which has been scattered through the nations into her temples or Mount Zion (ISAIAH 18:7) where they can take out their endowments and be presented as a gift to the Lord. ¶ Interestingly, Keith agrees with some of the early apostles and Brethren regarding the meaning of highway: “The description is inapplicable to other forms of road, but most descriptive of this, the railway

²⁹ Elder Orson Pratt, “This is a Gathering Dispensation,” Fifteenth Ward Meeting-house, Salt Lake City, 26 March 1876. JD 18:183–185. Also see JD 17:320, “Second Coming of Christ,” as well as JD 14:69, “The Restoration of the Jews.” Also see JD 15:59–60, also entitled “Second Coming of Christ.”

exemplifying the apparent paradox of a highway without stones.” Elder Orson Pratt, in speaking of the latter-days said: “But says one, ‘what does the Prophet mean when he says, ‘go through the gates?’ I think if I had been Isaiah, and had had the vision of my mind opened to see the railroad and the great trains of cars without any apparent animal life attached to them, going with speed swiftly, if I had seen them dart into the mountain and, after watching a few minutes, had seen them come out on the other side, and then wished to describe what I had seen in words, I do not think I could have found any more applicable than those used by the ancient Prophet ...”³⁰ ¶ Cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones. To gather out the stones, according to Rashi in Rabbi Rosenberg, has to do with removing “evil inclinations.” Cowles asks and answers: “On this verse the first and most vital question exegetically is, Who are the people whose way is to be prepared, and for whom a standard is to be lifted up on high? There can be but one answer; The Gentile nations.” And that is because Israel is scattered throughout the Gentile nations. ¶ President John Taylor spoke of the great gathering, “Now, then, all of these dispensations had to be restored. Then comes Moses. Why? Because he held the keys of the gathering dispensation. And he conferred upon Joseph Smith the power to gather Israel from the four quarters of the earth, and also the ten tribes. But the latter have not come yet; but people are hunting them up, and they will be found by and by; when the time comes, and the mountains will flow down at their presence, and a highway will be cast up, and they will come to a knowledge of the people. But they could not come without the restoration of the keys I have referred to.”³¹ Elder Wilford Woodruff taught: “The principle of gathering has been preached for the past thirty-seven years. Before this principle was preached by the Elders, a great many of the people had received the spirit of it; and the consequence was, that no sooner had it been taught by the Presidency of the Church, than the people everywhere were ready to receive it. It had been revealed to them by the Holy Ghost, whose office it is to reveal that which is past, present, and that which is to come, and no surer, stronger testimony can be given to anyone than it affords. We have gathered here for the express purpose of establishing Zion, which, according to the Scriptures, must be before the Gospel can be sent to the Jews. Passage after passage might be found in the Bible, referring to our coming here; the casting up of the highway on which the ransomed of the Lord might travel; the building of our city in a low place, which was to be called Sought out, a city not forsaken; and how the Lord would cause springs of water to spring up, and the desert to blossom like the rose, etc., all of which have had their fulfillment.”³² Elder Orson Pratt taught: “Now I will quote a parallel prophecy, delivered to Joseph Smith, one of the greatest Prophets who has lived on the earth in any generation, save it be our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Some forty-three years ago, in speaking of the lost ten tribes of Israel, the Lord says— ‘They who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord; and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves; and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence. And an highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep. Their enemies shall become a prey unto them, And in the barren deserts there shall come forth pools of living water; and the parched ground shall no longer be a thirsty land. And they shall bring forth their rich treasures unto the children of Ephraim, my servants. And the boundaries of the everlasting hills shall tremble at their presence.’ To show that they come with power, they come on a highway cast up for them; the ice feels the power of God and flows down, making room for them; and the barren deserts of the north, wherever they may go and need water, will yield forth pools of living water to quench their thirst. As they come to sing in the height of Zion, the everlasting hills, this great Rocky Mountain range, extending from the arctic regions south to the central portions of America, will tremble beneath the power of God at the approach of that people.”³³ Elder Wilford Woodruff spoke about a time when this prophecy had been fulfilled to some extent: “Now when strangers come up to Zion on this great highway, cast up in fulfillment of the revelations of God, what do they see? They see no longer a desert, but a belt, for six hundred miles, of cities, towns, villages, orchards, fields and crops. Who has done this? The Lord God of Israel has inspired his Saints to do it. President Young has been led, guided, counseled and moved upon by the Holy Ghost and by the revelations of Jesus Christ, and that which strangers now behold in this Tabernacle, and throughout this Territory is in fulfillment of that volume of revelation which you can read in the prophecies of Isaiah and others of the Prophets and Patriarchs.”³⁴

¶ Lift up a standard [🚩] for the people. Several translate as an ensign, such as AMP, ASV, JPS, LEB,

³⁰ Elder Orson Pratt, “The rise of Zion in the last days,” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 15 June 1873. JD 16:85–86.

³¹ President John Taylor, “The Great Principles of Truth.” Ogden Tabernacle, 21 March 1880. JD 21:253a.

³² Elder Wilford Woodruff, “It Must Be Preached in All the World Before the Savior Comes.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 13 August 1876. 18:221a.

³³ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Ten Tribes Come to Zion From the North Countries.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 11 April 1875. JD 18:24.

³⁴ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “The Gospel of Christ.” Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 7 October 1874. JD 17:192a.

RV and YLT and it is the same word [בָּנָי] used for ensign in the AV in such verses as in ISAIAH 5:26; 11:10, 12; and 18:3. ¶ President John Taylor taught: “We certainly have a work to perform on the earth, and God our Father has selected us for that purpose. He raised up Joseph Smith and other men, and conferred the holy Priesthood upon them and today they are found organized as Elders, High Priests, Seventies, the Twelve, etc., by whom the Lord expects to lift up a standard (ISAIAH 62:10) to the nations, and an ensign to the people (ISAIAH 5:26; 11:12). And notwithstanding the calculations and plans of the world, we are told that when this standard is lifted up, the Gentiles shall seek unto it, ‘and his rest shall be glorious.’”³⁵

11 Behold, the LORD hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward [is] with him, and his work[✓] before him.

✓ or, recompence

Behold, the LORD hath proclaimed unto the end of the world. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For lo! the Lord hath published this to the end of the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Behold the Lord hath made it to be heard in the ends of the earth.” ¶ In Deuteronomy 30:4 (Rain in Due Season) we have: “If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee.” Also see Revelation 14:6; and Ezekiel 37:21 regarding the Book of Mormon. The Savior said: “AND verily I say unto you, I give unto you a sign, that ye may know the time when these things shall be about to take place—that I shall gather in, from their long dispersion, my people, O house of Israel, and shall establish again among them my Zion ... And when these things come to pass [that the Book of Mormon is brought forth from the Gentile nations to the people of Israel, especially the Lamanites] that thy seed shall begin to know these things—it shall be a sign unto them, that they may know that the work of the Father hath already commenced unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made unto the people who are of the house of Israel” (3 Nephi 21:1, 7). This whole chapter in 3 Nephi is closely associated with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon (e.g., compare 3 Nephi 21:17–18 and Ezekiel 37:23—the elimination of idolatry associated with the coming forth of the Bible and the Book of Mormon). ¶ Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh. The Targum (Ⲛ) has,

“Say ye to the congregation of Zion, Behold, thy redeemer shall be revealed.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Say to the daughter of Zion, Behold the Saviour is come for thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Tell the daughter of Zion: Behold thy Saviour cometh.” ¶ Birks suggests a connection with Revelation 22:12 (see also next clause): “And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.” Henderson has: “The ‘daughter of Zion’ means here the rightful inhabitants of Jerusalem, i.e. the Jews scattered over the face of the earth.” A similar application to Zion and the New Jerusalem can also be made. ¶ Behold, his reward [is] with him, and his work before him. The Targum (Ⲛ) has, “Behold, the reward for them that do His word is with him: and all their works are manifest before Him.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Having his own reward and his work before him.” ¶ Gill observes, “The word [בָּהִי] behold is three times used in this verse, to raise attention to what is said, and as pointing out something wonderful, and to express the certainty of it.” ¶ Alexander points out that this clause has been properly tied to ISAIAH 40:10 by Rosenmüller, Gesenius, and Maurer: “Behold, the Lord GOD will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him.” The greatest reward, we said at that place, is exaltation and eternal life such that God will walk among us and declare that He is our God and we are His people.

12 And they shall call them, The holy people, The redeemed of the LORD: and thou shalt be called, Sought out, A city not forsaken.

The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And he will call this a holy people, redeemed by the Lord; and thou shalt be called the city sought and not forsaken.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And they shall call them, The holy people, the redeemed of the Lord. But thou shalt be called: A city sought after, and not forsaken.” ¶ Birks contrasts this new condition with that earlier one: “And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city” (ISAIAH 1:8). Henderson has: “The Jews shall now be a holy people, redeemed from all iniquity, and thronging their ancient capital for religious purposes.” Wordsworth does well in pointing us back to ISAIAH 49:14–16: “But Zion said, The LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me.” Keith well says:

³⁵ President John Taylor, “Zion Will Triumph.” Grantsville, 29 October 1882. JD 23:333b.

“Sought out’ will really be ... a nation, ten of whose tribes are still undiscovered; and the remaining two, who are ‘as a body nowhere, as a people everywhere,’³⁶ have to be sought out of every land.” Alexander emphasizes the idea of using the names of women to tell a story, as was done in ISAIAH 62:4: “And thou shalt be called Derushah דְּרוּשָׁה (sought for), Ir-lo-neezebah עִיר לֹא נֶעְזְבָה (City not forsaken).” Cheyne contrasts this with Jeremiah: “For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the LORD; because they called thee an Outcast, saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after” (Jeremiah 30:17). ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained: “Very well, the Lord will, in his own due time, enable you to distinguish between the righteous and the wicked. ‘Behold, they shall call them, The holy people, The redeemed of the Lord: and behold, they shall be called, Sought out, A city not forsaken.’ How different from old Jerusalem! Was that sought out? No; Jerusalem was built up a long time before Israel came out of Egypt, and was there ready for them to take possession of when they entered the Holy Land. Was Jerusalem ever forsaken?³⁷ Yes, forsaken for many generations. But not so with Zion, that should get up into the mountains; they should seek out a location, so much so that the city should be called ‘Sought out;’ and instead of being forsaken, as many people suppose the ‘Mormons’ will be, the Lord God will protect them. According to the words of Daniel, the kingdom shall not be destroyed, neither shall it be given to another people, and it shall stand forever.”³⁸ Elder Orson Pratt expressed these feelings of thankfulness: “I feel thankful as one of the Twelve for the privilege of coming out as one of the pioneers to this glorious valley where we can build up a city to the Lord. For many years I have not read that good old book, but I remember the predictions in it and some that are now very nearly fulfilled by us. Isaiah says, speaking of the City of Zion, it shall be ‘Sought out, a city not forsaken,’ etc. Many in this congregation know what is meant by the garments of salvation and the robe of righteousness. Righteousness and praise shall spring forth before all the nations of the earth and they will not hold their peace. There are many of you that feel you can cry day and night to the people in the cause of righteousness until it shall triumph. ‘For as a young man marrieth a virgin,’ etc.,—this belongs and refers to us. ‘I will no longer give thy corn to be meat for thine enemy.’ This has not been fulfilled heretofore but will be. The corn that we toil to raise from the earth, it shall not be given to our enemies, they that gather it shall eat it, and they shall drink in the courts of His holiness. This wine is also to be drunk in the courts of the Lord’s house. We have gathered out the stones out of the road and thousands will yet fulfill this prophecy. It has reference to the latter times that were to dawn upon the world in the last dispensation. ‘Thou shalt be called, Sought out, A city not forsaken.’ If ever there was a place sought out it is this, we have inquired diligently and have found it. This cannot refer to Jerusalem, but to this very place, point and spot that the pioneers have found where a city shall be built unto the Lord, where righteousness will reign and iniquity not be allowed. Isaiah and Joel both spake very plainly on this subject. ‘It shall come to pass in the last days that the house of the Lord shall be established,’ etc. In what part of the earth could it be established more than in this place where this congregation is gathered. In the midst of the spires of the mountains we have found a place large enough to gather a few thousand of the Saints. You may travel Europe, Asia, Africa and America but you cannot find a place much higher where any people can raise crops and sustain themselves. The house of the Lord will be established on the tops of the mountains when we shall have once reared here. The experience of the Saints proves that there was no house of the Lord, and we can say: travel over this earth but you cannot find the house of the Lord. The Lord must give the pattern of the building and order it, and give directions to His servants. The Lord wants His house built precisely to the pattern that He gives and He is bound to speak to and bless and make them His own children in that house and I verily believe I shall see it and see thousands come flocking to the house to learn the way of salvation. And I want to see the time that I shall see thousands raising their voices on this consecrated land. There are many testimonies in the prophets all bearing upon this subject. Joseph, in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants speaks of this very subject and it appears there will be some sinners in Zion who will be afraid and a devouring fire will rest upon every dwelling place in Zion. ‘He that walketh righteously’ etc., ‘He shall dwell on high, bread shall be given him, his water shall be sure.’ Isaiah was on the eastern continent when he spoke this and was speaking of a very distant place ...

³⁶ Seems to be quoting Edward Bickersteth, The Restoration of the Jews. “What has been the condition, and what is the present state of the Jews? Where are they? As a body, nowhere; as people, everywhere. The principal abode of the ten tribes, who have probably been less dispersed than the two, is not, even to this day indisputably ascertained. They are yet hidden from our research. No people on earth are more scattered, dispersed, and hitherto rejected, than the two remaining tribes ... Their future history is to be the very contrast of their present state. They are all to be sought out, gathered together, and restored to their own land. God himself will take this work especially under his own care.” (1841, pp. 85–86)

³⁷ Gladly, the honor that shall come upon the New Jerusalem does not take away from the honor that shall come to the Jerusalem in the Holy Land when the Lord reigns upon the earth during the Millennium from both of His main capitals.

³⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, “Restoration of the Gospel.” Fifteenth Ward Meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, 26 March 1876. JD 18:184b. Also see JD 17:320b, “Second Coming of Christ.” Also see JD 15:60, also entitled, “Second Coming of Christ.”

The wilderness shall become as a fruitful field and a fruitful field as a forest. We know the time Will come that the great Jehovah will cause springs of water to gush out of the desert lands and we shall see the lands survive that the gentiles have defiled. Isaiah speaks of the heritage of Jacob being in a high place. This is about four thousand feet above the level of the sea and the high mountains will still catch the hail and we shall be in a low place. We will not feel discouraged but will feel full of vigor and circumscribe all things to the very heavens, for this is what we desire above all things. Let us endeavor to covenant in our hearts, that we will serve the Lord; that we will keep His commandments and obey His counsel. I wish that all of us should be faithful and as President Young said the other evening, every man is expected to do his duty. The Lord will be with us still; He will shield, guard and defend us by day and be our refuge by night, and our salvation. I feel to say in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, you shall be blest if you keep the commandments of God. Amen.”³⁹

FIRST POSTED: 12 January 2017

³⁹ William Clayton's Journal, 1846–1847. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Deseret News, 1921, pp. 331–334.

Isaiah 63

The Lord redeems His people through His atoning sacrifice and defends Jerusalem in the end of days. His garments are stained with blood. The Savior overcame death through His atoning sacrifice and subsequent resurrection. Even if the first six verses are eschatologically oriented, the allusions to the atonement are clear. The Lord's vengeance is never like that of men. Man is glad to see others who have injured him suffer. This is not the case with the Lord. He pleads with us to repent lest we also have to suffer as He did. We need to learn empathy towards others as our Redeemer has it for us. The Savior is our exemplar.

*Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored,
He has loosed the fateful lightening of His terrible swift sword His truth is marching on.*
— Battle Hymn of the Republic

vv. 1–6. Elder John Taylor shared: “[Isaiah] spoke of [the Son of God] as coming in power, glory and dominion, and as having his wrath and indignation kindled against the nations of the earth. ‘Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat¹ I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment. For the day of vengeance is in my heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.’ Jesus accomplished what he was sent to do, and, feeling satisfied of this, when he was about to leave the earth he said he had finished the work his Father gave him to do. But there was another work, another event that was to transpire in the latter days, when he should not be led as a lamb to the slaughter or be like a sheep before the shearers; when he would not act in that state of humiliation and quiescence, but when he will go forth as a man of war and tread down the people in his anger and trample them in his fury, when blood should be on his garments and the day of vengeance in his heart, when he would rule the nations with an iron rod and break them to pieces like a potter's vessel.”² In this same talk Elder John Taylor added: “It might look curious to some for God to talk of treading the people in his anger; but as we have to do with eternity as well as with time, and as it is necessary the earth should be purged and righteousness should take the place of corruption, which will some time have an end here, we can then conclude that the Judge of all the earth will do right. We should seek to magnify our calling and honor our God, being co-workers with God in the things he has engaged to do. The Lord has begun to vex the nations, beginning with our own nation; he is vexing it and will vex other nations, and his judgments will go forth and all the wicked nations of the world will feel the avenging hand of God, and he will continue to overthrow nation after nation until He whose right it is will take the government into his own hand, and he will continue to increase and progress until every creature which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them shall be heard to say, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, and might, and majesty, and dominion be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever. Shall we be found among that number who will thus magnify the name of God, crying, ‘Hallelujah, the Lord God omnipotent reigneth?’”³ ¶ Abarbanel, in Rabbis Slotki-Rosenberg, explains that “The Hero is none other than the God of Israel.” Govett argues: “The whole scene so exactly corresponds with Revelation 19 ... The hero of ISAIAH 63 comes ‘glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength.’ In the Apocalypse, ‘I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse, and he that sat on him was called Faithful and True, and righteousness (‘I that speak in righteousness,’ Isaiah) he doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns.’ In Isaiah he is called ‘the Speaker, or Word of Righteousness;’ in the Apocalypse, ‘his name is called the Word of God.’ Do the wondering chorus in Isaiah ask him, ‘wherefore he is red in his apparel?’ St. John may reply, that ‘he was clothed in a vesture dipped in blood.’ Does Isaiah’s Speaker tell us, ‘I have trodden the wine-press alone?’ St. John declares, ‘He treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.’ If Isaiah adds that ‘he will tread down the nations in anger, and trample them in his fury,’ St. John, that ‘out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron,’ and break them in pieces like a potter’s vessel,’ as the second Psalm witnesses. Then Isaiah’s Speaker yet farther announces, ‘their blood shall be sprinkled on my garments,’ how exactly does it accord with St. John’s description noticed above! To the same period does the latter part of Revelation 14 refer, and it makes use of the same figure, setting in a terrific point of view the desolation and destruction of man that shall then take place. ‘And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle (‘one like unto the Son of Man, having on his head a golden crown,’ Revelation 14:14), saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe. And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God. And the wine-press was trodden without the city⁴ (Jerusalem, as has been shown above), and blood came out of the wine-press, even unto the horses’ bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.’ The same scene of vengeance does the ‘song of Moses’ foretell. ‘If I whet my glittering sword, and mine hand take hold on judgment; I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me. I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh, (and that) with the blood of the slain and of the captives, from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy. Rejoice, O ye nations, (with) his people⁵: for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people’ (Deuteronomy 32:41-43).” Wordsworth similarly has: “The subject of this prophecy may be described in the words of the Apocalypse, at the opening of the first seal: ‘I saw, and behold a white horse: and He that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto Him: and He went forth conquering, and to conquer’ (Revelation 6:2) ... In Revelation 19:11, the same Warrior reappears on the white horse of victory; and ‘He that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns... . And He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and His Name is called The Word of God ... and He treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And He hath on His vesture and on His thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS’ (Revelation 19:11–16). Cp. Revelation 14:19, ‘The great winepress of the wrath of God.’” Wordsworth also notes: “That this is a description of Christ coming to His People as a Conqueror from His own Passion and Resurrection, was the uniform judgment of the ancient Expositors (as Tertullian, c. Marcion, iv. 40; Origen, Tract 9, in Joann. ix. ; S. Cyprian, S. Augustine, S. Jerome, and S. Cyril here.” ¶ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland applied some of these same scriptures in ISAIAH 63 to the atoning sacrifice of our Savior: “I speak of the loneliest journey ever made and the unending blessings it brought to all in the human family. I speak of the Savior’s solitary task of shouldering alone the burden of our salvation. Rightly He would say: ‘I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me. ... I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold [me].’”⁶

¹ Cowles explains: “Winefat is the old Saxon for ‘vat’; here, the tub or trough in which grapes were trodden.”

² Elder John Taylor, “The Second Coming of Jesus.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 22 February 1863. JD 10:115b.

³ Elder John Taylor, “The Second Coming of Jesus.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 22 February 1863. JD 10:120.

⁴ Jay A. Parry and Donald W. Parry, in Understanding the Book of Revelation (p. 194), leaning on Mounce (Book of Revelation, p. 281), do well in noting that Gethsemane and Golgotha—both being the scene of the atonement—were outside the city walls. So also the Valley of Jehoshaphat, the center of the latter-day events surrounding the Second coming of Christ.

⁵ That is, let all the nations join His people in rejoicing. Govett commends the LXX (ⲉ) in this Deuteronomic passage. In it, angels join in the worship of God. Brenton LXX (ⲉ) has: “Rejoice, ye heavens, with him, and let all the angels of God worship him; rejoice ye Gentiles [nations, Thompson LXX (ⲉ)], with his people, and let all the sons of God strengthen themselves in him; for he will avenge the blood of his sons, and he will render vengeance, and recompense justice to his enemies, and will reward them that hate him; and the Lord shall purge the land of his people.”

1 ¶ WHO [is] this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this [that is] glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.

✓ decked

WHO [is] this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? The Targum (ⲡ) has, “Who hath spoken these things? He who shall bring the blow upon Persia (the Royal Polyglot reads, ‘Edom’), the might vengeance upon Bozrah.” The LXX (ⲉ) reads, “Who is this who is coming from Edom? What redness of mantles from Bosor!” Instead of dyed, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has crimson. ¶ In the Doctrine and Covenants we read: “And it shall be said: Who is this that cometh down from God in heaven with dyed garments; yea, from the regions which are not known, clothed in his glorious apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength? And he shall say: I am he who spake in righteousness, mighty to save” (D&C 133:46–47). Without the atonement, no other type of saving would be of much import. In the Apocalypse we read: “And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God” (Revelation 19:15). ¶ Birks explains: “Edom [אֶדוֹם], the red [אֶדוֹם], is the people and land of him who sold his birthright, and in heart shed his brother’s blood.” Gesenius has also: “אֶדוֹם: the descendants of Edom, i.e. the nation of the Edomites or Idumæans; and also the country [Idumæa]. The nation is called more fully [Sons of Edom] בְּנֵי אֶדוֹם.” Idumea⁷ also stand for the world: “And also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world” (D&C 1:36). Kimhi, in Rabbis Slotki-Rosenberg, explains that the Edomites are the descendants of Esau and that Edom represents the “lands of tyranny and oppression” towards Israel. So also Stier in Keith: “This Edom is plainly a typical, prophetic, mystic name for the hostile, haughty, heathen world in general, to be judged, and certainly the same with Babel in the horizon of the prophet. From the first type until now it is used with various allusions (the red, the earthly, Adam [אָדָם]⁸), the natural humanity, in contrast with Israel, the people of God. The chief point of resemblance is the state of mind, profane, contemptuous, despising salvation.” Regarding Bozrah, or rather Botzra, we read: “בֹּצְרָה ‘sheepfold’; [Βοσόρρα, Bosorrha], [Βοσόρ, Bosor]”: The capital of Edom, a city of great antiquity (Genesis 36:33; 1 Chronicles 1:44; ISAIAH 34:6; 63:1; Jeremiah 49:13; Amos 1:12). It may be identical with Buzeirah, which lies about 7 miles Southwest of Tufileh, on the main road to Petra” (ISBE). ¶ Jerusalem is to Judah (or even Israel) as Bozrah is to Edom and in Scripture capitals are often used as synonyms for the nation. Wordsworth explains: “Christ at His Passion and Resurrection came from Edom and Bozrah because He then overthrew His bloodthirsty, malignant, and treacherous enemies ... and He came from Bozrah because He spoiled the strong man, Satan, in his fortress (Matthew 12:29; Luke 11:21, 22), and made that Bozrah to be a winepress of judgment. ‘Now is the judgment of this world’ (He said): ‘now shall the prince of this world be cast out’—now he is judged (see John 12:31; 16:11). He then bruised his head (Genesis 3:15), and led captivity captive (Psalm 68:18; Ephesians 4: 8), and spoiled principalities and powers, triumphing over them by His Cross (Colossians 2:15); and by His death He destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and delivered them who, through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage (Hebrews 2:14, 15). ¶ Rawlinson testifies: “Who is it? The reply is immediate—I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save; i.e. I, whose every word is ‘holy, just, and true,’ who alone am able to ‘save to the uttermost all that come to me’ (Hebrews 7:25). The answer unmistakably indicates that the figure which has appeared to the prophet is that of Jehovah.” Kay has: “We are now warned that the redemption of God’s people involved judgment on their foes; who are described under the symbolic names of ‘Edom’ and ‘Bozrah.’” Kay continues: “Who is this that cometh] Cp. Song of Solomon 3:6. Can it be He for whom Zion was so anxiously looking out (ISAIAH 62:11; cp. ISAIAH 59:20)? It must; for in ISAIAH 63:4 He says, ‘My redeemed’; cp. ISAIAH 62:12. — With dyed [תָּמִיךְ] garments from Bezrah] the ‘place of vintage,’ ISAIAH 34:6.” Oswalt says: “As Cheyne notes, the coins of Bozrah during the Roman period had the image of a wine press stamped on them.” We also read: “The sword of the LORD is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea” (ISAIAH 34:6). ¶ In our family vineyard we used a small motor to replace the feet stomping during the vendimia or vintage. Even so, the workers who pushed the grapes onto the hole where the motor functioned got splashed completely with the grape juice—red, or rather purple vs. white depending on the grape varieties involved in the wine production. Vino tinto, or red wine in Spanish, comes from the word tinto or dyed. ¶ There is an allusion to purple kingly robes, also. Gesenius for תָּמִיךְ has: “to be of a bright (i.e. a splendid) colour, such as dazzles the eyes; especially used of a bright red. Part. pass. תָּמִיךְ splendid, of the scarlet mantle of a ruler, ISAIAH 63:1.” There is an allusion, we said, to a king wearing his majestic robes. But this is no ordinary King, but rather the Redeemer of mankind: “And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS” (Revelation 19:15–16, emphasis added). ¶ Kay continues: “Glorious in his apparel] (cp. Psalm 104:1): for He is clad in robes of Salvation and Righteousness, ISAIAH 61:10.” A number of exegetes suggest that the Savior was wearing apparel of exquisite white or royal purple but that this was stained with blood. I would agree that the original apparel in this illustration was white—for the Savior’s garments are spotless white, a symbol of His purity and sinlessness. But may I submit that it was the blood of the atonement that made His apparel glorious?⁹ There is an irony here for kings wear royal purple made with the most expensive cloth—but our Savior and Redeemer was stained with His blood caused by His suffering. The Savior pleads with us: “Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; Learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool” (ISAIAH 1:16–18). As we turn our lives to Christ to become His disciples, our own garments may become glorious: “These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb” (Revelation 7:14). It is not His glorious garments that were soiled with the blood of the atonement, but rather, his robes were made glorious through the blood of the atonement. ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell said, “When He comes again, unlike His coming to the signifying meekness of the manger, He will come in overwhelming majesty and power. In at least one appearance He will come in red apparel to remind us that He shed His blood for us (see D&C 133:48; ISAIAH 63:1). Among the astounding accompanying events, stars will fall from the heavens, as Christ will declare, ‘I have trodden the winepress alone ... and none were with me’ (D&C 133:50). What will we and those who witness these marvelous events speak of, then and later? Not the solar display with falling stars! Instead, we will speak of Jesus’ ‘loving-kindness.’ For how long will we so exclaim? ‘Forever and ever’ (D&C 133:52). The more we come to know of Jesus and the Atonement, the more we shall praise and adore Him ‘forever and ever.’ Meanwhile, however, He has asked us to become more like Him in attributes and qualities. We cannot be ‘valiant in the testimony of Jesus’ (D&C 76:79) unless we really strive to become more like Him.”¹⁰ ¶ This [that is] glorious in his apparel, travelling [צֶהָדָה] in the greatness of his strength? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “To execute vengeance of judgment of His people, as He hath sworn unto them by His Word.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “He so magnificent in apparel? He marcheth with majesty!” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “This beautiful one in his robe, walking in the greatness of his strength.” ¶ Kay has: “Travelling] Or, ‘bending,’ as one who stoops forward in energetic marching (see on ISAIAH 51:14¹¹).” Wade has: “The latter, if retained, must mean bending to and fro, i.e. swaggering.” Perhaps this is similar to the expression I set my face like a flint (ISAIAH 50:7), full of unstoppable determination. TDOT gives as an acceptance of צֶהָדָה to “solemnly stride.” ¶ Can we not also see an allusion to the bending over in pain and agony of the atonement contrasted to the present glory? Wordsworth (emphasis added) similarly has: “Glorious in his apparel] Beautiful and splendid in His raiment. This was fulfilled in Christ’s Passion and Resurrection... Travelling] The word thus rendered occurs in this form only in ISAIAH 51:14, and Jeremiah 2:20; 48:12, and appears to mean bending down (Gesenius 714; Fuerst, 1200); and it seems to refer to Christ’s act in stooping so low as He did in His Passion, in order to rise so high as He did in His Resurrection and Ascension. See Phil. ii. 6—11; and cp. Stier, p. 745.” ¶ I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “He hath said, Behold, I shall reveal myself as I have spoken in righteousness, great is my power to save.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “I proclaim righteousness and the judgment of salvation.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “I, that speak justice, and am a defender to save.” Elder Anthony D. Perkins powerfully testified: “I bear witness of Jesus Christ, who is ‘mighty to save’ us from our inadequacies, imperfections, and sins.”¹² ¶ Jennings compares this verse with much of what goes on in Psalms 22–24 and goes on to say: “‘Who is this King of Glory?’ to which this answer comes: ‘The Lord, strong and mighty; the Lord mighty in battle.’ This awakens a universal shout: ‘Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in.’ But the question is repeated, as if the announcement were too stupendous to be taken in quickly: ‘Who [Ⲯ] is this King of Glory?’ to which we hear the final word: ‘The Lord of Hosts, He is the King of Glory.’” Here the Lord says that He is who, that He is the One who is mighty to save. Indeed, He is the Lord of Hosts, He is the King of Glory.

⁶ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, “None Were with Him,” April 2009 General Conference.

⁷ See also Psalm 137:7; Ezekiel 25:11–14; 35: 36:5, Obadiah 1:1–16.

⁸ Adam, in Hebrew, means man.

2 Wherefore [art thou] red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat?

⁹ Donald W. Parry and Jay A. Parry well suggest that the blood on the garments includes (1) that which the Savior poured out for us in His pain; (2) the blood of the sins of the repentant; and (3) the blood of the sins of the rebellious (Understanding the Book of Revelation).

¹⁰ Maxwell, Neal A. That Ye May Believe. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1992, pp. 210–211.

¹¹ In LITV we have: “Bowed down [צֶהָדָה], he hurries to be freed, that he not die in the pit, nor that he lack his bread.”

¹² Elder Anthony D. Perkins, “The Great and Wonderful Love.” October 2006 General Conference.

Wherefore [art thou] red in thine apparel. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Wherefore are the mountains red from the blood of the slain?” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Why are thy garments red and thy clothing, as from a trodden winevat?” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Why then is thy apparel red.” ¶ In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “And the Lord shall be red in his apparel, and his garments like him that treadeth in the wine-vat. And so great shall be the glory of his presence that the sun shall hide his face in shame, and the moon shall withhold its light, and the stars shall be hurled from their places” (D&C 133:48–49). Faussett suggests: “The prophet asks why His garments are ‘dyed’ and ‘red.’” Nägelsbach has: “The Prophet further inquiries: Why is it red in thine apparel?” The לִי intimates that the redness is not something inherent in the raiment, but something that has come to it from without.” So also Delitzsch who says: “The seer asks, ‘Why is there red (אָדום) to thine apparel?’ The Lamed (ל), which might be omitted (wherefore is thy garment red?), implies that the red was not its original colour, but something added.” ¶ And thy garments like him that treadeth in the winevat? The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Yea, the valleys shall flow as the wine from the winepress.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I am full of a country trodden down; and of the nations there is not a man with me.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And thy garments like theirs that tread in the winepress?” ¶ In Judah’s patriarchal blessing we find in part: “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be. Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass’s colt unto the choice vine; he washed his garments in wine [בַּיַּיִן], and his clothes in the blood of grapes [וּבְדָם עֲנָבִים]” (Genesis 49:10–11, see also Mark 11:2–7, John 12:15). Wordsworth, who quotes some of these same scriptures, says about the atonement: “Christ’s Passion was the cause of His victory.”

3 I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people [there was] none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

I have trodden the winepress alone. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Behold, as the grapes (בָּעֵיט) is not only ‘the grape,’ but any other fruit that is pressed in a press) are trodden in the vat, thus He shall increase the slaughter in the camps of the nations.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I have trodden them down in my wrath, and crumbled them like dust and shed their blood on the earth.” ¶ In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “And his voice shall be heard: I have trodden the wine-press alone, and have brought judgment upon all people; and none were with me; And I have trampled them in my fury, and I did tread upon them in mine anger, and their blood have I sprinkled upon my garments, and stained all my raiment.” (D&C 133:50–51a). ¶ Rawlinson observes: “The whole is a prophecy of the future; but the dramatic form of the narrative requires that the verbs should be in the past.” Henderson says: “פָּרַח occurs only here and Haggaï 2:16. It comes from פָּרַח, to break, break in pieces. Hence it signifies the place where the grapes are broken by treading, נִצַּח, an unusual term, employed here and ISAIAH 63:6, to denote blood. It properly signifies the juice or liquor [נִצְחָם, but here, the juice of grapes put for sprinkled blood—GB] which is spirted from the grape.” Wordsworth says of the atonement: “I have trodden the winepress alone] Let no one else, therefore, claim a share in the work of salvation; and let no one assign to any creature a part in that glorious victory, which is due to Christ, and to Christ alone ... Christ was clothed with scarlet in mockery at His Passion; He was then made to be red in His own blood.” ¶ Symbolic of the Lord’s redemption for us we have: “And there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he [the High Priest] goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel” (Leviticus 16:17). In the New Testament we read: “But into the second [veil, or Holy of Holies] went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people” (Hebrews 9:7). ¶ Henry explains: “He [Christ] and he only, is *par negotio—fit*¹³ for the work and worthy of the honour: he is appointed by the Father to do it, who sanctified him, and sent him into the world for this purpose, that God might in him reconcile the world to himself. He undertook it, and for our sakes sanctified himself, and set himself apart for it, John 17:19. The high priest’s frequently bathing himself on this day, and performing the service of it in fine linen clean and white, signified the holiness of the Lord Jesus, his perfect freedom from all sin, and his being beautified and adorned with all grace. No man was to be with the high priest when he made atonement (Leviticus 16:17); for our Lord Jesus was to tread the wine-press alone, and of the people there must be none with him (ISAIAH 63:3); therefore, when he entered upon his sufferings, all his disciples forsook him and fled, for it any of them had been taken and put to death with him it would have looked as if they had assisted in making the atonement.” ¶ Christ had to bear the full weight of the atoning sacrifice. He had to experience the pain of the withdrawal of the Spirit and of the Presence of the Father. Christ suffered for all of our sins, our pain, our anguish and without a doubt—the most difficult of all—the withdrawal of His Father and of the Spirit. It was necessary for Him to experience this pain, as well as all other pains. Elder Jeffrey R. Holland worshipfully said: “I speak of the loneliest journey ever made and the unending blessings it brought to all in the human family. I speak of the Savior’s solitary task of shouldering alone the burden of our salvation. Rightly He would say: ‘I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me ... I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold [me]’... Now I speak very carefully, even reverently, of what may have been the most difficult moment in all of this solitary journey to Atonement. I speak of those final moments for which Jesus must have been prepared intellectually and physically but which He may not have fully anticipated emotionally and spiritually—that concluding descent into the paralyzing despair of divine withdrawal when He cries in ultimate loneliness, ‘My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?’ The loss of mortal support He had anticipated, but apparently He had not comprehended this. Had He not said to His disciples, ‘Behold, the hour ... is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me’ and ‘The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him’? With all the conviction of my soul I testify that He did please His Father perfectly and that a perfect Father did not forsake His Son in that hour. Indeed, it is my personal belief that in all of Christ’s mortal ministry the Father may never have been closer to His Son than in these agonizing final moments of suffering. Nevertheless, that the supreme sacrifice of His Son might be as complete as it was voluntary and solitary, the Father briefly withdrew from Jesus the comfort of His Spirit, the support of His personal presence. It was required, indeed it was central to the significance of the Atonement, that this perfect Son who had never spoken ill nor done wrong nor touched an unclean thing had to know how the rest of humankind—us, all of us—would feel when we did commit such sins. For His Atonement to be infinite and eternal, He had to feel what it was like to die not only physically but spiritually, to sense what it was like to have the divine Spirit withdraw, leaving one feeling totally, abjectly, hopelessly alone ... because Jesus walked such a long, lonely path utterly alone, we do not have to do so.”¹⁴ ¶ In the words of the Savior

¹³ Equal to the task.

Himself we read: “I command you to repent, and keep the commandments which you have received by the hand of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., in my name; And it is by my almighty power that you have received them; Therefore I command you to repent—repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth, and by my wrath, and by my anger, and your sufferings be sore—how sore you know not, how exquisite you know not, yea, how hard to bear you know not. For behold, I, God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent; But if they would not repent they must suffer even as I; Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit—and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink—Nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparations unto the children of men. Wherefore, I command you again to repent, lest I humble you with my almighty power; and that you confess your sins, lest you suffer these punishments of which I have spoken, of which in the smallest, yea, even in the least degree you have tasted at the time I withdrew my Spirit” (D&C 19:13–20, emphasis added). The Savior specifically mentions the withdrawal of His Spirit as one of the most painful experiences of the Atonement and pleads with us to avoid this future pain by turning to Him.¹⁵ ¶ Jennings, speaking of judgment, says: “Joel (Joel 3:12) tells us that that last judgment takes place in the ‘valley of Jehoshaphat’ (a name that itself means ‘The judgment of Jehovah’), which lay to the east of Jerusalem, separating the city from the Mount of Olives ... In accord with this Zechariah (Zechariah 14) tells us that His Feet shall stand at that day on the Mount of Olives, which is also on the eastern side of the valley of Jehoshaphat.” ¶ And of the people [there was] none with me: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall have no strength before me.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “And of the Gentiles there is not a man with me.” ¶ As we have pointed out, géntibus in the Vulgate (Ⲕ) can mean nations or Gentiles as in the Hebrew גִּיּוֹת, as well as people (Ⲕ). Here it should read nations, implying that no one was with Christ, not just that no Gentile was with Christ, in Gethsemane. In the Spanish translation (1855) of the Vulgate (Ⲕ) by Rmo. P. Phelipe Scio de S.

General Conference.

¹⁵ We further read: “Hearken and hear, O ye inhabitants of the earth. Listen, ye elders of my church together, and hear the voice of the Lord; for he calleth upon all men, and he commandeth all men everywhere to repent. For behold, the Lord God hath sent forth the angel crying through the midst of heaven, saying: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight, for the hour of his coming is nigh ... Wherefore, prepare ye for the coming of the Bridegroom; go ye, go ye out to meet him ... And he shall utter his voice out of Zion, and he shall speak from Jerusalem, and his voice shall be heard among all people” (D&C 133:16–17, 19, 21).

¹⁴ Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, “None Were with Him.” April 2009

Miguel, for instance, the translation is much better, “El lagar pisé yo solo, y de las naciones no hay hombre alguno conmigo” (emphasis added, “I tread on the winepress alone, and of the nations there is no man at all with me.” Not only do these words have reference to the expiatory sacrifice of our Savior in Gethsemane and the cross, but they also point to the time when the nations will surround Jerusalem—the Lord alone will defend His people Judah. The Savior prophesied: “And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh” (Luke 21:20). ¶ Of the war of Gog and Magog we also read: “Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog ... And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes ... And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, that my fury shall come up in my face. For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel ... and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground. And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord GOD: every man’s sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead against him¹⁶ with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself, and sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the LORD” (Ezekiel 38:14–23). Also see Zechariah 14:1–5. Alexander has: “... these words are added to convey the idea that all the nations were on the adverse side, none on that of the conqueror ... By all the nations we are of course to understand all but God’s people.” From all of these scriptures it is clear that it is the Lord Himself, even the Mighty One of Israel, who will alone defend Jerusalem. ¶ For I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Yea, I will slay them in my anger, and tread them down in my fury.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “I have trampled on them in my indignation, and have trodden them down in my wrath.” ¶ Rawlinson, regarding the end of days, has: “As ‘the peoples’ would not help God, but took the side of his enemies, they too were placed in the winepress, and crushed under his feet.” Keith has: “The same idea of awful destruction is expressed when it is said also in reference to the same period, ‘The wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out even to the horses’ bridles’ (Revelation 14:20).” Wordsworth has: “For I will tread them in mine anger] Rather, and I trod them (Septuagint, Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, Vitranga, Rosenmüller, Stier, Delitzsch). Christ’s victory began at His First Advent, and is to be consummated at the Second Advent ... the victory over all earthly powers, and over Satan and Death, is regarded by the Prophet as already accomplished. In like manner the Psalmist contemplates Calvary as the battle-field of Satan and the world against Christ. The sufferings of Golgotha lead to the triumphs of Armageddon (Revelation 16:16). ‘Why do the heathen so furiously rage together’ (he asks), ‘and why do the people’ (lit. the peoples) ‘imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth stand up, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against His Anointed.’ ‘Thou shalt bruise them with a rod of iron: and break them in pieces like a potter’s vessel’ (Psalm 2:1, 2, 9; Acts 4:25, 26).” ¶ And their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And I will break the strength of their mighty ones before me, and all their wise men will I consume (literally, ‘I will swallow up’).” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has apparel instead of raiment. ¶ Kay sees in the Hebrew אֶנְאִלְתִּי, stain, here in ISAIAH 63:3 and the word redeem, גָּאֻלְתִּי, in ISAIAH 63:4. The former also means to pollute or defile, besides staining (Gesenius). Certainly, we can say that the Savior took upon Himself and suffered our stains—which in contrast with His purity must have made it all the more painful. Wordsworth has: “Their blood shall he sprinkled—I will stain] Rather, as in the preceding clause, their blood has been sprinkled; or, their life-blood¹⁷ (Heb. נִצָּח, glory, vigour, life; see Psalm 7:5; Lamentations 3:18; that which they proudly gloried in); and I have stained.”

4 For the day of vengeance [is] in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For the day of vengeance is before me, and the year of the salvation of my people hath come.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “For the day of retribution came upon them and the year of redemption is at hand.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “The year of my redemption is come.” ¶ In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “For this was the day of vengeance which was in my heart.” (D&C 133:51b). Cowles has: “The phrases, ‘The day of vengeance’ and the ‘year of the redeemed,’ occur above, ISAIAH 61:4.”

¹⁶ Compare with D&C 88:89–90.

¹⁷ As we said above, grape juice put here as a representative of blood.

Rawlinson says: “The ‘day of vengeance’ ushers in the ‘year of redemption.’” Keith explains: “This ‘day of vengeance’ was announced before (ISAIAH 61:2). It was to follow the acceptable year, the long season of Divine grace, and usher in the full gift of beauty, joy, and praise, to the mourners in Zion.” We can think of at least two fulfillments. It would be after the restoration of the Gospel that the disasters would befall the earth in faster frequency as the Lord would begin to speak with the voice of earthquakes and other natural disasters. The second—which fits even better with the context of ISAIAH 63—seems to suggest the end of days giving way to the commencement of the Millennium—truly a time of jubilee. Furthermore, we can think of the Millennium as also corresponding to a season of jubilee followed by a final day of vengeance and the second war of Gog and Magog. ¶ Elder John Taylor warned: “When [Christ] comes again he comes to take vengeance on the ungodly and to bring deliverance unto his Saints; ‘For the day of vengeance,’ it is said, ‘is in my heart, and the year of my redeemed is come.’ It behooves us to be made well aware which class we belong to, that if we are not already among the redeemed we may immediately join that society ...”¹⁸ Regarding vengeance we also read from the words of the Savior Himself while He visited the Americas: “For it shall come to pass, saith the Father, that at that day whosoever will not repent and come unto my Beloved Son, them will I cut off from among my people, O house of Israel; And I will execute vengeance and fury upon them, even as upon the heathen, such as they have not heard” (3 Nephi 21:20–21). Thus we come to understand that vengeance is synonymous with being cut off from the presence of God. It is the very opposite of having the Lord walk in the midst of His people to be their God. Furthermore, in connection with the effects of the atonement, the Lord teaches: “And it shall come to pass, because of the wickedness of the world, that I will take vengeance upon the wicked, for they will not repent; for the cup of mine indignation is full; for behold, my blood shall not cleanse them if they hear me not” (D&C 29:17). The Savior explains, then, that His blood will not cleanse the rebellious. I hold it as a personal opinion, however, that every person who will inherit any degree of glory will have to lean on the atonement to do so. That such individuals will have to experience the exquisite pain that the Savior speaks about, I have no doubt, but even then, it will not be enough without the atoning sacrifice of our Lord and Redeemer, to inherit any of the degrees of glory without the atoning sacrifice. ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff taught: “We may rest assured that the Lord will reward those who seek to destroy the lives of his people and to overthrow his kingdom. Vengeance is in the hands of the Almighty. ‘I will fight your battles,’ saith the Lord. We do not seek any man’s hurt, however much of an enemy he may be to us, we leave him in the hands of God...”¹⁹ Then Elder Spencer W. Kimball taught: “Man must not seek vengeance nor retaliate against those who have damaged him. Bitterness injures the one who carries it more than the one against whom it is directed.”²⁰

5 And I looked, and [there was] none to help; and I wondered that [there was] none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me.

And I looked, and [there was] none to help. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And it is revealed before me, that there is no man whose works are good.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “When I looked and there was no helper.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “I looked about, and there was none to help.” ¶ Keith has: “This verse is the same as ISAIAH 59:16,²¹ with a change of person only. Messiah, the Lord’s Anointed, claims here for His own work what is there ascribed to Jehovah. The words ‘I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save,’ unfold that earlier message, ‘I, even I, am Jehovah, and beside me there is no Saviour’ (ISAIAH 43:11).” ¶ And I wondered that [there was] none to uphold: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And it is known to me, that there is no man who will stand up and pray in behalf of them.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And observed that none upheld.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “I sought, and there was none to give aid.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “God is represented as looking for and expecting what might reasonably have been expected, and even as surprised when he does not find it (comp. ISAIAH 59:16). Out of all the many nations it was reasonable to suppose that some would have chosen the better part and have been on the Lord’s side. But the fact was otherwise.” This seems to point to the end of days, when it would be the Lord’s arm and strength alone that would come to the rescue of His people in Jerusalem, when the nations would surround her. ¶ Therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me; and my fury, it upheld me. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Yea, I will redeem them by the arm of my strength, and by the Word of my delight I will help them.” The

¹⁸ Elder John Taylor, “The Second Coming of Jesus.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 22 February 1863. JD 10:116a.

¹⁹ Elder Wilford Woodruff, JD 17:193b.

²⁰ Elder Spencer W. Kimball, “Except Ye Repent...” October 1949 General Conference.

²¹ “And he saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor: therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him” (ISAIAH 59:16).

LXX (6) reads, “Then mine own arm delivered them. Mine indignation indeed was roused.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And my own arm hath saved for me, and my indignation itself hath helped me.” Rawlinson says: “Mine own arm brought salvation unto me] or, mine own arm helped me (comp. ISAIAH 59:16). Nothing more is needed. If God arises, his enemies at once ‘are scattered’ (Psalm 68:1). ‘His own right hand, and his holy arm, get him the victory’ (Psalm 98:1).” Oswalt has: “God will achieve the redemption of his people, and we may experience his arm as the ‘righteousness’ of God on our behalf, or we may experience it as his wrath. The choice is ours.”

6 And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth.

And I will tread down [תִּדְבֹּק] the people in mine anger. The Targum (7) has, “And I will slay the nations in my anger.” The LXX (6) reads, “And I trampled them down in mine anger.” The Lamsa Peshitta (5) follows the Masoretic text (11) and gives the plural, peoples (עַמִּים). The Douay-Rheims (9) has wrath rather than anger. ¶ Rawlinson explains: “I will tread down ... make drunk ... bring down] rather, I trod down ... made drunk ... brought down. The destruction was to be utter, overwhelming, absolute—one from which there could be no recovery (comp. Revelation 19:11–21, where the simile of the wine-press, and the ‘vesture dipped in blood,’ seem introduced with a special reference to this passage).” Wordsworth likewise has: “I will tread down the people] Rather, I trod down nations (Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, Vitranga, Delitzsch).” Barnes says: “The allusion here is to a warrior who tramples on his foes and treads them in the dust.” ¶ And make them drunk in my fury. The Targum (7) has, “And I will tread them down in my fury.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And have made them drunk in my indignation.” ¶ Wade explains: “Those who have been rendered prostrate and helpless are compared to drunkards, as in ISAIAH 29:9, 51:21.” So also Barnes, “The image of making them stagger and fall like a drunken man, is ... poetic ... and is in entire accordance with the usual manner of writing by the sacred penman.” ¶ Shalom Paul has: “Many medieval Hebrew manuscripts have [אֶשְׁכְּרֵם] (‘I smashed them’) instead of MT [אֶשְׁכְּרֵם] (‘I made them drunk’). Note, then, the resultant parallelism between בֹּטַס (‘to trample’²²) and שִׁבֵּר (‘to break’), as in ISAIAH 14:25.” Alexander similarly has: “For [אֶשְׁכְּרֵם] I make them drunk, most of the modern writers since Cappellus read [אֶשְׁכְּרֵם] I crush them; which is not only confirmed by many manuscripts and some editions, as well as by the Targum, but is recommended by its suiting the connection better” (emphasis added). ¶ And I will bring down their strength to the earth. The Targum (7) has, “And I will cast the slain of their mighty ones into the lowest parts of the earth.” The LXX (6) reads, “And shed their blood on the earth.” ¶ The ASV renders it: “And I poured out their lifeblood on the earth.” This and other translations that use the word blood or juice [e.g., CEV, CJB, ESV, JPS, LITV, NASB, NBLH, Rotherham, RV, RV60, and WEB] rather than strength make for a clearer message. Cowles explains: “I will bring down their juice (grape-juice) to the earth] The word translated in the English version, ‘strength,’ is the same which appears in ISAIAH 63:3 [נִצָּחִים], translated there, their ‘blood,’ but meaning in both cases, their juice [נִצָּחִים], they bring thought of as grapes trodden under the feet.” Gill suggests “... their strong kingdoms, fortified cities, and mighty men, their wealth and riches, of which they boasted, and in which they trusted ... The eighteenth chapter of the Revelation²³ is a commentary on these words.” Barnes has: “This finishes the vision of the mighty conqueror returning from Edom.”

²² Or, tread down (AV).

vv. 7–14. Rawlinson proposes: “GOD PRAISED FOR HIS MERCIES. The address opens with pure and simple thanksgiving of the most general kind, God being praised for his loving-kindness, compassion, and sympathy with his people (ISAIAH 63:7–9). An historical survey is then commenced, and Israel’s shortcomings contrasted with God’s mercies, but with a predominantly thankful and even jubilant tone (ISAIAH 63:10–14).” Lowth suggests: “The remaining part of this chapter, with the whole chapter following, contains a penitential confession and supplication of the Israelites in their present state of dispersion, in which they have so long marvellously subsisted, and still continue to subsist, as a people; cast out of their country; without any proper form of civil polity, or religious worship; their temple destroyed, their city desolated and lost to them; and their whole nation scattered over the face of the earth; apparently deserted and cast off by the God of their fathers, as no longer his peculiar people. They begin with acknowledging God's great mercies and favours to their nation, and the ungrateful returns made to them on their part; that by their disobedience they had forfeited the protection of God, and had caused him to become their adversary. And now the Prophet represents them, induced by the memory of the great things that God had done for them, as addressing their humble supplication for the renewal of his mercies: They beseech him to regard them in consideration of his former loving-kindness ... [and] entreat his forgiveness; and deplore their present miserable condition under which they have so long suffered." Alexander has: "The prevalent opinion among Christian interpreters is that we have here the beginning of a prophecy relating to the future restoration of Israel."

²³ Revelation 18 is the “Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen” (Revelation 18:2b), chapter. Also of particular interest is: “For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies” (Revelation 18:3).

7 ¶ I will mention the lovingkindnesses of the LORD, [and] the praises of the LORD, according to all that the LORD hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his lovingkindnesses.

I will mention the lovingkindnesses of the LORD. The Targum (T) begins with, "The prophet said." The LXX (G) reads, "I recollected the loving kindness of the Lord." The Douay-Rheims (D) has, "I will remember the tender mercies of the Lord." ¶ Shalom Paul points to a similar scripture about remembering or mentioning [זָכַר]: "I will remember the works of the LORD: surely I will remember thy wonders of old" (Psalm 77:11). In Doctrine and Covenants we read: "And now the year of my redeemed is come; and they shall mention the loving kindness of their Lord, and all that he has bestowed upon them according to his goodness, and according to his loving kindness, forever and ever" (D&C 133:52). The lovingkindness of the Lord [חַסְדֵי יְהוָה] is here extolled. I am filled with feelings of gratitude for the Lord's lovingkindness as well as for His tender mercies. I feel enveloped by His love and peace.²⁴ ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell explains,

²⁴ When our oldest son, David Marsing Billikopf served a mission in Uruguay, it was very hard for Linda & me to walk away at the conclusion of a general assembly at the MTC. The missionaries walked out one door; the parents through another. Those two years in which David served in Uruguay seemed particularly long. He began to suffer from ulcerative colitis during that time (although he had experienced some symptoms earlier), nearly 20 years ago. At first it was thought he suffered from lactose intolerance. It would take well

"Confessing God's hand thus calls for an array of appreciation in response to all that our loving Father has given, does give, and will yet give mankind. There is a tendency to acknowledge only 'big blessings' without acknowledging the multiplicity of 'small blessings.' Isaiah would doubtless include these latter in his acknowledging of the 'multitude of [God's] loving kindnesses' (ISAIAH 63:7; see also D&C 133:52). Really, even when we are reasonably dutiful, compared to such a flow of divine generosity and benefactions 'of what have we to boast?' (Mosiah 2:23–24). King Benjamin so stressed: 'I say unto you, my brethren, that if you should render all the thanks and praise which your whole soul has power to possess, to that God who has created you, and has kept and preserved you, ... if ye should serve him with all your whole souls yet ye would be unprofitable servants' (Mosiah 2:20–21)."²⁵ ¶ [And] the praises of the LORD, according to all that over a decade before he was diagnosed with primary sclerosing cholangitis (PSC). David has suffered so much over the recent years that Grant, his youngest child, though the hospital was "daddy's house." As the ailment progressed he was put on a list to receive a liver transplant. About a year and a half ago he received that miracle liver. That was a wonder in more than one way. David received the new liver a day before he was scheduled for an MRI. It is typical that doctors will invite a second transplant candidate to the hospital in case they find a tumor during the transplant process. If during the procedure they find a tumor, the patient is stitched back up and basically sent home to die and the liver is given to the alternate patient. It was not until the next day, while they more carefully examined the liver that had been removed, that they discovered a cholangiocarcinoma tumor of 5 cm. This would not have been missed by the MRI. At any rate, the doctors and medical staff were amazed at the speed of the recovery from surgery. This 'mistake' on the part of the doctors gave David over a year before a new tumor was discovered, in October 2016, four months ago. After this last growth was detected, Linda & I traveled to Virginia to see David and the family and experience some special memories together. During that trip I accompanied David to one of his checkups. He suggested we take several flights of stairs over the elevator. My son was hardly winded while I almost did not make it. Truly, despite the many hospital stays, David was given a great gift of life and health. It is with great lovingkindnesses and tender mercies that the Lord extended David's life. One night as I was contemplating the fact that David would be seeing my deceased ancestors the thought came to me that he would be doing much more than that. Tears of joy and gratitude flowed down my cheeks as I realized he would be preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ to my ancestors—both Jewish and Chilean—and many others at the other side of the veil. David is the first Melchizedek priesthood holder on my side of the family to embark on a mission into the Spirit world. When some of my friends hear about David they say they will pray for a miracle. While I appreciate the kind sentiments, I tell them we have already had our miracle. Back in November 2016 David was given about six months. We do not know exactly how long he has left, but we do know, and are filled with complete peace, that the day will come when we will be able to embrace him at the other side of the veil—and that there will be a day of resurrection. (Recorded 19 January 2017). POST DATA. David passed away yesterday, 6 February 2017, two hours after Linda & I arrived from Chile to his home in Virginia. It was truly a miracle that we were able to get all the necessary flights and connections to make it on time. We experienced so many tender mercies along the way.

²⁵ Maxwell, Neal A. That Ye May Believe. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1992.

the LORD hath bestowed on us. The LXX (⚡) reads, “The mercies of the Lord in all those things which he retributeth for us.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “The praise of the Lord for all the things that the Lord hath bestowed upon us.” ¶ Oswalt beautifully says: “When Gentile readers (from Marcion onward) look at the OT and see a God of wrath, the OT writers say to us in astonishment, ‘Oh no, it’s not surprising that God should have gotten angry with us. What is surprising is that he ever cared about us at all, and that he then continued to love us and care for us when we senselessly rejected him’ ... He is a God of unfailing kindness, grace, mercy, and love ... For the Hebrew, one truly remembers what God has said and done only when one lives a life that is in accordance with what God has said and done. Not to do so is to have ‘forgotten’ God, regardless of what one may say.” Barnes has: “They are represented as suffering under the infliction of long and continued ills; as cast out and driven to a distant land; as deprived of their former privileges, and as having been long subjected to great evils. Their temple is destroyed; their city desolate; and their whole nation afflicted and oppressed ... Lowth supposes that it refers to the Jews as scattered over all lands, and driven away from the country of their fathers.” ¶ And the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies. The LXX (⚡) reads, “The Lord is a good judge to the house of Israel. He dealeth with us according to his tender mercy.” Instead of bestowed on them, the Peshitta (⚡) has bestowed on us (Lamsa) / bestowed on me (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “And for the multitude of his good things to the house of Israel, which he hath given them according to his kindness.” ¶ We see that there is a chiasmic structure wherein the Lord’s tender mercies [רַחֲמֵי] are enveloped on both sides by His lovingkindness [רַחֲמָנִי]. Faussett has: “The plurals and the repetitions imply that language is inadequate to express the full extent of God’s goodness.” As I reflect on the lovingkindness and tender mercies of the Lord toward Israel, I am filled with peace and joy. I am so grateful for the restoration of His Church upon the earth with prophets and apostles, with the Priesthood, and with revelation. And I am so grateful for the gathering of Israel from every nation and corner of this world—as well as the work being carried out in the spirit world. ¶ And according to the multitude of his lovingkindnesses. The LXX (⚡) reads, “And according to the abundance of his saving goodness.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has mercies instead of lovingkindnesses. ¶ Once again, רַחֲמָנִי is mentioned. Elder Neal A. Maxwell says, “He is a Lord of ‘loving-kindness’ (ISAIAH 63:7; D&C 133:52); ‘I ... delight to honor those who serve me’ (D&C 76:5); ‘The fulness of the earth is yours’ (D&C 59:16); ‘There is enough and to spare’ (D&C 104:17); ‘Any ... who have seen any or the least of these hath seen God moving in his majesty and power’ (D&C 88:47); ‘It pleaseth God that he hath given all these things unto man’ (D&C 59:20); ‘I have stretched forth mine hand almost all the day long’ (Jacob 5:47; see also 2 Nephi 28:32); ‘Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard ... the things which God hath prepared for them that love him’ (1 Corinthians 2:9). The repentant and fully faithful shall receive ‘all that [the] Father hath’ (D&C 84:38). Finally, the faithful will be ‘clasped’ in the waiting and ‘open arms’ of Jesus! (Mormon 5:11; 6:17.)”²⁶

8 For he said, Surely they [are] my people, children [that] will not lie: so he was their Saviour.

The Targum (⚡) has, for the last clause, “And His Word became their salvation.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “And said, ‘Is not this my people? Children should not rebel.’ And he became their Saviour.” Instead of was their Saviour, the Peshitta (⚡) has, became their Saviour. The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has deny rather than lie. ¶ Israel was chosen by the Lord to be a separate or a righteous people. This verse seems to have at least two meanings: (1) how the Lord in the beginning chose Israel, but also (2) how in the last days He also took scattered Israel back into his bosom and chose her once again. ¶ Pett suggests: “In the past Yahweh had looked at His people, choosing them out and assuring Himself that because He had chosen them as His people they would not deal falsely, for were they not His own people (Exodus 6:7), yes, His children.” Jenour suggests: “Surely they are children that will not deceive, or, prove false” This, however, must not be understood in a strictly literal sense, as if God was deceived in the Jews [Israel, not just Judah alone—GB]. He knew that they would prove rebellious, and turn away from him (Deuteronomy 32).” ¶ Alexander has: “The verse in Hebrew simply states two facts, without intimating any causal relation between them. He chose them and he saved them.” The Lord knew ahead of time that Israel would fall and fall frequently. Why did the Lord choose Israel? We read: “The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people: But because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers ...” (Deuteronomy 7:7–8a). The answer seems to be two-fold, one because Israel was not mighty or strong—and the Lord works with the weak to accomplish His purposes—and also, because of His relationship with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. ¶ Shalom Paul has: “The adverb אֲדָ is emphatic, as in Genesis 29:14 ... For the verb שָׁקַר as reneging on the commitments of a covenant, see Genesis 21:23: ‘Therefore swear to me here by God that you will not deal falsely (תִּשְׁקַר) with me or with my kith and kin, but will deal with me ... as loyally as I have dealt with you.’” That will lie not [לֹא יִשְׁקַרְוּ], then, could very well be a remembrance of a like covenant of integrity by the children of Israel to be true and faithful and lie not. ¶ Alexander suggests: “And he said, Only they are my people] To the general acknowledgment of God’s goodness to his people, there is now added a specification of his favours, beginning with the great distinguishing favour by which they became what they were. This verse is commonly explained as an expression of unfounded confidence and hope on God’s part, surely they are my people, children that will not lie ... the explanation just referred to rests almost entirely on the sense attached to אֲדָ as a mere particle of asseveration. Now, in every other case where Isaiah uses it, the restrictive sense of *only*²⁷ is not admissible merely, but necessary to the full force of the sentence ... Another advantage of the strict translation is, that it makes the Prophet go back to the beginning of their course, and instead of setting out from the hopes which God expressed after the choice of Israel, record the choice itself. Thus understood, the first clause is a solemn declaration of his having chosen Israel, to the exclusion of all other nations. Only they (and no others) are my people ... אֲדָ must here be taken ... to qualify עַמִּי.” ¶ I wonder if the expression surely [אֲדָ] does not apply to latter-day Israel who would be faithful to the Lord and live by the Gospel truths. In the expression, אֲדָ עַמִּי הֵמָּה, surely they are my people, the Lord is owning Israel as His, and a sure sign of the Abrahamic covenant (see Rain in Due Season). This would be particularly true of the time after the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. ¶ Of the second clause, Rawlinson suggests: “Children that will not lie] or, deal falsely, as the same word is translated in Psalm 44:17. The meaning is, that surely they will be faithful to God, and not fall away from him into idolatry or irreligion.” ¶ But also, truly the Lord has said: “The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones” (D&C 1:19a); “That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers” (D&C 1:23); and, “Wherefore, I call upon the weak things of the world, those who are unlearned and despised, to thrash the nations by the power of my Spirit; And their arm shall be my arm, and I will be their shield and their buckler; and I will gird up their loins, and they shall fight manfully for me; ... and by the fire of mine indignation will I preserve them” (D&C 35:13–14). So he was their savior. ¶ Shalom Paul says, “God thus fulfilled His part of the covenant.”

²⁶ Maxwell, Neal A. That Ye May Believe. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1992.

Rawlinson has: “The Apostle Paul, writing to Timothy, uses this figure for God, but expresses it more comprehensively and suggestively. ‘The living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of those that believe’ (1 Timothy 4:10).”

9 In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old.

In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence [וַיִּמְלֵאֵם פָּנָיו] saved them. Horsley, regarding the Masoretic text (מ) says: “Our translators have followed the Keri לֹא, instead of the Ketib לֹא.²⁸”

The Ketib כְּתִיב represents the unpointed text that existed before the Masoretic text (מ) came forth. The מ was published in 1524 but work on it began centuries earlier. The Ketib כְּתִיב stands for what is written in contrast to the Keri קְרִי, what is to be read, according to the Jewish scholars who produced the Masoretic text (מ). The Ketib is followed by the Peshitta (ܫ) and the Vulgate (ϐ) as well as a few modern translators: “In all their distress *he*²⁹ wasn't distressed” (ISV); “In all their distress, there was no distress” (LEB); “In all their affliction, He was not a foe” (LITV); and “In all their distress He is no adversary” (YLT). The vast majority of translations (such as NASB, Webster, WEBB, TLV, JUB, and Leeser) follow the Keri לֹא—as does the KJV and more importantly, the Doctrine and Covenants, “In all their afflictions he was afflicted” (D&C 133:53a). ¶ The Targum (ܬ) has, “Whenever they sinned against Him, that He might have brought upon them distress, He did not distress them; but an angel was sent from Him.” The LXX (Ϛ) notably reads, “From all their distress. It was not an ambassador nor a messenger; but he himself saved them.” For the first clause, the Peshitta (S) has “In all their troubles he did not afflict them” (Lamsa) / “He did not afflict them in any of his afflictions” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (D) has “In all their affliction he was not troubled.” ¶ In Doctrine and Covenants, once again, we read: “In all their afflictions he was afflicted. And the angel of his presence saved them; and in his love, and in his pity, he redeemed them, and bore them, and carried them all the days of old” (D&C 133:53). Angel of His presence may also be translated literally as messenger of His [own] face, akin to Messenger of the Covenant, or Messenger of Salvation, all titles belonging to Jesus Christ (although Angel Moroni was a messenger sent forth from the presence of God, Joseph Smith History—1:33). ¶ May I suggest that the Angel of His Presence is no other than the Holy One of Israel in His premortal state, even Jehovah, as He ministered personally to the children of men? Alexander has: “The combination of these passages [Genesis 28:13, 31:11, 48:16, Exodus 3:2; 14:19; 23:20–23; 33:12; Joshua 5:14, Judges 13:6, Hosea 12:5, Zechariah 3:1, Malachi 3:1, Psalm 34:8] determines the sense of the angel of his presence, as denoting the angel whose presence was the presence of Jehovah.” ¶ So also the LXX (G), as noted above, that makes it clear that this is God, and not an ambassador of any sort. When we quote it in the context of both the previous and following verses, that is, ISAIAH 53:8–10, the message from the LXX (G) is even clearer (please especially note the expression my people). Let us look at two translations: The Lexham English Septuagint {(G), LES} has: “And he said, ‘Are they not my people? Children, they will never rebel.’ And he became their salvation from all their affliction. Not an elder or a messenger but he himself has saved them, because he loved them and spared them. He himself ransomed them and took them up and exalted them [all the days of old. But they rebelled and provoked his Holy Spirit, and he was turned to enmity against them; he himself made war with them.” Brenton LXX (G) has: “And he said, Is it not my people? the children surely will not be rebellious: and he became to them deliverance out of all their affliction: not an ambassador, nor a messenger, but himself saved them, because he loved them and spared them: he himself redeemed them, and took them up, and lifted them up all the days of old. But they disobeyed, and provoked his Holy Spirit: so he turned to be an enemy, he himself contended against them.” Other than some interesting points in the NET critical apparatus, such as reject me instead of deal falsely, or rebel the NET LXX (G) and Thompson LXX (G) are essentially the same as the two quoted above. ¶ A related expression to the angel of his presence is found in the Book of Mormon. We find the Spirit of the Lord, who appears to be the premortal Savior in Nephi’s glorious vision of the condescension of our Redeemer—else why did He disappear when Christ child was born and a different personage, an angel, comes to continue the conversation? “And he [the Spirit of the Lord] said unto me: What desirest thou? And I said unto him: To know the interpretation thereof—for I spake unto him as a man speaketh; for I beheld that he was in the form of a man; yet nevertheless, I knew that it was the Spirit of the Lord; and he spake unto me as a man speaketh with another. And it came to pass that he said unto me: Look! And I looked as if to look upon him, and I saw him not; for he had gone from before my presence. And it came to pass that I looked and beheld the great city of Jerusalem, and also other cities. And I beheld the city of Nazareth; and in the city of Nazareth I beheld a virgin, and she was exceedingly fair and white. And it came to pass that I saw the heavens open; and an angel came down and stood before me; and he said unto me: Nephi, what beholdest thou? And I said unto him: A virgin, most beautiful and fair above all other virgins. And he said unto me: Knowest thou the condescension of God?” (1 Nephi 11:10–16). The conversation continues with Nephi’s response: “And I said unto him: I know that he loveth his children; nevertheless, I do not know the meaning of all things. And he said unto me: Behold, the virgin whom thou seest is the mother of the Son of God, after the manner of the flesh. And it came to pass that I beheld that she was carried away in the Spirit; and after she had been carried away in the Spirit for the space of a time the angel spake unto me, saying: Look! And I looked and beheld the virgin again, bearing a child in her arms” (1 Nephi 11:17–20). ¶ In Abraham in the Pearl of Great Price we read: “And as they lifted up their hands upon me, that they might offer me up and take away my life, behold, I lifted up my voice unto the Lord my God, and the Lord hearkened and heard, and he filled me with the vision of the Almighty, and the angel of his presence stood by me, and immediately unloosed my bands; And his voice was unto me: Abraham, Abraham, behold, my name is Jehovah, and I have heard thee, and have come down to deliver thee, and to take thee away from thy father’s house, and from all thy kinsfolk, into a strange land which thou knowest not of” (Abraham 1:15–16, emphasis added). So it is that here the Angel of His Presence speaks and says, “My name is Jehovah.” ¶ Horsley has: “I much doubt whether the ‘angel of the presence’ ever signifies any other than Jehovah Himself.” Cowles says: “This same angel is identified with the presence of Jehovah and with Jehovah himself, Exodus 33:12–23, and 34:5–9; and also at the bush, Exodus 3:2, 4–6. It is quite to our purpose to note that the term ‘angel’ and the phrase, ‘The angel of the Lord,’ are often applied to God as coming down and manifesting himself ... to his people. Thus Jacob had wondrous visions of God and Bethel (Genesis 28:12–17), and though that personage was not called an angel in that passage, yet at a later period he said; ‘The angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, I am the God of Bethel where thou anointedst the pillar,’ etc. (Genesis 31:11, 13). In the same manner the Personage who appeared to Moses at the bush is called ‘the angel of the Lord’; and yet he said, ‘I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob’; who also gave his name, ‘I am that I am’ (Exodus 3:2³⁰, 6, 14).” ¶ In all their affliction ... Although this certainly involves empathy—where the Savior feels all of the pains experienced by His beloved people—it also extends beyond feelings of empathy to the expiatory suffering undergone for each one of us during the atonement. Cheyne similarly has: “He was distressed] i.e., he himself sympathised with them. Comp. Judges 10:16, ‘His (Jehovah’s) soul was impatient for the misery of Israel.” Jenour has: “‘We have not a High Priest who cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities,’ &c. (Hebrews 4:15) Let us remember this declaration is of general application. And how encouraging is the thought which it suggests? Jehovah takes part in the afflictions of his people.” So also Alexander: “... as the English Version renders it, ‘in all their affliction he was afflicted.’ This explanation, with the text on which it is founded, and which is exhibited by a number of manuscripts and editions, is approved by Luther, Vitranga, Clericus, Hitzig, Ewald, Umbreit, Hendewerk, and Knobel. It is favoured, not only by the strong and affecting sense which it yields, but by the analogy of Judges 10:16.” Furthermore, the Angel of His Presence continually intercedes for Israel. ¶ Not only did the Savior minister to His people personally, but also He sent numerous prophets of which He only mentions a few in the next two verses of the Doctrine and Covenants section we have been quoting: “Yea, and Enoch also, and they who were with him; the prophets who were before him; and Noah also, and they who were before him; and Moses also, and they who were before him; And from Moses to Elijah, and from Elijah to John, who were with Christ in his resurrection, and the holy apostles, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, shall be in the presence of the Lamb” (D&C 133:54–55). ¶ Lowth well explains, however, that at times the Lord did not go Himself but sent emissaries: “The presence of JEHOVAH (Exodus 33:14, 15) and the angel (Exodus 23:20, 21) is JEHOVAH himself ... [but] After their idolatrous worshipping of the golden calf, ‘when God had said to Moses, I will send an angel before thee—I will not go up in the midst of thee—the people mourned’ (Exodus 33:2–4). God afterwards comforts Moses by saying, ‘My presence (that is, I myself in person, and not by an angel) will go with thee’ (Exodus 33:14).” Lowth goes on to point out that while the Masoretic text (MT) in Exodus 33:14 has:

²⁸ No, לֹא.

²⁹ So if the he לוֹ (קְרִי) is exchanged with the no לֹא (כְּתִיב) where does the he come from in the כְּתִיב? It is spelled out in its most typical form, הוּא, later on in the sentence, and it is also attached to several of the words, beginning with פָּנָיו, his presence, or more literally, his face.

²⁷ אֲדָ, see Gesenius 2nd acceptance, “adv. of limitation, only.”

“My presence shall go with thee,” the LXX (G) renders it: “I myself will go before thee.”³¹ This idea pointed out by Lowth that the Lord will not always go to certain places in person is corroborated also with what we know about the Savior’s visit to the Spirit World. There, He commissioned others to go and preach to the spirits in prison. ¶ To summarize, it is clear that the Savior takes a very active and personal—even fatherly—interest in man’s affairs. In human families a fatherly or motherly role is often taken by the oldest son or daughter. ¶ Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught, “No one can read this supernal revelatory account without feeling the divine tenderness of God’s sharing in human suffering. In view of this, praise be to God for His long-suffering and patience! Our Father and our Redeemer are perfect in both their mercy and their justice—and divine empathy bridges those two virtues. ‘In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old’ (ISAIAH 63:9).”³² ¶ In his love and in his pity he redeemed them. The Targum (T) has, “Who in His mercy redeemed them.” The LXX (G) reads, “Through his love and his indulgence to them, he himself redeemed them.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has mercy instead of pity. ¶ Rawlinson speaks of the redemption from Egyptian bondage: “The ‘redemption’ of this passage is probably that from the bondage of Egypt (Exodus 6:6; 15:13; Deuteronomy 7:8, etc.), which belonged to ‘the days of old’—not the spiritual redemption from the bondage of sin, which was reserved for the time of the Messiah. Having ‘redeemed’ them, i.e. delivered them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and thereby, as it were, purchased them to be his own, he bare them—‘carried them on eagles’ wings’ (Exodus 19:4), and brought them safely through the wilderness to Palestine (comp. Deuteronomy 32:10–12).” Of course, such redemption was only a type for that associated with the atonement. The Savior’s greatest sign of love and tender mercies toward us is represented in His expiatory sacrifice, wherein He died that we might live. ¶ And he bare them, and carried them all the days of old. The Targum (T) has, “And in His compassion, behold (the Royal Polyglot reads אֲנִי, ‘he’), He delivered them; and He bare them, and carried them all the days of old.” The LXX (G) reads, “And took them up, and exalted them all the days of old.” ¶ The words of this verse show the great love and tenderness with which the Savior ministered to the children of men and most especially to the children of Israel before His first advent. It is said that He carried them, even as a shepherd carries His sheep. In ISAIAH 40:11: “He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young.” Those things He will yet do, but those things He has already done from the beginning, even from the days of old. Wordsworth has: “He bare them, and carried them] As a father bears and carries his children. See Numbers 11:12; Deuteronomy 1:31; and below, on Acts 13:18; above, ISAIAH 46:3.” Rabbis Slotki-Rosenberg explain: “Bare them] Or, ‘took them up,’ as a parent raises a child and carries him.” Perhaps also, when a parent picks up a tired child and carries her. So also Barnes: “As a shepherd carries the lambs of the flock, or as a nurse carries her children; or still more probably, as an eagle bears her young on her wings Deuteronomy 32:11–12. The idea is, that he conducted them through all their trials in the wilderness, and led them in safety to the promised land.”

³¹ Brenton’s 1851 translation of the LXX (G).

³² Maxwell, Neal A. A Wonderful Flood of Light. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1990.

³⁰ JST: “And the presence of the Lord.”

10 But they rebelled, and vexed his holy Spirit: therefore he was turned to be their enemy, [and] he fought against them.

But they rebelled, and vexed his holy Spirit: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But they rebelled against the word of His holy prophets, and blasphemed (or, ‘they provoked the prophets to anger’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But they rebelled and provoked his holy spirit.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “But they provoked to wrath, and afflicted the spirit of his Holy One.” ¶ Despite the fact that Israel was called to be a separate and a holy people before the Lord, she did rebel against Him and walked after other gods. Rawlinson explains: “But they rebelled] The rebellions of Israel against God commenced in the wilderness. They rebelled at Sinai, when they set up the golden calf; at Meribah (Numbers 20:24); at Shittim, when they consorted with the daughters of Moab (Numbers 25:6). Under the Judges, their conduct was one long rebellion (Judges 2:11; 3:7, 12; 4:1; 6:1; 8:33; 10:6; 13:1). They rebelled in Samuel’s time by asking for a king (1 Samuel 8:5, 19, 20). The ten tribes rebelled under Jeroboam, and set up the idolatry of the calves at Dan and Bethel. Worse idolatries followed, and in two centuries and a half had reached such a height, that God was provoked to ‘remove Israel out of his sight’ (2 Kings 17:23). Judah remained, but ‘rebelled’ under Manasseh, Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah, ‘transgressing very much after all the abominations of the heathen, and polluting the very house of the Lord at Jerusalem’ (2 Chronicles 36:14). These rebellions against God vexed his Holy Spirit—‘provoked him,’ ‘grieved him,’ ‘moved the Holy One in Israel’ (Psalm 78:40, 41; 106:43).” Wordsworth point out: “They—vexed his holy Spirit] A remarkable testimony to the person and office of the Holy Spirit. Cp. Nehemiah 9:20, 30, and Numbers 11:25; and St. Stephen’s words before the Jewish Sanhedrim, ‘Ye do always resist the Holy Ghost, as your fathers did, so do ye’ (Acts 7:51).” ¶ Therefore he was turned to be their enemy, [and] he fought against them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And His Word became (Chaldee, ‘was turned’) their enemy, and He waged war against them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “So he became their enemy. He fought against them.” ¶ That is, the Lord for a period of time ceased to walk among His people to be their God. Yet the Lord was filled with compassion [ISAIAH 63:15] toward His people and rescued them out of bondage in Egypt [ISAIAH 63:11 ff.] and after. ¶ One way that this rebellion takes place is through the hardening of the heart towards the things of God and most especially the Spirit. Cowles points us to the Psalms: “And they sinned yet more against him by provoking the most High in the wilderness ... How oft did they provoke him in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert!” (Psalm 78:17, 40). ¶ Rawlinson has: “Therefore he was turned to be their enemy] (comp. Jeremiah 30:14; Lamentations 2:4, 5). Judah had ‘filled up the measure of her iniquities,’ had gone on ‘until there was no remedy’ (2 Chronicles 36:16). God’s indignation was therefore poured out upon her without let or stint. ‘He cut off in his fierce anger all the horn of Israel: he drew back his right hand from before the enemy; he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about. He bent his bow like an enemy; he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew all that were pleasant in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion; he poured out his fury like fire. The Lord was as an enemy’ (Lamentations 2:3–5). He fought against them; rather, he himself fought against them. God himself, though they were ‘his people,’ yet fought against them and for the Chaldeans in that final struggle. He ‘gave the city into the hand of the King of Babylon’ (Jeremiah 34:2).” Wade more generally has: “Fought against them] i.e. through the agency of foreign nations (cf. Judges 3:8, 4:2, etc., 2 Kings 17:20, ISAIAH 10:5, 6, Jer. 21:5).”

11 Then he remembered the days of old, Moses, [and] his people, [saying], Where [is] he that brought them up out of the sea with the shepherd ~ of his flock? where [is] he that put his holy Spirit within him?

✓ or, shepherds

Then he remembered the days of old, Moses, [and] his people. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And He had compassion for the glory of His name, because of the remembrance of His goodness of old, the mighty works which He did by the hands of Moses for His people.” The LXX (6) reads, “Though he remembered the days of old.” Instead of Moses, [and] his people, the Peshitta (S) has Moses his servant. ¶ Here we have an allusion to the exodus wherein the Lord, through the instrumentality of Moses, took Israel from the land of Egypt where they were captives. Rawlinson observes that it is unclear who the person who remembered the days of Moses is. The reference is that of the Exodus with Moses leading the people out of Egypt. Wordsworth interestingly suggests: “Then he remembered” As the Psalmist says: “When he slew them’ (Israel), ‘then they sought Him: and they returned and inquired early after God. And they remembered that God was their Rock, and that the High God was their Redeemer’ (Psalm 78:34–35). So here the Prophet says, when ‘God fought against them, then he (i.e. the people) remembered.’” Or, when he, i.e., the people of Israel remembered. Alexander has, in part, “The modern writers, since Vitrina, are agreed that the first clause describes the repentance of the people, and that the second gives their very words, contrasting their actual condition with their former privileges and enjoyments.” Oswalt suggests: “Because the questions that follow seem to come from Israel, Israel is the most probable subject here.” Leeser has: “Then remembered his people the ancient days of Moses.” The Soncino translation has: “Then His people remembered the days of old, the days of Moses.” So also CJB: “But then his people remembered the days of old, the days of Moshe.” Geneva renders it: “Then he remembred the olde time of Moses and his people.” (See also HCSB, ISV, JPS, JUB, LEB, NASB, AMP.) Shalom Paul suggests that the Masoretic text (מ) pointing should have reflected the plural (זָכַרְוּ, and they remembered, meaning the people or nation of Israel) rather than the singular (זָכַר, and he remembered, seeming to refer to the Lord). For example, ERV, “Then they remembered” (also see GNB, ISV). This is similar³³ to “And they remembered [זָכַרְוּ] that God was their rock, and the high God their redeemer” (Psalm 78:35). ¶ [Saying]. Where [is] he that brought them up out of the sea with the shepherd of his flock? The Targum (T) has, “Lest the Gentiles should say, Where is He that brought them up out of the sea?” The Peshitta (S) has something like, “Who he had come up out of the sea to be the shepherd of his flock.” ¶ Wordsworth has: “With the shepherd” Literally, the *shepherds*³⁴, Moses and Aaron (Psalm 77:20; 80:1).” Kimhi, in Slotki-Rosenberg, also suggests the “allusion is to Moses and Aaron.” Shalom Paul further points out that beside Moses and Aaron ... “[there were] others (e.g., Abravanel) as referring to the prophets. On the other hand, there are those who explain אֵל as introducing the subject rather than the object: ‘the shepherd of His flock’ refers to God, who elsewhere is named ‘Israel’s Shepherd’ (רֹעֶה יִשְׂרָאֵל) (Psalm 80:2).” ¶ Where [is] he that put his holy Spirit within him? The Targum (T) has, “Where is He that made the word of His holy prophets to dwell amongst them?” The LXX (6) reads, “Where is He that led them through the wilderness, as a shepherd his flock?” The LXX (6) reads, “Where is he who caused the shepherd of his flock to come up out of the sea? Where is he, who put his holy spirit in them?” The BPE (S) has, “And as he put his holy Spirit within him.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Where is he that put in the midst of them the spirit of his Holy One?” ¶ Rawlinson has: “God gave to the people in the wilderness ‘his good Spirit to instruct them’ (Nehemiah 9:20), and guide them (Haggai 2:4, 5), and govern them (Numbers 11:17).” Gill explains: “... the Spirit of God was not only upon Moses, but upon the seventy elders, and upon all the people at Sinai, as Kimhi observes; and indeed the Holy Spirit was given to the body of the people to instruct and teach them, according to Nehemiah 9:20 — now these questions are put, not by way of jeer, but by way of complaint, for want of the divine presence as formerly; and by way of inquiry where the Lord was; and by way of expostulation with him, that he would show himself again, as in the days of old.”

12 That led [them] by the right hand of Moses with his glorious arm, dividing the water before them, to make himself an everlasting name?

That led [them] by the right hand of Moses with his glorious arm. The Targum (T) has, for the second clause, “The arm of His glory.” The LXX (6) reads, “That glorious arm of his which led Moses by the right hand?” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “He that brought out Moses by the right hand, by the arm of his majesty.” ¶ Rawlinson notes: “That led them by the right hand of Moses with his glorious arm” rather, that caused his glorious arm to attend at Moses’ right hand—ready (as Dr. Weir says) to grasp him if he should stumble.”

Cheyne considers His glorious arm, זְרוֹעַ תְּפָאָתוֹ, an expression equivalent to that of the Angel of His Presence, above. Gill explains: “That is, through the Red sea, as the next clause shows: this was done by the right hand of Moses, and the rod in it, to which Kimhi thinks respect is had; who, by divine order, lifted up his rod, and stretched out his hand over the sea, and divided it, and so led the people through it: but, lest this should be attributed to Moses and his rod, the glorious arm of the Lord is made mention of, which held and guided the right hand of Moses, and from whence came all that power that was exerted on this occasion. Ibn Ezra interprets this of the Angel of the Lord, that went before them: it seems to design the arm of omnipotence, which was gloriously displayed (Exodus 15:6).” ¶ Dividing the water before them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Dividing the waters of the Red Sea before them (literally, ‘from before thee’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He forced back the water from before him.” Allusion to the Exodus and the crossing of the Red Sea. ¶ Rawlinson has: “Dividing the water before them] literally, cleaving the waters before their face (comp. Exodus 14:21).” Gill says: “The waters of the sea, so that they rose up as a wall on each side [of] them, through which they passed as on dry land.” ¶ To make himself an everlasting name? The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “To make himself an everlasting name.” ¶ Barns explains: “He designed to perform a work which, it would be seen, could not be performed by any false god or by any human arm, and to do it in such circumstances, and in such a manner, that it might be seen everywhere that this was the true God. The deliverance from Egypt was attended with such amazing miracles, and with such a sudden destruction of his foes, that none but the true God could have performed it. Egypt was at that time the center of all the science, civilization, and art known among mankind; and what occurred there would be known to other lands. God, therefore, in this signal manner, designed to make a public demonstration of his existence and power that shall be known in all lands, and that should never be forgotten.” Rawlinson has: “To make himself an everlasting name (see Exodus 15:11–16). It was one of the main purposes of the entire series of miracles wrought in Egypt, ‘that God’s Name might be declared throughout all the earth’ (Exodus 9:16).”

³³ But with a plene spelling.

³⁴ Masoretes point in ISAIAH 63:11 as רֹעִי (plural) and in Psalm 23:1 as רֹעִי (singular). Also see margin ¶. Critical Apparatus for BHS has: 6 T sg, רֹעִי.

13 That led them through the deep, as an horse in the wilderness, [that] they should not stumble?

That led them through the deep. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “He led them through the deep.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “He that led them out through the deep.” ¶ This and the next verse continue the allusions to the children of Israel crossing the Red Sea in safety. Gill suggests: “The depths, the bottom of the sea; not through the shallow, but where the waters had been deepest, the descent greatest; and at the bottom of which might have been expected much filth and dirt to hinder them in their passage, yet through this he led them.” Barnes has: “They went through the deep on dry land—the waters having divided and left an unobstructed path.” ¶ As an horse in the wilderness, [that] they should not stumble? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “As a horse that stumbleth not in the plain? thus also they stumbled not.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Like a horse through a desert.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has “As a horse is led in the wilderness (or desert, BPE), and they stumbled not.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “As a horse in the wilderness that stumbleth not.” ¶ Calvin has: “That is, he led out his people as gently as if one were leading a horse into a plain. By the word ‘desert’ is not meant the wilderness of Paran in which the people dwelt forty years; but, in accordance with the ordinary usage of the Hebrew tongue, it denotes pasture, in which herds and flocks wander at large. This is still more evident from the following verse.” Wade explains it: “That made them go through the depths as a horse in the wilderness (or prairie), as the cattle that descend into the valley, so that they stumbled not, the spirit of the LORD leading them, etc. Both similes illustrate the security with which Israel was guided through the deep bed of the Red Sea: cf. Psalm 106:9³⁵.” The bottom of the Red Sea as they crossed, then, was made as passable and easy as if riding through a flat prairie or wilderness wherein a horse would not stumble. Shalom Paul suggests Jeremiah 31:9.³⁶

14 As a beast goeth down into the valley, the Spirit of the LORD caused him to rest: so didst thou lead thy people, to make thyself a glorious name.

As a beast goeth down into the valley, the Spirit of the LORD caused him to rest: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “As a beast is led in a plain, the Word of the Lord led them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they were not fatigued: and like cattle through a plain. A spirit from the Lord descended and conducted them.” Instead of beast, the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has cattle (Lamsa) / livestock (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “As a beast that goeth down in ³⁵ “He rebuked the Red sea also, and it was dried up: so he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness” (Psalm 106:9).

³⁶ This is not only a beautiful example of the Lord’s role as Father and Guide, but also speaks of the gathering of Israel in the latter days: “⁶ For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God. ⁷ For thus saith the LORD; Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel. ⁸ Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither. ⁹ They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn” (Jeremiah 31:6-9).

the field, the spirit of the Lord was their leader.”

¶ Rawlinson has: “As a beast goeth down into the valley] Bishop Lowth’s version seems the best, ‘As the herd descendeth to the valley.’ Israel’s passage through the Sinaitic peninsula into Canaan is compared to the movement of a herd of cattle from its summer pastures in the mountains to the valley at their base, where for a time it rests. So God gave his people, after their many trials, ‘rest’ in Canaan (Hebrews 3:11–18).” Wordsworth suggests: “Israel went down into the depths of the Red Sea by a safe and easy descent, and in order to find repose from his enemies; as an ox goes down a gentle declivity after its toil, in order to drink from the waters of the brook which flows through the vale.” Alexander, in part, has: “... ‘will bring him to a place of rest,’ a form of expression often used in reference to the promised land.” Surely, with the Psalmist we can say: “The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name’s sake” (Psalm 23:1–3). Young points out that the ease of the descent is not so much an issue of terrain as it is of finding the verdant “abundant pastures.” ¶ Spirit of the Lord. Young suggests that the implication is that of the Spirit as a guide. Gill has: “Some understand this of leading Israel through the wilderness, where often resting places were found for them, and at last they were brought to the land of rest, Canaan, and settled there.” ¶ So didst thou lead thy people, to make thyself a glorious name. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “So didst Thou lead Thy people to make thyself a glorious name.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Thus thou didst lead this people of thine, to make thyself a glorious name.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “So didst thou lead thy people] ‘So’ refers, not to the last simile only, but to the entire description contained in Isaiah 63:11–14. To make thyself a glorious name] (comp. ISAIAH 63:12, and see also Ezekiel 36:21–23; Malachi 1:11).” Similarly, Alexander suggests: “In the last clause the Prophet ceases to regard the scene as actually present, and resumes the tone of historical retrospection, at the same time summing up the whole in one comprehensive proposition, thus didst thou lead thy people.—With the last words of the verse compare ISAIAH 60:21, 61:3.”

vv. 15–19. Rawlinson suggests: “A PRAYER FOR DELIVERANCE FROM SIN AND SUFFERING. From thanksgiving and confession, the people betake themselves to prayer, and beseech God to look down from heaven once more, to have compassion on them, to acknowledge them, and to save them alike from themselves (ISAIAH 63:17) and from their adversaries (ISAIAH 63:18, 19). ‘It is difficult to overrate the spiritual beauty of the prayer contained in this passage. We may admit that the most prominent motive urged by the speaker has a nationalistic air; but behind this, and strengthening it, is a sense of the infiniteness of the Divine mercy, and of the strong vitality of the union between Jehovah and his people’ (Cheyne).” Alexander says: “The foregoing description of God’s ancient favours is now made the ground of an importunate appeal for new ones.”

15 ¶ Look down from heaven, and behold from the habitation of thy holiness and of thy glory: where [is] thy zeal and thy strength, the sounding of thy bowels and of thy mercies toward me? are they restrained?

✓ or, the multitude

Look down from heaven, and behold from the habitation of thy holiness and of thy glory: where [is] thy zeal and thy strength. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “and reveal thyself” instead of and behold; and for the last clause, “Where is Thy vengeance and Thy great might?” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Return from heaven and take a view from the house of thy sanctuary and thy glory. Where is thy zeal and thy majesty?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “Look down from heaven, and behold from thy holy habitation and the place of thy glory: where is thy zeal, and thy strength.” ¶ According to Ibn Ezra, this request is associated with ISAIAH 63:10, wherein we read that the Lord turned³⁷ to become Israel’s enemy. Barnes says: “This commences an earnest appeal that God would have mercy on them in their present calamities and trials. They entreat him to remember his former mercies, and to return and bless them, as he had done in ancient times.” Gill says: “Here begins the prayer of the ... people of God, which continues to the end of the chapter, goes through the next, and the answer to which begins at ISAIAH 65:1.” Jenour suggests: “That is, that zeal, and that mighty power which thou hast shewn in former times on behalf of thy people? The expostulation of the Jewish nation is founded on the idea that we expect, and are justly entitled to, more sympathy and help in times of affliction from those to whose kindness we are already indebted, than we are from those who have never conferred any benefit upon us.” ¶ Alexander has: “The unusual word for dwelling-place [מִבְּרָה] is borrowed from the prayer of Solomon (1 Kings 8:13 [וּבְרָה]) For a similar description of heaven, see ISAIAH 57:15. God is here represented as withdrawn into heaven, and no longer active upon earth.” ¶ The sounding of thy bowels and of thy mercies toward me?

³⁷ There, the word מִפְּנֵי is used. Gesenius explains as turning such as turning their neck, back or heart [Psalm 105:25] on someone.

are they restrained? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The multitude of Thy mercies and Thy compassion towards me are restrained.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Where the abundance of thy loving kindness and tender affections, that thou hast withdrawn thyself from us?” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “Turn thy tender mercies and compassion toward us. Are they restrained?” (Lamsa) / “Have the commotion and mercy of thy bowels left us?” (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “The multitude of thy bowels, and of thy mercies? they have held back themselves from me.” ¶ Cowles explains: “As usual, the bowels are thought of as the seat of affections and sympathies. Even the word rendered ‘mercies’ [ⲕⲏⲙⲓⲙ] means ... bowels,³⁸ the soft organs of the abdomen.” Rawlinson has: “The sounding of thy bowels; i.e. their thrilling or vibration—an indication of sympathy (ISAIAH 16:11). Jeremiah has a similar expression (Jeremiah 31:20).” Wordsworth has: “Toward me? Are they restrained?” Rather, are they restrained toward me? those bowels of fatherly mercy which yearn toward all Thy children, and which of old yearned so tenderly toward me, Thy favoured people, are they now restrained toward me? This is a mournful and piteous appeal from Israel to God.” Barnes suggest this is much like asking: “Are thy mercies to be exercised no more?” I sense that these are the sentiments and pain being experienced by modern-day Judah—a sense of yearning and abandonment. Of course the Lord has not abandoned either Judah or Israel.

16 Doubtless thou [art] our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not: thou, O LORD, [art] our father, our redeemer; thy name [is] from everlasting. ✓

✓ or, our redeemer from everlasting is thy name

Doubtless thou [art] our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For Thou art He, whose mercies towards us are as many as a father’s towards his children: for Abraham hath not brought us up out of Egypt, and Israel hath not wrought for us wonderful works in the wilderness.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For thou art our father. Because Abraham knoweth us not, and Israel hath not acknowledged us.” The Douay-

Rheims (ⲱ) has, “For thou art our father, and Abraham hath not known us, and Israel hath been ignorant of us.” ¶ Rawlinson explains: “Doubtless thou art our Father] rather, for thou art our Father. This is the ground of their appeal to God. As their Father, he must love them, and must be ready to listen to them.” Alexander says: “Why do we ask thee to look down from heaven and to hear our prayer? Because thou art our father. This does not merely mean our natural creator, but our founder, our national progenitor, as in Deuteronomy 32:6. Here, however, it appears to be employed in an emphatic and exclusive sense, as if he had said, ‘Thou, and thou alone, art our father;’ for he immediately adds, as if to explain and justify this strange assertion, ‘for Abraham has not known us, and Israel will not recognise or acknowledge us.’” ¶ though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not. Rabbi Ibn Ezra has: “Abraham is mentioned, as having been the first with whom God made a covenant to be a God unto him and his children; Jacob is also mentioned as the last of the patriarchs, and the founder of our nation exclusively.” Young well notes that in so speaking of Abraham and Jacob, “In this utterance there is no depreciation of the patriarchs.” ¶ The LDS footnotes explain: “Such forefathers as Abraham and Jacob, long dead, were not available to help.” Also see Shalom Paul, who explains that these, our forefathers, are no longer among the living. The only who could help was the Lord, as we see in the next clause. It should be made clear that Abraham was otherwise not ignorant of his posterity. Alexander has: “Its father is not Abraham or Israel, but Jehovah, who is and always has been its redeemer, who has borne that name from everlasting; or as Hitzig understands the last clause, he is our redeemer, whose name is from everlasting. Most interpreters ... are agreed in understanding this specific name of our redeemer to be here described as everlasting or eternal.” ¶ Thou, O LORD, [art] our father, our redeemer; thy name [is] from everlasting. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou art the Lord (the Royal Polyglot adds אֱלֹהֵינוּ, ‘our God’), Thy mercies towards us are many, like a father’s towards his children, O, our Redeemer; Thy name is from everlasting.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Do thou, Lord, our father, do thou deliver us. From the beginning thy name is upon us.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “Thou, O Lord, art our Father] (comp. ISAIAH 64:8; and see also Deuteronomy 32:6 and Jeremiah 3:4).” The Savior is not only our Redeemer and Deliverer in the expiatory sense, but also on physical basis, as Cheyne well points out: “The history of Israel presented a continual succession of ‘captivities’ and deliverances.” ¶ Abinadi taught of Christ: “I would that ye should understand that God himself shall come down among the children of men, and shall redeem his people. And because he dwelleth in flesh he shall be called the Son of God, and having subjected the flesh to the will of the Father, being the Father and the Son—The Father, because he was conceived by the power of God; and the Son, because of the flesh; thus becoming the Father and Son—And they are one God, yea, the very Eternal Father of heaven and of earth. And thus the flesh becoming subject to the Spirit, or the Son to the Father, being one God, suffereth temptation, and yieldeth not to the temptation ...” (Mosiah 15:1b – 5a). ¶ President Joseph F. Smith explains, “... in the old Jewish scripture God is more particularly called the ‘Father of his people, Israel’ (Deut. 14:1; ISAIAH 63:16). But in the teachings of Christ there is a fuller embodiment of revelation in the word Father, and the application which he makes of the Fatherhood of God invests his life with supreme tenderness and beauty. As an example: In the old scripture, we are told, ‘Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him’ (Psalm 103:13); but by the interpretation of Jesus, the love of God as Father extends beyond these limitations even to those who are unthankful and evil: ‘But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust’ (Matthew 5:45). ‘But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest; for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil’ (Luke 6:35).”³⁹

³⁸ Gesenius shows that ⲕⲏⲙⲓⲙ is translated both as bowels as well as mercies. In fact, even when translated as bowels, it is often in the context of feelings of tenderness (e.g., Genesis 43:30). As Gesenius shows, an example of the idea of mercy is given in Psalm 25:6, “וְחַסְדֶּיךָ ... ⲕⲏⲙⲓⲙ,” tender mercies and lovingkindnesses. Also see Proverbs 12:10; Amos 1:11; and Psalm 40:12.

17 O LORD, why hast thou suffered ~~made~~ us to err from thy ways, [and] to hardened our heart from thy fear? Return for thy servants' sake, the tribes of thine inheritance.

O LORD, why hast thou suffered us to err from thy ways, and to harden our heart from thy fear? The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Why hast thou cast us off, O Lord, that we should go astray from the paths which are right in Thy sight, as the nations which have not part in the instruction of the Thy law?” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Why, O Lord hast thou suffered us to wander from thy way, and our hearts to be hardened so as not to fear thee?” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Why hast thou made us to err, O Lord, from thy ways: why hast thou hardened our heart, that we should not fear thee?” ¶ Rawlinson observes: “The reproach borders on irreverence, but is kept within the limits of piety by the affection and trust that underlie it.” Jenour has: “The expressions in this verse would seem to imply that God had caused these supplicant Jews to wander from his ways; and that he had, by a positive act of his power, hardened their hearts. But can this be? Certainly not. In imputing their wanderings and hardness of heart to Jehovah, they do not, they cannot mean, that he had actually caused them to sin; but the ground of their complaint is that he had permitted them to do so: and this expostulation therefore implies a full conviction on their part, of their disposition to wander, and of the hardness of their hearts; because it intimates that the allowing them to wander was equivalent to causing them do to so; and the not softening their hearts was the same as hardening them.” We sometimes hear people say, “God made me this way.” See also Romans 9:20: “Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?” (Romans 9:20, see notes on ISAIAH 64:8). Throughout the Holy Scriptures we have examples (see especially Moses and his interaction with Pharaoh) of how the JST corrects the notion that God would harden people’s hearts. Rather, we harden our own hearts. So the JST {and the LXX (Ⓛ)} has suffered which means permitted or allowed (see Judges 15:1; Ecclesiastes 5:6; Matthew 3:15; Mark 10:14; 1 Corinthians 10:13). As in the last of these scriptures parenthetically listed, the Lord is careful that we will not even be tempted beyond that which we can endure: “There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it” (1 Corinthians 10:13). The accusation, then, seems to ask why the Lord has permitted Israel to stray. The answer, of course, is moral agency.⁴⁰ ¶ Rosenmüller, in Alexander, agrees with the JST in suggesting that the proper word is suffer (i.e., permit) rather than made, “Rosenmüller shews, by a reference to Deuteronomy 2:28, and 1 Samuel 14:36, that the Hiphil often signifies permission rather than direct causation [and “this usage is indisputable” says Alexander, meaning] ... to suffer to grow hard” (emphasis added). So also Lowth.⁴¹ Also Matthew Watson who translates it: “O Lord, why hast thou suffered us to err from thy ways and permitted our hearts to become insensible of thy fear”⁴²(emphasis

⁴⁰ President David O. McKay taught: “Next to the bestowal of life itself, the right to direct that life is God’s greatest gift to man” (Conference Report, April 1950, 32).

⁴¹ The Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha, Volume III, p. 581, Book of Isaiah by William Lowth. Pitman (Editor). London, 1822.

⁴² Matthew Watson in A New and Complete Explanation of the Common Prayer Book, Containing a most copious, full and complete explanation of every part of the morning and evening prayers, as added). Watson clarifies, with the words suffered and permitted, that the Lord only provided the moral agency to man. In ISAIAH 63:17, the word suffered (a synonym for permitted) modifies both the err from thy ways and the hardened our heart clauses in the JST. Also George R. Noyes⁴³, “Why, O Jehovah, dost thou suffer us to wander from thy ways, And harden our hearts against thy fear?” (emphasis added). Of the Gentile authors, Barnes well says: “No man who has any just views of God can suppose that he exerts a positive agency to make them sin, and then punishes them for it.” ¶ Return for thy servants’ sake, the tribes of thine inheritance. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Our heart is not turned away from Thy fear: return Thy Shekinah unto Thy people, for the sake of Thy righteous servants, unto whom Thou whom Thou hast sworn by Thy Word to make the tribes amongst them Thine inheritance.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Return for the sake of thy servants—for the sake of the tribes of thy heritage.” ¶ This seems to be a request to God to bring back the lost tribes of Israel as well as the promised remnant of Judah. Alexander has, in part, “The tribes of thine inheritance is an equivalent expression to thy people; which originated in the fact that Israel, like other ancient oriental races, was divided into tribes.” ¶ The Savior, as we have quoted earlier, speaks of the return of the ten tribes in D&C 133:25–34. The expression there and his fellows reminds us of Ezekiel 37:19 “...the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows” (ⲁⲃⲓⲣⲓ, Ezekiel 37:19b) to include all of the ten tribes. But Judah (and her fellows, i.e., the southern tribes) is not left out: “And they also of the tribe of Judah, after their pain, shall be sanctified in holiness before the Lord, to dwell in his presence day and night, forever and ever” (D&C 133:35, emphasis added).

³⁹ Smith, Joseph F. Gospel Doctrine. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1939, p. 29.

18 The people of thy holiness have possessed [it] but a little while: our adversaries have trodden down thy sanctuary.

The people of thy holiness have possessed [it] but a little while: The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “That we may inherit a little of thy holy mountain.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has, “They have possessed thy holy people as nothing.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “The people of thy holiness” or, thy holy people [ⲉⲙⲉⲧⲁⲣⲓ]. ... The general meaning is... ‘Israel, God’s people, has held Palestine but for a little appointed by the Church of England – 1795. Page 84, the exegesis on ISAIAH 63 begins on page 83, bottom part of the page, Explanatory Notes and Commentaries.

⁴³ George R. Noyes, A New Translation of the Hebrew Prophets, 5th Edition, Volume I, 1880, American Unitarian Association. Noyes was a professor at Harvard.

while’—a few centuries—and now the heathen have been allowed to make themselves masters of it (comp. Ezra 10:8).” Following the reading in the LXX (Ⲅ)—where we have ⲁⲃⲓ instead of ⲉⲙ—Lowth has: “Not only our enemies have taken possession of Mount Sion, and trodden down thy sanctuary; even far worse than this has befallen us: Thou hast long since utterly cast us off; and dost not consider us as thy peculiar people.” Cheyne compares this to ISAIAH 57:13, ⲁⲃⲓⲣⲓ, My holy mountain. Wordsworth, who wrote in 1871, says: “Our Lord explains these words when He says, ‘Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled’ (Luke 21:24). Jerusalem has now been trodden down of her adversaries for 1800 years. How short a time did the holy people possess it in peace, in comparison with the time of desolation! ... As S. Jerome observes here; All that is said in this passage is to be referred to the time of the desolation of Jerusalem after its capture by the Roman armies, which is described by Josephus in his History of the Wars of the Jews.” ¶ Our adversaries have trodden down thy sanctuary. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “We are become as at the beginning.” Instead of adversaries, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has oppressors. The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has, “Our enemies have trodden down thy sanctuary.” Could these reflect the feelings of pain of present-day Jewry for the loss of the 2nd Temple?⁴⁴

19 We are [thine]: thou never barest rule over them; they were not called by thy name. ✓

✓ thy name was not called upon them

We are [thine]: thou never barest rule over them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “We are Thy people that were of old: not unto the Gentiles hast thou given the doctrine of Thy law.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When thou didst not rule over us.” For the first clause, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “We are thine from of old.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲧ) has, “We are become as in the beginning, when thou didst not rule over us.” ¶ Rawlinson warns: “We are thine] There is no ‘thine’ in the original, and so important a word cannot possibly be supplied from without.” Leeser translates, “We are become as though we are those over whom thou hast never ruled, over whom thy name hath not been called.” Returning to Rawlinson: “Translate, We are as those over whom thou hast not ruled from of old, as those upon whom thy Name has not been called; i.e. we have lost all our privileges—we have become in God’s sight no better than the heathen—he has forgotten that we were ever his people.” Alexander, in part, has, “Most of the modern writers have adopted a construction of the first clause suggested by the paraphrastic versions of the Septuagint and Vulgate. This supposes the description of the people’s alienation from God to be continued: We have long been those (or like those) over whom thou didst not rule, and who were not called by thy name; that is to say, thou hast long regarded and treated us as aliens rather than thy chosen people.” Barnes says: “The idea is, that it is an argument why God should interpose in their behalf, that they had been for a long time his people, but that his foes, who then had possession of the land, had never submitted to his laws.” ¶ They were not called by thy name. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “Neither is Thy name invoked upon them.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And when we were not called by thy name.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And when we were not called by thy name.” ¶ Wordsworth has: “We are—thy name] Rather, We are become like those over whom Thou hast not ruled from everlasting, and over whom Thy Name has not been called. See Septuagint. We Thy People are treated as if we were aliens, and aliens are treated as if they were Thy people.”

⁴⁴ Eldin Ricks, “Judah Must Return.” May 1972 Ensign; David B. Galbraith, “Orson Hyde’s 1841 Mission to the Holy Land.” October 1991 Ensign.

FIRST POSTED: 31 January 2017

Isaiah 64

If the Masoretic text (מ) is not corrupted in this respect, Isaiah prays to the LORD.¹ How do we reconcile the fact that today we pray to the Father when prayers seem to have been addressed to Yahweh in the Old Testament? Although we cannot rule out textual corruption, it has been suggested² that with the Fall mankind was separated from the Father—as part of the spiritual death. Under LDS Gospel Topics we learn: “Spiritual death is separation from God. The scriptures teach of two sources of spiritual death. The first source is the Fall, and the second is our own disobedience. Spiritual death can be overcome through the Atonement of Jesus Christ and by obedience to His gospel.”³ We were not left alone, but were given access to pray to the mediator of the New Covenant, even Jesus Christ, the LORD—or Yahweh of the Old Covenant. Christ, through the atonement, opened the way for us to be reconciled again with the Father. In John we read of what seems to be a transition, wherein Christ is teaching His disciples that they will be able, “at that day,” probably speaking of a time after His atonement, to pray directly to the Father as long as they pray in the name of Christ: “At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you” (John 16:26). ¶ I was speaking to some missionaries, sharing with them some principles wherein they can help their investigators learn how to discern the way God will answer their prayers regarding the Book of Mormon, based on Moroni 10:3-6. I asked them to imagine how someone would be received back in their homes if they said, “Hi, are you Elder or Sister such-and-such parents? I met him or her in Chile and wanted to tell you how wonderful it was to see them.” Do you not suppose, I suggested, that the parents would quickly welcome you into their home and want to know all about how their son or daughter is doing in the mission field? Back in the day when parents did not have e-mails I often would call missionaries parents to let them know how wonderfully their son or daughter was doing on their mission. This almost always caused great rejoicing. As we pray the Father in the name of His beloved Son, it is similar to the analogy I have offered. We are importuning the Father and we approach Him as having been sent by His beloved Son to do so. Every time we pray to the Father, in the name of Christ, we are bearing witness to this great expiatory gift. We are also following the commandment of the Savior who repeatedly taught us to pray to the Father in His name: “... that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you” (John 15:16b, also see John 16:23; Matthew 6:6; Ephesians 5:20). I do not know that we fully realize how wonderful a privilege it is to pray to the Father in the name of His Son. ¶ Rawlinson suggests: “Not content with praying God to look upon them once more with favour (ISAIAH 63:15), Israel now asks for a theophany, or manifestation of the Divine Presence, such as they have experienced in the times of old.” Mankind would experience a number of theophanies, including the birth of Christ—Emmanuel. In the latter days, the Father and the Son would appear to the boy prophet, Joseph Smith. But my sense is that this prayer most especially looks on to the end-of days, a prayerful pleading for the Lord’s Second Coming at the time when Jerusalem will be surrounded by her enemies in an epic battle. Then will Christ appear and stand upon the Mount of Olives, which will rend in two. ¶ Regarding the text itself, Cheyne writes: “In the modern editions of the Hebrew Bible, the verse which, in the printed editions of the ancient as well as in the modern versions, stands as ISAIAH 64:1, forms the second half of ISAIAH 63:19. Birks says: “The Masoretic pointing joins the first verse of this chapter to the verses before. But the other division (LXX, Syriac, Vulgate, AV, Gesenius, Ewald, Maurer, Henderson) is plainly required by the construction of the verses that follow, and also by the change from deep confession to earnest and intense prayer. Still the two passages, as a whole, are very closely linked together.” In our English Bibles, then, ISAIAH 64:2 corresponds with the Hebrew ISAIAH 64:1; the English ISAIAH 64:3 to the Hebrew ISAIAH 64:2, and so on.

¹ See for instance, All the Prayers of the Bible by Herbert Lockyer (Publisher: Zondervan Pub. House, 1970), and compare against the Hebrew text (מ) or the DSS (Q).

² For example, see “An Essay on Closet Prayer,” The Primitive Methodist Magazine, “We have no right to pray to the Father, but for the work Christ has wrought in our behalf” (p. 267, p. 1072 of 1583 in PDF), 1864.

³ LDS.org, accessed 13 February 2017, URL <https://www.lds.org/topics/death-spiritual?lang=eng&old=true>

vv. 1–5. Some elements of the prayer we find here in Isaiah remind us of Joseph Smith’s prayer: “O GOD, where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place? How long shall thy hand be stayed, and thine eye, yea thy pure eye, behold from the eternal heavens the wrongs of thy people and of thy servants, and thine ear be penetrated with their cries? Yea, O Lord, how long shall they suffer these wrongs and unlawful oppressions, before thine heart shall be softened toward them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion toward them? O Lord God Almighty, maker of heaven, earth, and seas, and of all things that in them are, and who controlllest and subjectest the devil, and the dark and benighted dominion of Sheol—stretch forth thy hand; let thine eye pierce; let thy pavilion be taken up; let thy hiding place no longer be covered; let thine ear be inclined; let thine heart be softened, and thy bowels moved with compassion toward us. Let thine anger be kindled against our enemies; and, in the fury of thine heart, with thy sword avenge us of our wrongs. Remember thy suffering saints, O our God; and thy servants will rejoice in thy name forever” (D&C 121:1–6). Both Isaiah and Joseph Smith enjoyed of the Lord’s presence but they wished that presence to be made manifest to the whole world.

1 ¶ OH that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence,

OH that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down [תִּרְדָּהּ]. The Targum (T)¹ has, “Not unto them hast Thou inclined the heavens and revealed Thyself.” The LXX (G) reads, “If thou wilt open the heaven.” To rend the heavens means to part the veil in some fashion. ¶ Calvin says: “God is said to ‘rend the heavens,’ when he unexpectedly gives some uncommon and striking proof of his power.” Skinner has: “that thou wouldest rend] Lit. ‘hadst rent.’ So ‘hadst come down,’ ‘had quaked.’ This use of the perf in the expression of a real wish, whose realisation is contemplated, is unusual, and is only to be explained by the urgency of the speaker’s feeling (Driver, Tenses, § 140).” ¶ In the Doctrine and Covenants we have: “I have sent forth mine angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel, who hath appeared unto some and hath committed it unto man, who shall appear unto many that dwell on the earth. And this gospel shall be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people. And the servants of God shall go forth, saying with a loud voice: Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; And worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters—Calling upon the name of the Lord day and night, saying: O that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence. And it shall be answered upon their heads; for the presence of the Lord shall be as the melting fire that burneth, and as the fire which causeth the waters to boil ... Yea, when thou comest down, and the mountains flow down at thy presence, thou shalt meet him who rejoiceth and worketh righteousness, who remembereth thee in thy ways” (D&C 133:36b–41, 44). These seem to be prayerful, prophetic requests for the Second Coming of Christ—both given by revelation very much the way temple dedications are given. ¶ That the mountains might flow² down at thy presence. The Targum (T) has, “The mountains quaked before Thee.” The LXX (G) reads, “At thy presence terror will seize the mountains.” Instead of flow, the Peshitta (S) has flee. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “The mountains would melt away at thy presence.” ¶ When the Lord comes again, the earth will burn. Jenour and some others have suggested this is an allusion to Mount Sinai, “The purport of the prayer is, that Jehovah would manifest himself to the enemies of his people Israel as he had formerly done on that occasion, when the mountain burned with fire, ‘And so terrible was the sight, that even Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake’ (Hebrews 12:21).” Rawlinson, as do several exegetes, see powerful earthquakes: “That the mountains might flow down] or, quake. When God descended on Sinai, ‘the whole mount quaked greatly’ (Exodus 19:18). When he appeared to David, ‘the earth shook and trembled; the foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken’ (Psalm 18:7). When he was seen of Elijah, ‘a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; and after the wind was an earthquake’ (1 Kings 19:11). Micah saw the Lord ‘coming forth out of his place,’ and ‘the mountains were molten under him, and the valleys cleft’ (Micah 1:3, 4). The mountains

¹ Pauli includes the Targum (T) from this verse from the last verse ISAIAH 63.

² President John Taylor speaks about another flowing down, one related to the return of the lost Ten Tribes: “Now, then, all of these dispensations had to be restored. Then comes Moses. Why? Because he held the keys of the gathering dispensation. And he conferred upon Joseph Smith the power to gather Israel from the four quarters of the earth, and also the ten tribes. But the latter have not come yet; but people are hunting them up, and they will be found by and by; when the time comes, and the mountains will flow down at their presence, and a highway will be cast up, and they will come to a knowledge of the people. But they could not come without the restoration of the keys I have referred to” (President John Taylor, “The Great Principles of Truth.” Ogdan Tabernacle, 21 March 1880. JD 25:253a).

represent that which is most firm and solid and strong upon the face of the earth. If even they ‘melt and flow and tremble’ at the presence of God, what might must his be! And who may abide him?” These thoughts remind us of the earthquakes in the American continent after the death of our Savior. This flowing down, seems to be a combination of both earthquakes; and as we see in ISAIAH 64:2, of consuming fire. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt shared: “Prior to [the Second coming] there will be numerous destructions, by way of earthquakes, plagues, hailstorms, wars, etc., that will prevail and that will sweep away millions from the face of our globe ... When he burns up the wicked, when he causes the elements to melt with fervent heat, when he causes the mountains to flow down and melt like wax before his presence ... yet the Lord could reorganize these elements, so scattered in space, by his power, bringing them together again by his law and by his word, making a new world, and creating a new heaven, and a new earth ... there will be an entire change in the condition of the earth, and also in the condition of the human family, the curses of the fall will not be found in either, and consequently there will be no more mortality upon the new creation, neither sorrow, nor weeping; neither will there be any more death; for the former things will have passed away, and all things will become new.”³ At another time Elder Orson Pratt observed: “When the Lord shall again convulse this continent, as he assuredly will do, throwing down the mountains and raising up the valleys, at the time of his second coming, for then, says the prophet Isaiah, the mountains shall flow down at his presence. Then, says the prophet David, the hills and the mountains shall melt like wax before the presence of the Lord. I say when this great and terrible convulsion shall come we may find cities rising, as it were, from the bowels of the earth, disgorged and brought to the surface. It need not surprise the inhabitants who then live to see cities brought up from the depths of the lakes and from the depths of great waters; to see mountains removed from their places and uncovering ancient cities that have been covered up for generations.”⁴

2 As [when] the melting fire[✓] burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name known to thine adversaries, [that] the nations may tremble at thy presence!

✓ the fire of meltings

As [when] the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “When Thou didst send forth thine anger like fire in the day of Elijah, the sea was melted, the waters were flames of fire,” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And they will melt as wax melteth before fire; and a fire will burn up the adversaries.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “That they might melt as wax melts before the fire, and that fire might devour (or burn, BPE) thy enemies.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “They would melt as at the burning of fire, the waters would burn with fire.” ¶ Birks has: “The word rendered ‘melting’ AV [הַמִּסִּים], occurs here only, and is now commonly held to mean dry twigs or brushwood. The rendering above, though not quite literal, retains the emphatic mention of fire first and last in the double clause. One figure is of swift, rapid, noisy consumption by the flames; the other of violent agitation and tumult, like water that boils over a glowing fire. The former has occurred before, ISAIAH 27:11. The nations, with all their might, will be agitated, dismayed, confounded, when the mighty King of nations reveals His presence.” Similarly, Cowles would translate: “As fire burns brush-wood—as fire will make waters boil.” Leiser has: “As fire is kindled on brushwood, as water is made to bubble up by fire.” The idea of brushwood, brush, twigs or stubble is utilized by most English translators (see e.g., AMP, ASV, BBE, CJB, Darby, ERV, ESV, GW, HCSB, ISV, JPS, LEB, LITV, MKJV, NASB, Rotherham, RV, TS2009, WEB, WEBA, YLT). Lowth prefers the Vulgate (Ⲯ): “the dry fuel” הַמִּסִּים. “It means dry stubble, and the root is הַמִּסִּים,⁵” says Rabbi Jonah, apud Sal. ben Melech in loc. Which is approved by Schultens, Orig. Hebr. p. 30 ... [but] The LXX and Syriac agree exactly together in rendering this line by, ‘As the wax melted before the fire,’ which can by no means be reconciled with the present text. Vulgate for הַמִּסִּים reads מִסִּי.⁶” Alexander, still leaning on the

⁵ Gesenius explains it: “הַמִּסִּים, an unused root, i.q. همس, همش, which are used of a gentle noise of various kinds (comp. הַמִּל, הַמִּל, הַמִּל, as of persons walking, of small branches and twigs mixed together and breaking one another (Knicken des Reisholzes); compare transp. to break any thing dry, as brushwood, هشم brushwood. Hence—הַמִּסִּים m. pl. ISAIAH 64:1 [64:2 in AV], brushwood. Saadiah has well retained the همس. See Schult. in Orig. i. p. 68, 69.”

⁶ Gesenius has the root מִסִּי: “TO MELT, TO FLOW DOWN, TO WASTE AWAY. In Kal once found, used of a sick person wasting away, ISAIAH 10:18. (Kindred roots are מִסִּי, מִסִּי No. II; see also מִסִּי to dissolve, to macerate in water, and the words given under מִי.)

NIPHAL מִסִּי, in pause מִסִּי, fut. מִסִּי, inf. 1) —(הַמִּסִּים) to be melted, used of the manna, Ex. 16:21; of wax, Psalm 68:3; by hyperbole of mountains melting with blood, ISAIAH 34:3.—Judges 15:14, ‘his bands melted [הַמִּסִּים] from off his hands,’ i.e. fell from his hands as if loosed. Used of cattle when sick, 1 Samuel 15:9.” Judges 15:14, in

³ Elder Orson Pratt, “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 23 June 1878. JD 20:11b-14 and also see JD 20:11a and JD 15:55a (Second Coming of Christ).

⁴ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Day of God’s Power,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 11 February 1872. JD 14:328b.

Masoretic text (מ) suggests: “The ancient versions and several of the Rabbins derive it from מִסַּח, to melt, but in violation of etymological analogy [while] Rabbi Jonah ... pronounces it to mean dry stubble (קֶסֶם בָּבֶל), and the definition has been since completed by the Arabic analogy.” Ibn Ezra explains, regarding ISAIAH 34:3 “וְנִמְסָה And shall be melted. Niphal of נִמַּס ‘to melt.’” ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg explains that this verse is similar to Exodus, one of the plagues of Egypt: “And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt. So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation” (Exodus 9:23–24). Alternately, Rosenberg leaning on Rashi, suggests that it refers to the struggle between Elijah and the Priest of Baal, “Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench” (1 Kings 18:38). According to Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, “As a melting fire burned, a fire that bubbled water. This refers to the fire burning on Mt. Sinai at the time of the Revelation⁷.” In Exodus 19:18 we note: “And mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly.” Oswalt has: “Throughout the Bible, from Genesis 3:24 through Exodus 3:1 and Acts 2:3 to Revelation 20:9, fire is intimately associated with the presence of the holy God. In no book is that more true than this one (ISAIAH 4:5; 6:6; 9:4 [Eng. 5]; 10:16; 29:6; 30:27, 30; 31:9; 33:12, 14; 66:15, 16, 24).” All of these things, of course, are only types of the burning that would take place during the Second Coming. ¶ To make thy name known to thine adversaries, [that] the nations may tremble at thy presence! The Targum (ܬ) has, “To make Thy name known to the enemies of Thy people, that the nations may tremble at Thy presence.” The LXX (6) reads, “And thy name will be manifest to the adversaries—At thy presence the nations will be troubled.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has enemies for adversaries. ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg points us to Exodus 9:16 as an example: “And in very deed for this cause have I raised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.” Skinner, along with almost every commentator, suggests that the requested theophany was for the purpose of making the Lord’s name known to His adversaries. So also in Joseph Smith’s prayer above, D&C 121:1–6. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt spoke of the prayers that would be uttered by the Brethren: “We are told ... by the Prophet Isaiah, how that the servants of God in those notable days should call upon the name of the Lord, saying, ‘Oh that thou wouldst rend the heavens, that thou wouldst come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence, As when the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name known to thine adversaries, that the nations might tremble at thy presence,’ which prayer shall be answered.”⁸

3 When thou didst terrible things [which] we looked not for, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence.

When thou didst terrible things [which] we looked not for. The Targum (ܬ) has, “When Thou didst wonderful things, which we expected not.” The LXX (6) reads, “When thou executest thy glorious works.” Instead of terrible, the Peshitta (ܫ) has wondrous (Lamsa) / impressive (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “When thou shalt do wonderful things, we shall not bear them.” ¶ Rather than terrible, then, the idea is that of mighty things. Wordsworth has: “When thou didst terrible things] At the Exodus, and at Sinai.” Keith suggests: “The figures of the Lord coming down—of the mountains melting at his approach, are not, however, limited to the events of the last national woes, the text in ISAIAH 64:3 appealing in the same language to what God had already done for Israel in punishing her enemies, as in the destruction of the Egyptian host, and in other miraculous interferences. He is urged to do for her again in reference to her final deliverance what he had done in former ages. There follows a declaration [see margin ¶ ISAIAH 64:4] that there is no God who doeth such things for those who seek him as the true God.” These *marvelous*⁹ things are those alluded to in ISAIAH 64:2. Skinner says: “while thou doest terrible things which we hoped not for] i.e. surpassing all our expectations ... terrible things] A standing phrase, as Cheyne remarks, for the marvels of the Exodus, the type of the great final deliverance (cf. Deuteronomy 10:21; 2 Samuel 7:23; Psalm 106:22).” These also point to the deliverance that will take place as the Savior stands on the Mount of Olives and creates a safe shelter for the remaining inhabitants of Jerusalem to run away from the enemies surrounding that Holy City. So also

AV, “and his bands loosed [ܐܦܬܐܪܐ] from off his hands” (Judges 15:14b). Leeser more literally has: “and his bands melted [ܐܦܬܐܪܐ] from off his hands.”

⁷ Refers to Moses experience with the Lord on top of Mount Sinai.

⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, “Changes in the Configuration of the Globe.” Twentieth Ward Meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, 3 December 1876. JD 18:315. See D&C 133:36b–41, 44, quoted above.

⁹ Shalom Paul also uses the word marvelous for terrible. Dr. Paul utilizes such words as awesome, marvelous, awesome.

Ironside, who says: “God has said in the book of Zechariah, ‘I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle’ (Zechariah 14:2). The remnant see that ominous gathering and cry, ‘O God, wilt Thou not intervene? Wilt Thou not rend the heavens and come down? Wilt Thou not deal with these nations Thyself and give the deliverance for which our hearts crave?’” ¶ Thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou didst reveal Thyself; the mountains trembled at Thy presence.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because of thee terror will seize the mountains.” Instead of flowed, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has fled. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “Thou didst come down, and at thy presence the mountains melted away.”

¶ Cowles explains: “The verb, ‘come down’ [יָרַד], is not only the same verb but the same form of it as in ISAIAH 64:1, and therefore should come under the force of the optative particle, which would make it a prayer.” As Rashi and Rabenu Tam explain (in Rabbi Rosenberg), as related to Mount Sinai, where the Lord came down to speak with Moses, see Judges 5:5, where we have: “The mountains melted from before the LORD, even that Sinai from before the LORD God of Israel.” Keith has: “In agreement with the whole context, their hopes and prayers for future deliverance are based on their memories of the past, ISAIAH 63:7, 9, 11. The allusion here is to the giving of the Law on Sinai, and completes those already made to the passing of the Red Sea, and the journey through the wilderness.” Dunash, in Rabbi Rosenberg, relates it more specifically to the plagues in Egypt. Shalom Paul observes: “The term מִפְּנֵי¹⁰ occurs here for the third time and serves as the introduction to the threefold refrain: ISAIAH 63:19: “And mountains quaked before You”; 64:1: “So that nations will tremble before You”; 64:2: “And mountains quaked before You.” ¶ Apostle Moses Thatcher beautifully testified: “God dwells in eternal fire, and no human being who has not been baptized in water and Spirit can abide that which will come, when the earth is immersed in flames, mountains melt with fervent heat and run down like wax.”¹¹

4 For since the beginning of the world [men] have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, [what] he hath prepared for him[✓] that waiteth for him.

✓ or, seen a God beside thee, which doeth so for him, &c.

For since the beginning of the world [men] have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And since the world was, ear hath not heard the report of such mighty deeds, nor hearkened to the speech of rapture, nor hath eye seen, what Thy people saw, the Shekinah of Thy glory, O Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Never have we heard, nor have our eyes seen.” ¶ I would render this Scripture in Spanish as follows: “Ya que desde el principio del mundo los hombres no han oído, ni percibido en sus oídos, ni los ojos han visto, oh Dios, además de ti, lo que Él ha preparado para los que confían (o esperan) en Ti” (ISAÍAS 64:4). ¶ A number of exegetes focus on the comparison between what the true God can do and that which the no-gods can achieve, as in the margin ¶. Rawlinson suggests: “Neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared” rather, as in the margin ¶, neither hath the eye seen a God, beside thee, which worketh for him that waiteth upon him. The only ‘living God’ who really works for his votaries, and does them good service, is Jehovah.” We also have the testimony of Paul¹² regarding this beautiful verse: “But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him” (1 Corinthians 2:9). Jenour suggests: “The things therefore which their ears had not heard, &c. are the wonderful blessings of the Gospel, which far exceeded what believers of old hoped for, or anything that man could ever have imagined or anticipated. This is the interpretation of the passage given by St. Paul, as cited above.” That these several interpretations are implied is undeniable, but they fail to capture the fuller meaning of this verse: related to the joy in this life as well as in the eternities. Birks, regarding this verse, calls it a “glorious promise.” ¶ As I mentioned in a footnote in ISAIAH 63, my son David Marsing Billikopf passed to the Spirit World yesterday, 6 February 2017, after a battle with cancer. About three years ago, when the Lord gave him a priesthood blessing, where I was mouth—I saw the glorious state which awaited him—not really understanding that he would be moving on to his next mission so soon or precisely what all of this meant. Interestingly, my son fell asleep as soon as I put my hands on his head and I was the only one who heard the blessing on this side of the veil. Now, I believe I understand why this happened. It was another of Heavenly Father’s tender mercies. It was I who needed to hear these words of comfort for a coming day: for today. The thoughts in ISAIAH 64:4 may be entertained by all those who have loved the Lord. The sufferings of the martyrs, and of all those who for Christ's sake have endured difficulties, are now set aside. For truly, "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord GOD will wipe away tears from off all faces" (ISAIAH 25:8a). We also find this scripture in the Doctrine and Covenants—in the context of the Second Coming, "For since the beginning of the world have not men heard nor perceived by the ear, neither hath any eye seen, O God, besides thee, how great things thou hast prepared for him that waiteth for thee" (D&C 133:45). Yet, President Harold B. Lee warns that we not diminish the full force of these blessings—for we do not have to die or only look forward to the eternities to have the Lord wipe away our tears and fill us with joy unspeakable: "Sometimes [1 Corinthians 2:9] has been taken to mean blessings hereafter, and too little thought has been given that those great and wonderful blessings can apply to us here and now. [For there are ...] wonderful experiences and blessings that we here can enjoy that no one, outside of those who do enjoy them, can fully appreciate."¹³ ¶ O God, beside thee, [what] he hath prepared [עָשָׂה root עָשָׂה] for him that waiteth for him. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "For there is none beside Thee, who will do such things for Thy righteous people, who were of old; who hope for Thy salvation." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "A God besides thee; nor works such as thine, which thou wilt do for them who wait for mercy." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has them instead of him. ¶ Birks has: "The waiting on God, in the OT promise, becomes the love of God in the New."

¹⁰ מִפְּנֵי is literally, before your face. Please remember that in the Biblia Hebraica the numbers are one off from the English.

¹¹ Apostle Moses Thatcher, “Baptism of Water and of Fire.” Tabernacle, Logan, 28 August 1885. JD 26:309b. Also see 26:211b.

¹² Kay suggests of Paul’s quotation: “St. Paul refers to this passage as having been verified by the fact that, when ‘the Lord of glory’ came to redeem mankind, ‘none of the princes of this world recognized’ Him (see 1 Corinthians 2:7–8).”

5 Thou meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness, and rejoiceth him [those that] remembereth thee in thy ways; in righteousness there behold, thou art wroth; for we have sinned: in those is continuance, and we such shall be saved.

Thou meetest him that worketh righteousness, and rejoiceth him that remembereth thee in thy ways. The Prophet Joseph Smith, in the Inspired Version, has moved נִחַחְטָא, for/but have sinned, to the next verse.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, "The works of our righteous fathers were acceptable in Thy sight, who rejoiced to do Thy will in truth and in righteousness: in the way of Thy goodness and mercy they remembered Thy fear whenever (literally, 'at all times')." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "For it will meet them who practise righteousness." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it: "Thou meetest with joy him that works righteousness (Lamsa) / justice (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Thou hast met him that rejoiceth, and doth justice: in thy ways they shall remember thee." ¶ Cowles says: "Of this verse there have been an indefinite number of diverse interpretations." Whitehouse calls it a "hopelessly corrupt text." Keith has: "This passage has been very perplexing both to ancient and modern expositors, not from any diversity of readings, but from the difficulty of educating¹⁴ the meaning of the original. Lowth writes: "I am fully persuaded, that these words, as they stand in the present Hebrew text, are utterly unintelligible: there is no doubt of the meaning of each word separately, but put together they make no sense at all." ¶ This is because the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has been so altered. "This is one of those verses," I wrote in my handwritten journal on Isaiah decades ago, "that immediately screams out, 'Look at the JST!'" Gladly, there is a JST to look at. The JST reads, with my observations in brackets: "Thou [God] meetest him [the man] that worketh righteousness, and rejoiceth him [the man who fears the Lord rejoices] that remembereth thee [or, the man who remembers God and His ways is filled with joy] in thy ways; in righteousness [or, righteous living is the key] there is continuance [rather, עוֹלָם, eternity, continuation, permanence, posterity], and such shall be saved [exalted]. Wordsworth interestingly notes: "the contrast is between the error and uncertainty of men's ways, and the truth and stability of God's ways ... since God's ways are everlasting ... They who walk in His ways enjoy continuance (ISAIAH 64:5), but the wicked fade away as a leaf (ISAIAH 64:6)." ¶ Birks says: "Joy in God is one mark of a true faith, a contrast to the impenitence that only frets and murmurs under the hand of God." Cowles has: "Thou meetest with favor him who joyfully does right; i.e., who does righteousness not under compulsion but of his free will, as one who loves it. A further description of this class is that they remember God as to his ways. A case in illustration of this remembrance of God is that of Habakkuk in his third chapter, calling to mind the ancient ways of God so grandly and with such effective moral power upon his own soul." ¶ Jenour has: "In thy ways] i.e., walking in thy ways; or, living according to thy will." ¶ In righteousness there is continuance, and such shall be saved. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Thy wrath from Thy presence was upon us, because we have sinned: on account of the works of our righteous¹⁵ fathers, we have been saved." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And they will remember their ways." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Behold thou art angry, and we have sinned: in them we have been always, and we shall be saved.” ¶ Despite the corruption of the text, Cowles also agrees with my interpretation of the second clause: “Literally the statement is, ‘In those ways there is an eternity’ ... The general strain of thought is richly hopeful. God will surely meet with interposing mercy the faithful few who truly love righteousness, known by their affectionate, trustful remembrance of God’s ways.”

¹⁴ That is, to draw out the meaning, Webster.

¹⁵ This is another of those interesting cases where the Targum (ⲧ) coincides with the Joseph Smith Translation or the Book of Mormon, in that it has the word righteous / righteousness repeated twice. Actually, the Targum (ⲧ) has it thrice.

¹³ Stand Ye In Holy Places: Selected Sermons and Writings of President Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book, 1988, pp. 113-115.

vv. 6–12. Recognition for Israel’s need to repent and turn to the Lord. The people have not been praying. Christ, in His role as spiritual Father, helps mold us. Isaiah, as an intercessor, reminds the Lord that Israel are His people. A lamentation for Zion and for Jerusalem, including the destroyed temple, is heard. A request, once again—similar to that of the first verse—is uttered for the Lord to forgive and to manifest His presence.

6 ¶ But we have sinned; we are all as an unclean [thing], and all our righteousnesses [are] as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away.

But we have sinned; we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags. (Also see ISAIAH 30:22, menstruous cloth). The Targum (ⲓ) has, “But we are all as an unclean thing; all our righteousnesses are as an abominable garment.” The LXX (ⲛ) reads, “Behold thou wast angry when we sinned; because of this we wandered and became all of us as unclean, and all our righteousness was like a polluted rag.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲕ) has, “And we are all become as one unclean, and all our justices as the rag of a menstruous woman,” Vulgate (ⲕ), pannus menstruatae, o paño de menstruosa (ⲕ traducida al español).¹⁶ ¶ So also Horsley, “As filthy rags] properly, a menstruous rag.” Alternately, Horsley suggests it refers to the “rag of testimonies”¹⁷ wherein the tokens of a woman’s virginity were collected on the wedding night. Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, “since a woman in confinement¹⁸ soils her clothes.” In Hebrew we have נִדָּה associated with ritual uncleanness or impurity, associated with the menstrual discharge of blood (Gesenius). This was the state between the menstrual discharge and the ritual bath or מִקְוֵה. A similar word, נִדָּה, a requirement of persons who were ritually impure remove themselves from the immediate association of others (see Cyclopædia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature (7:82). Both men and women were prohibited from entering the temple when in a state of uncleanness. ¶ No doubt the unrighteous are here contrasted with the upright. We know this because of the context of this verse along with ISAIAH 64:7. But I cannot help but also think that this verse may well be a warning against self-righteousness (that is the topic of much of ISAIAH 65). I prefer, then, that we liken ISAIAH 64:6 to ourselves. Also see ISAIAH 40:6–7. Despite our efforts toward righteousness just mentioned (ISAIAH 64:5), this verse reminds us that “... all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God” (Romans 3:23b) and all need to be redeemed and partake of the saving ordinances of the Gospel, and above all, the expiatory sacrifice of the Lamb. These sentiments are parallel to those we find in King Benjamin’s address: “I say unto you, my brethren, that if you should render all the thanks and praise which your whole soul has power to possess, to that God who has created you, and has kept and preserved you, and has caused that ye should rejoice, and has granted that ye should live in peace one with another—I say unto you that if ye should serve him who has created you from the beginning, and is preserving you from day to day, by lending you breath, that ye may live and move and do according to your own will, and even supporting you from one moment to another—I say, if ye should serve him with all your whole souls yet ye would be unprofitable servants” (Mosiah 2:20–21). Jenour suggests: “These words are only an enlargement upon the confession made in the preceding verse. The pious penitents acknowledge, in the name of their nation, that, like a leprous person, they were unclean, and unfit consequently to appear amongst the number of his chosen people. As a leper, on account of his uncleanness was excluded from the congregation of Israel, and from the worship of the Temple. They acknowledge further, that, being unclean themselves, their works also, even the best of them, are defiled with a mixture of sin, and as incapable of hiding the deformity of their souls and rendering them fit to appear in the presence of God, as filthy rags are of covering and adorning the body. Can language express the insufficiency of our works to justify us in the sight of the most high God? For let it be observed that the speakers in this instance are supposed to be the pious, not the reprobate part of the nation;¹⁹ so that the

¹⁶ La Biblia, o el Antiguo y Nuevo Testamento traducidos al español de la Vulgata Latina por el Rmo. P. Phelipe Scio de S. Miguel, Obispo de Segovia. Impreso en Londres en 1855.

¹⁷ See Deuteronomy 22:14–19, the tokens of virginity.

¹⁸ This is an allusion to the menstrual period. See for instance Genesis 31:35.

¹⁹ This is certainly the case if we attach ISAIAH 64:6 to the previous verses, but in the next verse we have a people who will not even pray. What is most likely, however, is that these are abrupt changes in direction, wherein the prophet considers the more righteous portion, then man’s weaknesses and then the nation as a whole.

acknowledgment they make of their guilt and pollution may be considered as of general application.” The words of ISAIAH 64:6 are given to put whatever righteousness man may have (ISAIAH 64:5) in context. This does not mean that we do not work towards righteousness and good. Our works are vital for they are a reflection that we have been truly converted. Even so, we are ever dependent on the Savior, “For we labor diligently to write, to persuade our children, and also our brethren, to believe in Christ, and to be reconciled to God; for we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do” (2 Nephi 25:23, also see notes in ISAIAH 33:6). ¶ I love what Jenour has to say: “I beg any fellow-believer who reads these lines to note this mark of the Spirit of God in the last hours of any dispensation: the speaker is ever saying, ‘Every one of us.’ No Pharisee is this petitioner, thanking God that he is not as other men. He identifies himself with all the rest, confesses his own full share in all that has brought dishonor on the Name. It is by this humble confession, amid a mass of boasting, that the true Israel was, is, and ever shall be manifested. Surely we have, ‘every one of us,’ to use the words of our prophet, a part in that responsible witness, and so we will not say ‘they,’ but ‘we have sinned,’ and thus confess to our place and part in the present Witness upon earth, a Witness that has failed as much beyond all who have gone before as its privileges have exceeded. But our boast and hope shall be in One sitting at the right hand of the Majesty on high, with whom failure is unknown, and with whom interest and love for His redeemed never chills nor varies!” ¶ And we all do fade [נִבֵּל] as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away. This reminds us of ISAIAH 40: “The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth [נִבֵּל]: because the spirit of the LORD bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass” (ISAIAH 40:6–7, emphasis added, also see ISAIAH 40:8, נִבֵּל צִיץ). The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And we all do fade as the fading of a leaf; and because of our sins, we are taken away as by the wind.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And for our iniquities we have fallen like leaves; so that the wind will sweep us away.” Keith says: “The Jews [better, Judah and Israel—GB] have been tossed about and scattered over the earth like the faded leaves before the winds of autumn,²⁰ and here they are represented as confessing [their fault].” Cowles likewise has: “As the leaves of a tree ... wither, fall off, and are carried about by the wind; so the Jewish people, being deprived of the protection of Jehovah and the consolation of his spirit, complain of having lost all their strength and glory, being scattered, and driven about from country to country, like withered leaves, the derision of their enemies.” Oswalt notes a similar sentiment in Psalms, where the chaff is driven away by the wind rather than a leaf: “Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the LORD; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. The ungodly are not so: but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the LORD knoweth the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish” (Psalm 1:1-6).

7 And [there is] none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee: for thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast consumed[✓] us, because^{✓✓} of our iniquities.

✓ melted

✓ ✓ by the hand

And [there is] none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And there is none that prayeth in Thy name willing to lay hold on Thy fear.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “There is indeed none who invoceth thy name, or who remembered to lay hold on thee.” Instead of stirreth up, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) has remembers. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the second clause, “That riseth up, and taketh hold of thee.” ¶ Birks notes: “The figure is the same as ISAIAH 27:5, where Israel are exhorted to lay hold on the strength of their God.” Cowles well observes: “The most fatal fact in their condition was that no men of prayerful interceding spirit remained. There was no one who roused himself up to take strong hold upon God in prayer. Nothing can so surely presage the ruin of a nation as this prayerlessness...” Jenour has: “Although reduced to a state of the greatest distress and misery, they none of them think of turning to the only quarter from which they can obtain help, or of awaking from their stupefaction and folly to seek strength from Jehovah.” One of the most beautiful things about the USA for me, when I lived there, was that prayers were often offered to God. This was in striking contrast to my own country. And one of the saddest was to see the decline in such public prayers over the years. One of our local Farm Bureaus stopped offering prayers at the beginning of their meetings. I was devastated. I do not know if they realized the great, great privilege of offering prayers in the Land of Liberty. Rawlinson suggests: “This expresses more than mere prayer; it is earnest, intense, ‘effectual fervent’ prayer.” I have come to love this word, effectual. It is used in Doctrine and Covenants: “Behold, and lo, I have much people in this place, in the regions round about; and an effectual door shall be opened in the regions round about in this eastern land” (D&C 100:3). Where there seems to be a wall or barrier to reach a goal, the Lord opens an effectual door for us to pass that obstacle and reach our goal. When used for prayer, it means that the heavens are rent and our prayer reaches our Father in Heaven. ¶ For thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast consumed us, because of our iniquities. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Because Thou hast taken away the fear of Thy Shekinah from us, and Thou hast delivered us to the power (literally, ‘hand’) of our sins.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Because thou hast turned away thy face from us, and delivered us up for our sins.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, beginning with the second clause, “And hast crushed us in the hand of our iniquity.” ¶ See D&C 101:7–8, but also see D&C 101:9.

²⁰ Allusion to scattering of Israel in Rain in Due Season.

8 But now, O LORD, thou [art] our father; we [are] the clay, and thou our potter; and we all [are] the work of thy hand.

But now, O LORD, thou [art] our father. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And Thy mercies, O Lord, have been as many upon us as a father’s upon his children.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “But now, Lord, thou art our father.” ¶ Isaiah prays for mercy after confessing the people’s general sins. Birks says: “The ‘now’ is not a mark of time, but of transition from deep confession, and guilty sleep in sin, to earnest cries for deliverance. They appeal to God’s love as their Father, to His power as of a potter over the clay.” Alexander also suggests that the now was “not merely [used] as a particle of time, but as a formula of logical resumption, which could not be omitted without obscuring the relation of this verse to the preceding context, as a summing up of its appeals and arguments.” Whitehouse says: “There is ... a gleam of hope in the use of the term father in the appeal addressed to Yahweh,²¹ which is therefore grounded on high moral relations subsisting between Yahweh and Israel greater than those of a potter to the clay or even of a sovereign to his subjects.” Alexander suggests: “Instead of relying upon any supposed merits of their own, they appeal to their very dependence upon God as a reason why he should have mercy on them.” Indeed, we are dependent on the atonement and the merits of Christ our Lord—yet we must permit that the Lord molds us. ¶ Elder Richard J. Maynes shared: “The ancient prophet Isaiah stated, ‘But now, O Lord, thou art our father; we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we all are the work of thy hand.’ If our lives are centered in Jesus Christ, He can successfully mold us into who we need to be in order to return to His and Heavenly Father’s presence in the celestial kingdom. The joy we experience in this life will be in direct proportion to how well our lives are centered on the teachings, example, and atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ.”²² ¶ We [are] the clay, and thou our potter; and we all [are] the work of thy hand. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Though we are clay, we are all the works of thy hands.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And we are clay: and thou art our maker, and we all are the works of thy hands.” ¶ In Jeremiah we read: “The word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, Arise, and go down to the potter’s house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words. Then I went down to the potter’s house, and, behold, he wrought a work on the wheels. And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter: so he made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it. Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying, O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, as the clay is in the potter’s hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel” (Jeremiah 18:1–6). We also have: “Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?” (Romans 9:20, see also notes on ISAIAH 63:17). ¶ Wade says: “What the Lord had made He would surely not allow to perish.” Skinner has: “Can the potter allow the work on which he has lavished his utmost skill and care to be broken in pieces?” Jenour has: “In these verses [ISAIAH 64:8–9] the supplicants again express their confidence in the mercy of Jehovah. They plead their relationship to him as his children, and as being in a peculiar manner the work of his hands. God indeed is the Creator of all men; but the Jews might, in an especial sense, call him their Father and Creator, because of those peculiar favours he had shewn to them above every other nation upon earth. Could he then now cast them off? Could he neglect the work of his own hands?” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, has: “Now if we have sinned against You and angered You, we are an inferior vessel. Make us, then, into another vessel.” It seems to be a request for the Lord to help us soften our hearts and be receptive to the things of the Spirit, as in “Create in me a clean heart” (Psalm 51:10a). Or, “pure heart” in ISV. The Book of Mormon has had a powerful effect on softening my heart. ¶ Alexander suggests: “There is more dignity in the original expression than in the English phrase our potter, as the Hebrew word properly denotes one forming or imparting shape to anything, though specially applied in usage to a workman in clay, when that material is mentioned ... The same plea [than found on this verse is], derived from the relation of the creature to the maker, is used in Psalm 138:8, forsake not the work of thy hands.” ¶ President Brigham Young taught: “When we get to understand all knowledge, all wisdom, that it is necessary for us to understand in the flesh, we will be like clay in the hands of the potter, willing to be molded and fashioned according to the will of him who has called us to this great and glorious work, of purifying ourselves and our fellow beings, and of preparing the nations of the earth for the glory that awaits them through obedience.”²³ On another occasion President Young taught: “We should divest ourselves of all feelings of selfishness, become like clay in the hands of the potter, and say, ‘I have no mind of my own; it must be passive, and suffer God to direct. He has given me good powers of mind, and he shall have the privilege of directing them.’ Then you can enjoy this, that, or the other, and all will be right.”²⁴ ¶ President Harold B. Lee taught, “I’ve read [ISAIAH 64:8] many times but had not received the full significance until I was down in Mexico a few years ago at Telacapaca, where the people mold clay into various kinds of pottery. There I saw them take clay that had been mixed by crude, primitive methods, the molder wading in the mud to mix it properly. Then it was put upon a potter’s wheel and the potter began to fashion the intricate bits of pottery, which he was to place on the market. And as we watched, we saw occasionally, because of some defect in the mixing, the necessity for pulling the whole lump of clay apart and throwing it back in to be mixed over again, and sometimes the process had to be repeated several times before the mud was properly mixed. With that in mind, I began to see the meaning of this scripture. Yes, we too have to be tried and tested by poverty, by sickness, by the death of loved ones, by temptation, sometimes by the betrayal of supposed friends, by affluence and riches, by ease and luxury, by false educational ideas, and by the flattery of the world. A father, explaining this matter to his son, said: ‘And to bring about his eternal purposes in the end of man, after he had created our first parents, and the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and in fine, all things which are created, it must needs be that there was an opposition; even the forbidden fruit in opposition to the tree of life;

²¹ See Mosiah 15:3.

²² Elder Richard J. Maynes, “The Joy of Living a Christ-Centered Life.” October 2015 General Conference.

the one being sweet and the other bitter’ (2 Peter 2:15). It was the Prophet Joseph Smith who said, speaking of this refining process, that he was like a huge, rough stone rolling²⁵ down the mountainside, and the only polishing he got was when some rough corner came in contact with something else, knocking off a corner here and a corner there. But, he said, ‘Thus will I become a polished shaft in the quiver of the Almighty.’ So, we must be refined; we must be tested in order to prove the strength and power that are in us.”²⁶ ¶ President Lee spoke about the need to “start all over” through disciplinary councils in order to permit a person to improve his or her life: “... when one has sinned so seriously that to hold further membership or to hold the holy priesthood would be as a stumbling block and burden rather than a blessing. In the wisdom of the Lord, these privileges are taken from him that he might be ground as ‘clay in the hands of the potter,’ again tried and tested, until he is again worthy to receive these holy blessings.”²⁷ ¶ Then Elder Russell M. Nelson reminds us: “Personal identity is much more than a passport photograph. We also have roots and branches. Divinity is rooted in each of us. ‘We all are the work of [our Creator’s] hand.’ We are eternal beings. In premortal realms, we brethren were foreordained for our priesthood responsibilities. Before the foundation of the world, women were prepared that they may bear children and glorify God.”²⁸

9 Be not wroth very sore, O LORD, neither remember iniquity for ever: behold, see, we beseech thee, we [are] all thy people.

Be not wroth very sore, O LORD, neither remember iniquity for ever: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Let there not be, O Lord, very sore wrath from Thee against us, neither remember iniquities for ever.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Be not angry with us to the uttermost; nor remember forever our sins.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Be not very angry, O Lord, and remember no

²³ President Brigham Young, “The Lord’s Supper.” Special Conference, Brigham City, Box Elder County, for the Purpose of Organizing a Stake of Zion in said County, 19 August 1877. JD 19:93b.

²⁴ President Brigham Young, “Religion of the Saints.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 22 April 1860. JD 8:72b-73a.

²⁵ Sadly, these words have become popular of late by those who like to speak of the Prophet Joseph Smith’s weaknesses. While I have no doubt that our beloved Prophet had weaknesses—for he was fully human—I really worry when people point out specific behaviors and label them as weaknesses. I fear that doing so is engaging in ignorant if not unrighteous judgment. I, for one, will not permit it in my presence.

²⁶ Stand Ye In Holy Places: Selected Sermons and Writings of President Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book, 1988, pp. 113–115.

²⁷ Stand Ye In Holy Places: Selected Sermons and Writings of President Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book, 1988, pp. 119–122.

²⁸ Elder Russell M. Nelson, “Roots and Branches,” Ensign (CR), May 2004, p.27.

longer our iniquity.” ¶ Kay notes, “wroth very sore] the last words of the Book of Lamentations.” Westermann suggests: “The line taken in asking for forgiveness is not that God should simply cancel this sin; it has been committed, and it has its inevitable consequences. Instead, supplication is made that, in spite of it, it should still be possible [to have God turn] again towards sinful Israel.” Gill has: “neither remember iniquity for ever] to afflict and punish for it, but forgive it, for not to remember sin is to forgive it.” ¶ Behold, see, we beseech thee, we [are] all thy people. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Behold, it is revealed before Thee, that we are all Thy people.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But, O look down now upon us; for we are all thy people.” The Peshitta (ܣ) does not contain the words, we beseech thee. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Behold, see we are all thy people.” ¶ Similarly to ISAIAH 63:19, Isaiah reminds the Lord of His covenant relationship with Israel, “thy people” ܕܝܝܪܐ. Gill has: “Behold, see, we beseech thee, we are all thy people] look upon all our troubles and distresses, and upon us under them, with an eye of pity and compassion; and consider that we are thy people, not only by creation, but by covenant and profession.”

10 Thy holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation.

Thy holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The city of thy sanctuary is become a desert: Zion is become like a desert.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “The city of thy sanctuary is become a desert, Zion is made a desert.” ¶ Several LDS²⁹ note that two distinct places are here mentioned, Zion in contrast to Jerusalem. Both need to be built up. ¶ Birks notes: “The holy cities are those of [the Holy Land], not Jerusalem only (Vitrina). The words will apply to the exile in Babylon. But they apply, even more forcibly still, to the later and longer Roman desolation, in which one stone of the temple has not been left on another, and Jerusalem has been trodden down for long ages.” Jenour, likewise, thinks of the post-Roman devastation of Jerusalem, which is the condition in which the House of the Lord in Jerusalem finds itself in even today. So also Rabbi Rosenberg who points out that “Even today, part of Jerusalem is occupied by Arabs, as is the Temple Mount.” Calvin suggests, “She calls them ‘cities of holiness,’ because, as the Lord had sanctified a people, so he also wished that the cities, and even the whole country, should be consecrated to himself.” Westermann explains: “Certain striking expressions such as ‘our beautiful house’ and ‘thy holy cities’ are probably due to the tradition of the lament for the sanctuary.” ¶ Jerusalem a desolation. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Jerusalem, for a curse.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “Jerusalem is desolate.” ¶ Oswalt suggests: “This emphasis on the destroyed temple is of special significance at this point in the lament form. Laments normally close with a vow of praise, which is frequently to be fulfilled in the temple (cf. Psalm 22:26 [Eng. 25]; 26:6, 12; 27:4; 42:5 [Eng. 4]; 43:4; 51:21 [Eng. 19]; 54:8 [Eng. 6], etc.). But here the temple where praises were wont to be given does not even exist! How then can one make a vow of praise? This is some measure of the desperation that the writer feels.” Wordsworth has: “The fulfilment of this prophecy, which foretells the lamentations of the Jews over this desolation of their city and the Temple, is remarkably exemplified in the name, ‘... wailing-place,’ [in Spanish, el muro de lamentación, the Wall of Lamentation—GB] assigned to a spot on the Tyropoemum, at the ‘base of the wall which supports the south-west side of the Temple area.’ On Fridays they assemble there in great numbers. This ‘wailing’ is of great antiquity. It is mentioned by Benjamin of Tudela in the twelfth century ...” ¶ I love and honor my Jewish ancestry. When I went to Jerusalem a few years ago I fully expected to wail at the wall—that tears would flow freely. Tears of joy frequently come to me when I am moved by the Spirit. Yet when I was standing by that awesome wall so full of history and beauty, I was not able to cry at all and felt that the Lord was telling me, “I am no longer here.” A few weeks later, when I was able to walk into the garden tomb outside the city walls, on the other hand, I was so filled with the Spirit, “I am not here but am risen,” reverberated through my soul—and the tears flowed strongly as the Holy Ghost testified of the divinity of our Savior and Redeemer. I testify that the day will come when the Spirit of the Lord will be fully poured upon the Lord’s temple to be built in Jerusalem: HOLINESS TO THE LORD. Then, Jerusalem will no longer be labeled desolation.

11 Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burned up with fire: and all our pleasant things are laid waste.

Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burned up with fire. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The house of our holiness and of our glory, where our fathers worshipped Thee, is burned up with fire.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The house, our sanctuary—even that glory which our fathers blessed, is utterly burnt up with fire.” Instead of house, our sanctuary, the Peshitta (S) has temple (Lamsa) / house of our sanctuary (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The house of our holiness, and of our glory, where our fathers praised thee, is burnt with fire.” ¶ Kimhi, in Slotki-Rosenberg, thinks it of the “First and Second Temples.” Keith says: “‘Our holy and beautiful house’ refers to the temple at Jerusalem.” ¶ And all our pleasant things are laid waste. The Targum (T) has, “And every place of our desire hath become a waste.” The LXX (G) reads, “And all our glorious things are in ruins.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And all our lovely things are turned into ruins.” ¶ Slotki-Rosenberg have: “‘Desirable places’ (Targum, Kimhi), referring to the Holy of Holies (Abarbanel).” Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, “The Temple, which has been a waste for many years.” Gill explains: “and all our pleasant things are laid waste] their pleasant land, and pleasant cities, and especially Jerusalem, the palaces of their princes and nobles, and all the riches and grandeur of them, the temple, and all the rich vessels and utensils in it.”

²⁹ For example, see Elder Bruce R. McConkie, The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man; and Franklin D. Richards and James A. Little, Compendium of the Doctrines of the Gospel, p.175..

12 Wilt thou refrain thyself for these [things], O LORD? wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore?

Wilt thou refrain thyself for these [things], O LORD? The LXX (G) reads, “Yet for all these things, thou, Lord.” The BPE (S) has, “In these matters thou hast persisted (or restrained thyself, Lamsa), O Yahweh.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Wilt thou refrain thyself, O Lord, upon these things.” ¶ Keith says: “The prayer throughout, and especially the close of it, is distinguished by the greatest tenderness and earnestness; and the plaintive and sad air which pervades it, renders it most suitable in the circumstances of the Jewish nation.” It seems to be a plea for mercy against the consequences for estrangement from God. Gill has: “Wilt thou refrain thyself for these things, O Lord?] From delivering us out of our troubles and miseries, and taking vengeance on our enemies, and showing thy zeal for thine own glory; or, as Kimhi paraphrases it, ‘how canst thou contain thyself for these things, and not have mercy?’ how canst thou bear to see Judea, and all its cities, a wilderness; Jerusalem, and the temple of it, in ruins?” ¶ Wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore? The Targum (T) has, “And wilt Thou give prosperity (or, ‘continuance’) for ever to the wicked, who made use servile (the Royal Polyglot reads עַד לְחַדָּא, ‘very much’)?” The LXX (G) reads, “Hast refrained, and been silent. Thou hast humbled us exceedingly.” The Peshitta (S) makes this whole clause a statement of fact, rather than a question. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us vehemently?” ¶ Jennings says: “So wrote the prophet with eyes so anointed that he saw afar to a time that even now, to this day, lies in the future, when a God-fearing remnant of Jews will thus be mourning as they who mourn for their first-born (Zechariah 12:12). The interposition of Jehovah on behalf of the penitent remnant of His people of which Isaiah speaks, is to be final.” Westermann observes: “The fact that a psalm of lamentation like this ends with an anxious question put to God shows how genuine the language of these psalms is, and how it chimes in with the facts of the case. The final words make it apparent that the entire psalm is designed as a question put to God by men who waited anxiously for him. It also shows that men who spoke in this way looked to God and to his turning again towards them as the sole source of a change in their lot.” Jenour suggests: “Be silent] That is, ‘Wilt thou though disregard our prayers, and take no notice of our calamities?’” Cowles has: “In view of all these things, wilt thou, O Lord, still shut up thy bowels of compassion; hold thy tender sympathies under stern constraint, and still go on to afflict us even to extremity? What God will do in answer to these imploring supplications, will appear in the next chapter.” The prophet does not question whether the Redeemer of Israel hears his petition, but rather, he wishes the Lord to act presently.

FIRST POSTED: 17 February 2017

Isaiah 65

The words of Paul interpret the scriptures to indicate that the Lord first turned to Israel and pleaded with her to accept the Gospel and only after being rejected turned to the nations. A second view shows that the Lord may be found of them that will seek Him out, as found in the Inspired Version. Both of these teachings, of course, are true. Our Redeemer, with spread out hands, invites us to come unto Him. ¶ The sins of Israel are enumerated. Of these, self-righteous pride is among the worst. A remnant of Israel and Judah will be preserved. After briefly dwelling on the remnant, Isaiah returns to speak of the apostate state of Israel. When the Lord called, the people did not answer or pay heed. The joy and exaltation of the Lord's disciples is contrasted to the pain of the apostates. While the apostates shall be cursed by men, the Lord's servants shall be blessed and receive a new name. In the Millennium the former things or this terrestrial world shall be forgotten. A new heaven and earth shall come forth. Joy shall abound. Those who die during the Millennium will receive their resurrection in the twinkling of an eye. Moral agency is an eternal principle. Even during the Millennium there will be those who will reject truth. The Rain in Due Season curses mentioned in the books of Moses will be reversed. Those who are true disciples of the Lord will be able enjoy eternal family relationships. The Lord will answer prayers before they are even uttered. Enmity between beasts; and between beasts and mankind will cease.

vv. 1–7. Cowles points us to Romans, where we read the words of Paul: “First Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you. But Esaias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not¹; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me. But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people” (Romans 10:19b–21). The words of Moses, where the history of Israel is recounted as well as the Lord's loving kindness toward her, includes: “For the LORD's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye [i.e., the nation of Israel was placed in a position of preference by the Lord—GB]. As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him. He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock; Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape [all of these wonderful things did the Lord do for Israel—GB]. But Jeshurun [a nickname for Israel—GB] waxed fat, and kicked: thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness; then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation [Israel was pampered and ungrateful and grew complacent or fat²—GB]. They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger. They sacrificed unto devils, not to God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not [Israel turned to idolatry—GB]. Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee [Israel was ungrateful to the Rock of Ages, even Christ or Jehovah of the Holy Scriptures—GB]. And when the LORD saw it, he abhorred them, because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters. And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very froward generation, children in whom is no faith. They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God [with idols—GB]; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities [another word for idols—GB]: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation” [the Lord was provoked to jealousy by Israel's idol worship and would return feelings of jealousy to Israel when He would accept the Gentile nations for a season—GB]” (Deuteronomy 32:9–21). In the next Deuteronomic verses, the Lord alludes to the Rain in

¹ Keith wrote: “If God would deal so mercifully with them who were not called by his name, that is, to whom he had never stood in such a relation as he had done to the Jewish nation, much more would he be gracious to Israel ... It does not teach that God is found where he is not sought at all; but that if sought at all, even after long delay, he will be found.”

² Speaking of Church members today, President Brigham Young likewise warned as to how we take the Lord's blessings: “The worst fear I have about this people is that they will get rich in this country, forget God and His people, wax fat, and kick themselves out of the Church and go to hell. This people will stand mobbing, robbing, poverty, and all manner of persecution and be true. But my greatest fear is that they cannot stand wealth” (emphasis added, quoted in Spencer W. Kimball's, Miracle of Forgiveness, 48). From, “The Legacy of President Brigham Young: A Latter-day Moses,” Doctrine and Covenants and Church History Student Study Guide, (2005).

Due Season. These verses end with a promise to Israel and all the Gentiles who accept the Gospel: “Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people: for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people” (Deuteronomy 32:43). Paul, then, was likening these Isaianic scriptures—as they were had at the time of Christ—unto his own times. The Great Isaiah Scroll {1QIsa^a (Q)} is thought to have existed since a few centuries before Christ and it is extremely similar to the Masoretic text (M) upon which the King James Bible was produced. We also read that “One of the most important contributions of the scrolls is that they have demonstrated the relative stability of the Masoretic text”³ and that they are “astonishingly similar”⁴ with the Masoretic text (M). The JST, on the other hand, is a restoration of the Biblical text to its original. The official Biblical text for The English-speaking members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the KJV. This is in part because the Prophet Joseph Smith was not able to complete the Inspired Version before his death.

1 ¶ I am sought found of [them that] who seek after asked not [for me], I give unto all them that ask of me; I am not found of [them that] sought me not, or that inquireth not after me. I said unto my servant, Behold me, behold look upon me; I will send you unto a nation [that] is not was not called after by my name, for*

* This section part of verse 2 in JST.

I am found of them who seek after me, I give unto all them that ask of me. The Targum (T) has, “I am asked concerning my Word of them that have not asked after me (literally, ‘from before me’).” The LXX (L) reads, “I became manifest to them who inquired not for me.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “They have sought me that before asked not for me.” God is ready to answer our prayers if we but seek Him out—but generally we must seek Him out. So it is that we read: “But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul” (Deuteronomy 4:29). Three clear ways in which we seek the Lord are through prayer, scripture study and service to others. We also have: “I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me” (Proverbs 8:17); “And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you” (Luke 11:9). ¶ I am not found of them that sought me not, or that inquireth not after me. The Targum (T) has, “I am inquired of for instruction in my law, of them who have not sought my fear.” The LXX (L) reads, “I was found by them who sought me not. I said, ‘Behold here I am’ to the nation which did not invoke my name. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “They have found me that sought me not.” ¶ Of those who do not seek God, except when they are in desperate straits, we hear: “Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me: For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the LORD: They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof. Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices” (Proverbs 1:28–31). Elder Parley P. Pratt taught: “When you see men that are not ready to repent, to bring forth fruits meet for repentance, but say, I want to indulge in sin a little longer, and then I am going to turn round and be a first-rate good Saint, I will tell you they are deceiving themselves, for they will not do it, for every time they think of doing it they will love sin as much as they did before, and they will continue to love sin, and why? Because, when He (the Lord) spoke they would not hear.”⁵ ¶ Such sentiments must always be understood in their proper context. When individuals are humbled to turn to the Lord, we read of His mercies: “Verily I say unto you, notwithstanding their sins, my bowels are filled with compassion towards them. I will not utterly cast them off; and in the day of wrath I will remember mercy” (D&C 101:9, see also D&C 101:7–8; and ISAIAH 64:7). The bottom line, I think, is that the Lord does not want us to be like an ungrateful child: “And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments” (D&C 59:21). ¶ I feel to understand both the received Masoretic text (M) [also see Paul, Romans 10:17–21] as well as the Inspired Version. For instance, regarding the former, the Holy Ghost bore a solemn testimony of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon before I read it—when I was not interested. After my heart was softened by the reading of the Book of Mormon, four years later, then I sought the Lord and He did invite me to be His disciple. Ever since that day, I have continually sought the Lord despite my profound weaknesses. The Lord took me both weak and unlearned (D&C 35:13)—and I continue to be both of these things. To those who accept the invitation to study, ponder and cherish the scriptures and the words of the present-day prophets, and come unto Him in prayer, He has promised that: "...the power of your mind may be expanded, in particular that your comprehension of eternal principles may be increased and that the great beauty of the gospel of Jesus Christ will expand your understanding and increase your capacity to understand spiritual things."

³ Biblical Archeology Society, The Masoretic Text and the Dead Sea Scrolls (20 January 2017), URL accessed 19 March 2017, <http://www.biblicalarchaeology.org/daily/biblical-artifacts/dead-sea-scrolls/the-masoretic-text-and-the-dead-sea-scrolls/>

⁴ Notre Dame News (30 November 2000), URL accessed 19 March 2017, <http://news.nd.edu/news/dead-sea-scrolls-yield-major-questions-in-old-testament-understanding/>

⁵ Elder Parley P. Pratt, “Progress of the Latter-Day Church.” Delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 7 April 1856. JD 3:14a.

2 I said unto my servant, Behold me, behold look upon me; I will send you unto a nation [that] is not ~~was not~~ called after by my name,* for I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people which who walketh not in a my ways, and their works are evil and [that was] not good, and they walk after their own thoughts.

* From "I said ... my name," part of verse 1 in KJV.

I said unto my servant, Behold me, look upon me; I will send you unto a nation that is not called after my name. The Targum (ܬ) has, "I will say, Behold, I am inquired after continually, all the day, of a people that hath not prayed in my name." The LXX (ϸ) reads, "I stretched out my hands." Instead of not called by my name, the Peshitta (ܫ) has not called my name, that is, would not pray to God. The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, "I said: Behold me, behold me, to a nation that did not call upon my name." ¶ Who is the Servant that is sent to a nation who was not ready for Him but the Messiah? These are the words, through Divine Investiture, of the Father to His beloved Son. The Son feels deeply of the love of the Father for His children. As Jehovah, the pre-mortal Christ, He stretched His arms to Israel all the day long. The Father tenderly asked the Son to look upon Him before sending Messiah on this most difficult commission. Christ asks us to look upon Him, just as He looks upon the Father. He lovingly invites, "Come unto me" (Matthew 11:28). As we accept the invitation to come unto Christ we are also accepting the call to come unto the Father, for "no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). ¶ Cheyne, while disagreeing with the following, notes: "St. Paul ... following perhaps the tradition of Gamaliel, applies the passage to the conversion of the Gentiles (Romans 10:20), and most Christian commentators have done the same." Paul commented on this verse as follows: "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world. But I say, Did not Israel know?

First Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you. But Esaias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me. But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people" (Romans 10:17–21). It seems, then, that the Lord was found of the Gentiles during the meridian of times, to whom He did not go personally to teach; but Israel, to whom He taught all the day long, rejected her Lord. God the Father is speaking of sending His Servant, even Jesus Christ, to such a trying task. ¶ In the last days, however, the house of Israel would once again turn to the Lord. Indeed, all are invited to come unto Christ, for "he inviteth them all to come unto him and partake of his goodness; and he denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen; and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile" (2 Nephi 26:33). In the last days individuals from all nations will come unto Christ: "In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land: Whom the LORD of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance" (ISAIAH 19:24-25). In all these nations the remnants of Israel will be found. ¶ Keith notes: "Behold me" ܠܗܝܢܝ, literally, 'here am I,' expressive of readiness to come to their help." Henderson also translates it, "Behold me." The Inspired Version, "Look upon me." In the Masoretic text (מ) we have this expression doubled, "ܠܗܝܢܝ ܠܗܝܢܝ," thus making this invitation to come unto Christ, to behold Him, all the more powerful. We have similar invitations from the Savior in His visit to the American Continent: "Behold, I am the law, and the light. Look unto me, and endure to the end, and ye shall live; for unto him that endureth to the end will I give eternal life" (3 Nephi 15:9, emphasis added). Also, we have: "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else. I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear" (ISAIAH 45:22–23, emphasis added). ¶ For I have spread out my hands all the day unto a people who walketh not in my ways. The Targum (ܬ) has, "I have sent my prophets every day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way which was not good." The LXX (ϸ) reads, "All the day long to a disobedient and gainsaying people." The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, "I have spread forth my hands all the day to an unbelieving people." ¶ Shalom Paul points out the fervency of this pleading with the people, where the frequency is "further reinforced by the addition of ܠܗܝܢܝ ('all day')." And more literally, all the day.

¶ All of this reminds us of the Savior's anguished cry: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" (Matthew 23:37; also see 3 Nephi 10:5). Birks notes: "In the later prophets and especially in Jeremiah, great stress is laid upon the reiterated and long protracted efforts of the Lord to reclaim his sinning people. See Jeremiah 7:24–28, 25:3–7, 26:5, 29:17–19, and 44:4–5. Such persistent entreaty may well be expressed by stretching out the hand imploringly all the day." Wade has: "I have spread out my hands, i.e. in an attitude of entreaty (Proverbs 1:24; cf. on ISAIAH 1:15)." ¶ After I finished the Book of Mormon for the first time, during that Christmas vacation in 1973, this is the posture I felt the Lord took as He invited me to follow Him. I could not see Him but could feel of His presence and of His personal invitation to me to be a disciple. It was as if He had His hands and arms stretched out to me in tender invitation. ¶ And their works are evil and not good, and they walk after their own thoughts. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "After their own thoughts." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Who were walking not in a good way, but following their own sins." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, "Who walk in a way that is not good after their own thoughts." ¶ To walk after their own thoughts is to walk in apostasy; it is to trust in the arm of flesh. We need to heed the warning: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ" (Colossians 2:8). Also, "O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good if they hearken unto the counsels of God" (2 Nephi 9:28–29). ¶ In ISAIAH 58 we learn: "If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words" (ISAIAH 58:13). If we are humble and willing the Lord will put His thoughts in our hearts: "... speak the thoughts that I shall put into your hearts" (D&C 100:5b) and we will then be able to serve as instruments in inviting others to come unto Christ.

3 A people that provoketh me to anger continually to my face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick; ✓

✓ upon bricks [i.e., burneth incense upon bricks]

A people that provoketh me to anger continually to my face. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "my Word" rather than me. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "This people are provoking me continually to my face." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) is missing the words, "to my face." ¶ It seems that with this continually [ⲉⲙⲉⲣⲉ] a list of offenses against God are enumerated beginning with the times before the captivities that took place through Assyria and Babylonia but which also have spiritual modern-day equivalents. Birks suggests: "The people, ⲉⲙⲉⲣⲉ] The article has much force. Once defined as the holy people, the Lord has now to define them by their sins. The warning in the song (Deuteronomy 32:16), had been verified, 'With abominations provoked they him to anger.' 'To my face' refers to the first commandment. 'Thou shalt have none other gods before my face.' Idol worship is an open affront to the Divine majesty." Leiser renders it: "To the people that provoke me to anger to my face continually." Also it is rendered, "the people who provoke me to anger continually to my face" (LEB). Also see Rotherham, TS2009, and YLT. ¶ That sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick. The Targum (Ⲯ) adds after gardens, "to idols." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "They will sacrifice in the gardens and burn incense on the tiles, to demons which have not an existence." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, "That immolate in gardens, and sacrifice upon bricks." ¶ Wordsworth summarizes: "A people—that sacrificeth in gardens] i.e., which comply with idolatrous practices. To 'sacrifice in gardens' is, in prophetic language, to commit idolatry. Compare ISAIAH 1:29–30; 66:17." Wordsworth also points out that the Jews were compelled to violate their own beliefs as pointed out in Maccabees and an allusion to such practices from the writings of Peter: "The time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness ... and abominable idolatries" (1 Peter 4:3)." Birks has: "This resumes Isaiah's earliest warning,—'Ye shall be confounded for the gardens ye have chosen' (ISAIAH 1:29). Their idolatries, in the days of the kings, were 'under every green tree' (Jeremiah 2:10). Upon the bricks] has been referred to the tiles of houses, where they offered incense to the queen of heaven, or to heathen inscriptions on the bricks of Babylon. But the more probable reference is to altars of forbidden worship in the garden (Alexander, Hahn, Stler). As Ahaz corrupted God's worship by a heathen altar of burnt offering, so the people are charged with offering incense to their idols on base and unworthy substitutes for the golden incense altar, which God had ordained.” Keith proposes: “The sin of building altars with bricks (לְבִנִּים, literally, upon bricks) lay in its being contrary to the requirement that the Jewish altars should be constructed of hewn stone; a rule, like so many others in the Mosaic code, intended chiefly to preserve the separation of Israel from the heathen.” Regarding hewn stone, Keil (Keil & Delitzsch Commentary on the Old Testament) explains in Exodus 20:25: “The altar, as an elevation built up of earth or rough stones, was a symbol of the elevation of man to God, who is enthroned on high in the heaven; and because man was to raise himself to God in his sacrifices, Israel also was to make an altar, though only of earth, or if of stones, not of hewn stones. ‘For if thou swingest thy tool (כְּתִרָה lit., sharpness, then any edge tool) over it (over the stone), thou defilest it.’ ‘Of earth:’ i.e., not ‘of comparatively simple materials, such as befitted a representation of the creature’ (Schultz on Deuteronomy 12); for the altar was not to represent the creature, but to be the place to which God came to receive man into His fellowship there. For this reason the altar was to be made of the same material, which formed the earthly soil for the kingdom of God, either of earth or else of stones, just as they existed in their natural state ... because the altar was to set forth the nature of the simple earthly soil, unaltered by the hand of man.” Kay has: “burneth incense upon bricks] altars of brick; erected ‘on the mountains’ (ISAIAH 65:7; 2 Kings 16:4; Hosea 4:13); or on roofs of houses (Jeremiah 19:13; 32:29): the appointed place being ‘the roof’ of that golden altar (Exodus 30:3), which was hidden away in the sanctuary, on which the high-priest was daily to burn incense (Exodus 30:7–8) which was ceremonially cleansed every year on the Day of Atonement (Exodus 30:10). Thus the altar-incense represented the fragrance of Israel’s self-devotion, reverentially offered in God’s own appointed way, by ministers of His own constituting, and under the protection of the great Atonement. The popular incense-burning, in contrast to all this, told men that they might go forth and offer their own unauthorized will-worship, boldly, in their own name, in the face of the universe and of God Himself.” Note Kay’s emphasis on authority and lack of authority. The latter, effected in the name of the person carrying it out and without authority; the former, by the proper authority and in the name of God. President Spencer W. Kimball taught: “It is a terrible thing for any human being to use the names of Deity in disrespect. And this includes the use of the name of the Lord without authority, and there are many people who claim revelations and claim authority who do not have it directly from the Lord. Through the ages, the prophets have never ceased to rebuke this grave sin. The prophet Isaiah called to accounting and repentance those ‘which swear by the name of the Lord, and make mention of the God of Israel, but not in truth, nor in righteousness’ (ISAIAH 48:1).”⁶ In Doctrine and Covenants we read from the Savior: “Behold, I am Alpha and Omega, even Jesus Christ. Wherefore, let all men beware how they take my name in their lips—For behold, verily I say, that many there be who are under this condemnation, who use the name of the Lord, and use it in vain, having not authority” (D&C 63:60–62). Brother Robert L. Millet beautifully put it: “We are to do all things in the name of the Son. We are to speak and act and worship and perform the labors of the kingdom and the labors of life in the name of the Son. Whenever the gospel has been on the earth, he has empowered others to act in his holy name, extending an investiture of his divine authority to chosen servants and recognizing the acts they perform by his word. Likewise, the everlasting gospel has been restored in our day ‘that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world’ (D&C 1:20).”⁷ All ordinances, then, need to be carried out as the Lord has instructed and by properly authorized priesthood servants. Furthermore, we are also guilty of idolatry when we place our trust in the arm of flesh rather than in that of God. We may call it the idolatry of false science, or the idolatry of vain philosophy or intellectual idols. For no true science or pursuit of understanding will contradict the word of the Lord.

4 Which remain among the graves, and lodge in the monuments; which eat swine's flesh, and broth of abominable beasts, ~~[things is in]~~ and pollute their vessels;

✓ or, pieces

Which remain among the graves, and lodge in the monuments. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Who dwell in houses, which are built of the dust of graves, with the dead bodies of the sons of men they dwell.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They sleep in tombs and in caverns for the purpose of dreaming.” Instead of monuments, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has caves. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “That dwell in sepulchers, and sleep in the temple of idols.” ¶ Birks has: “The words refer to necromancy and offerings to the dead.” Wade suggests: “which sit ... graves] i.e. for the purpose of necromancy. Oracles from the dead (who were credited with possessing knowledge not enjoyed by the living) were supposed to be conveyed in dreams to persons who passed the night in burial places, and the LXX here adds διὰ ἐνύπνια.⁸ The practice prevailed among the Greeks and Romans as well as among the Semites ...” ¶ Which eat swine's flesh, and broth of abominable beasts, and pollute their vessels. The LXX (Ⲫ) and the Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲑ) renders it: “All their vessels are polluted” and “And pollute their vessels,” respectively. The Peshitta (Ⲑ) has them polluting their vessels “with unclean carcasses (Lamsa) / carcasses or cadavers (BPE).” The Douay-Rheims (ⲑ) has, “That eat swine's flesh, and profane broth is in their vessels.” ¶ Regarding the pots themselves, Rabbi Rosenberg leaning on Redak has: “The fat of the broth always adheres to their vessels, so that it is apparent that they have cooked forbidden food therein.” Birks explains: “Eating swine's flesh, and drinking their broth in sacrifice, would be a contemptuous rejection of the law of God. Perhaps the charge is to be explained by ISAIAH 66:3, that their pride and rebellion made even their legal sacrifices like illegal abominations.” Cheyne points out to both Leviticus 11:7 and Deuteronomy 14:8. Rawlinson, along with numerous exegetes, suggests: “Which eat swine's flesh] Not in mere defiance of the Law, but in sacrificial meals (ISAIAH 66:17) of which swine's flesh formed a part. Swine were sacrificial animals in Egypt (Herodotus 2:47–48), in Phœnicia (Lucian, ‘De Dea Syra,’ § 54), and with the Greeks and Romans. They do not appear to have been employed for the purpose either by the Assyrians or the Babylonians. It was probably in Palestine that the Jews had eaten ‘swine's flesh,’ at sacrifices to Baal or Astarte (Ashtoreth). In later times to do so was regarded as one of the worst abominations (1 Maccabees 1:41–64; 2 Maccabees 6 and 7). Broth of abominable things] Either broth made from swine's flesh, or from the flesh of other unclean animals, as the hare and rabbit (Leviticus 11:5–6), or perhaps simply broth made from the flesh of any animals that had been offered to idols (Acts 15:29).” Either way, eating swine was an abomination before the Lord. ¶ Kay notes: “Antiochus employed it [willingness vs. unwillingness to sacrifice or eat swine's flesh—GB] as his test of Judaism (1 Maccabees 1:41–64; cp. 2 Maccabees 6:18).” Regarding abominable flesh, Kay points us to “Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! behold, my soul hath not been polluted: for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there abominable flesh into my mouth” (Ezekiel 4:14). We are also reminded of Peter in Acts 10:9 ff., associated with the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles in the New Testament.

⁶ Kimball, President Spencer W. “President Kimball Speaks Out on Profanity.” First Presidency Message. February 1981 Ensign.

⁷ Millet, Robert L., Dean of Religious Education at Brigham Young University, “Honoring His Holy Name.” March 1994 Ensign.

5 Which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou.

⁸ For the purpose of dreaming.

These [are] a smoke in my nose, ✓ a fire that burneth all the day.

✓ or, anger

Which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou. The Targum (Ⲫ) has, “purer” for holier. The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “Yet they say, ‘Keep at a distance from me; come not near me, for I am clean.’” The Peshitta (Ⲑ) reads something like, “Which say: step back, do not come near me; for I am purified (BPE) / sanctified (Lamsa).” The Douay-Rheims (ⲑ) has, “That say: Depart from me, come not near me, because thou art unclean.” ¶ Birks has: “A striking picture of the pride of the Pharisees.” So also Cowles: “This sanctimonious bigotry, ‘Keep to thyself,’ paints strongly the ostentatious, exclusive, uncharitable spirit of the Pharisees of our Savior's time.” Kay interestingly notes: “I am holier than thou] A deep insight is here given us into the nature of the mysterious fascination, which heathenism exercised ... on the people ... The man, who had been offering incense on the [pagan] mountain-top, despised the penitent who went to the temple to present ‘a broken and contrite heart.’ If Pharisaism led to a like result, it was because it, too, had emptied the Law of its spiritual import, and turned its provisions into intellectual idols.” ¶ In one of my consulting trips to Washington State, a professing Christian refused to shake my hand when he found out I was a Latter-day Saint—but he had no trouble accepting the tip I had offered him. Gladly, such behavior has been the exception rather than the rule in my life. ¶ These [are] a smoke in my nose, a fire that burneth all the day. The Targum (Ⲫ) has, “These their provocations are as smoke before me: their recompense shall be in hell, where the fire burneth all the day.” The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “This is a smoke which causeth my wrath; a fire is kindled by it every day.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲑ) has, for the first clause, “These shall be smoke in my anger.” ¶ Cowles has: “As the word rendered ‘nose,’ legitimately means ‘anger,’ according to the English margin ||, and as the parallel clause, ‘a fire that burneth all the day,’ cannot well be said of that which is merely disagreeable (like smoke), it is better to give both clauses this sense: They are (shall become) as smoke under my anger; a fire burning all the day; i.e., they shall be surely consumed in the fierceness of my displeasure. So God doomed the proud sanctimonious hypocrites of the Savior's time. The event shortly fulfilled the fearful prediction.” ¶ The Jerusalem siege, to which Cowles alludes to here, took place 70 AD and would only be a type of the greater burning associated with the Second Coming as well as the one associated with the final transformation of the earth. The Savior, during His visit to the American continent after His resurrection, “expound all things, even from the beginning until the time that he should come in his glory—yea, even all things which should come upon the face of the earth, even until the elements should melt with fervent heat, and the earth should be wrapt together as a scroll, and the heavens and the earth should pass away” (3 Nephi 26:3). So it is that we may profitably ask how the twin sins of pride and hypocrisy affect our lives today—rather than assume these were only the tribulations of the Pharisees. As we read below (ISAIAH 65:20, particularly see notes from Elder Bruce R. McConkie), even during the Millennium, when knowledge will abound, there will be open rebellion against the Lord. ¶ Kay notes: “a smoke in my nose” (cp. Psalm 18:8). Instead of an acceptable fragrance, they send forth offensive smoke; for they have the wrath of God (as a ‘burning fire,’ s.w.a. Deuteronomy 32:22) perpetually abiding on them.” Skinner, although he is of a different view, shares the following: “These are a smoke in my nose] If the clause stood alone it would be interpreted as a figurative expression of the idea of ISAIAH 65:3a—a smoke entering into and irritating the nostrils. The parallel clause, however, has led nearly all commentators to understand the ‘smoke’ as a symbol of the Divine anger (cf. Psalm 18:8); and to paraphrase the line thus: ‘these are (the cause of) a smoke (proceeding from) my nostrils.’” Skinner points us to Jeremiah, “... and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not: for ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever” (Jeremiah 17:4b).

6 Behold, [it is] written before me: I will not keep silence, but will recompense, even recompense into their bosom,

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, after the first clause, “I will not give unto them prolongation in this life; but I will recompense unto them the wages for their sins, and deliver their bodies to the second death.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold it is written before me: I will not keep silence, until I have retributed into their bosom their sins.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, for the second clause, “I will not keep silence until I recompense them a double portion into their bosom.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second clause, “But I will render and repay into their bosom.” ¶ The word recompense is in modern language (especially in Spanish, recompensa) often associated with a positive reward, but the archaic meaning is closer to the Biblical one, to suffer the consequences for behavior—either righteous or unrighteous. Gesenius explains regarding one of the definitions of שָׁלַם: “(4) to requite, to recompense ... to recompense to any one according to his works, Psalm 62:13; Jeremiah 50:29.” In Alma 41 we learn how we will be judged according to the desires of our hearts and the resulting works. A number of General Authorities have taught that it is not just a balancing scale between the good and the bad in our lives, but rather, the type of individuals we have become. ¶ Cowles says, “This is strongly in the tone of retribution. ‘Written before me,’ in the sense of being fixed, determined upon. The next clause gives at least the substance of this determined purpose, if not the very words ... The phrase, ‘recompense into their bosom,’ is thought to come from the original usage of drawing a loose garment (a vail or mantle) so as to form a capacious sack at the bosom into which articles might be poured. Thus Boaz said to Ruth, ‘Bring the vail that thou hast upon thee and hold it. And when she held it, he measured six measures of barley and laid it on her’ (Ruth 3:15).” Rawlinson explains: “But will recompense, etc.] rather, until I have recompensed, yea, recompensed them into their bosoms (comp. Luke 6:38). Gifts were given and received into the fold of the begeg,⁹ or cloak, which depended¹⁰ in front of the bosom.” Skinner also, “I will not keep silence until I have recompensed] For the construction cf. Genesis 32:26; Leviticus 22:6, &c.” So also Leeser, who renders it: “Behold, it is written before me; I will not keep silence, till I have recompensed, yea, recompensed into their bosom.—” ¶ Kay associates these words with those in Rain in Due Season and says: “Written] in the Law generally (Deuteronomy 29:20–21): but especially in the Song of Moses, Deuteronomy 32:35, 41 (compare with ISAIAH 65:15, below). Not keep silence] compare with Psalm 50:3. Into their bosom] in requital of the iniquity, which they had ‘hid’ in it (Job 31:33¹¹).” Skinner points us to Jeremiah, “The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond: it is graven upon the table of their heart, and upon the horns of your altars” (Jeremiah 17:1).

7 Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the LORD, which have burned incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: therefore will I measure their former work into their bosom.

Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the LORD. The Targum (Ⲯ) adds, “are revealed before me.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And the sins of their fathers, saith the Lord.” ¶ Kay observes regarding אָמַר יְהוָה, “saith the Lord”] The frequency, with which this formula (or its equivalent) recurs in this and the next chapter, is remarkable.” Rawlinson suggests that this clause refers back to שְׁלֵמֶתִי, I will recompense. Earlier we read: “But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear” (ISAIAH 59:2). When instead the Lord has commended us: “Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you” (2 Corinthians 6:17). We are to live in the world but not be part of the world as Jesus taught in His Intercessory Prayer: “I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world” (John 17:14–16). ¶ Which have burned incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “They have burned incense on the mounts, and treated me with scorn on the hills.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Who have sacrificed upon the mountains, and have reproached me upon the hills.” Kay has: “which have] Or, ‘for that they have.’ blasphemed me] Resorting to idols, as though I were negligent or powerless.” ¶ Therefore will I measure their former work into their bosom. The Targum (ⲉ) has, “give the reward” for measure. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “I will retribute their works into their bosom.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And I will measure back their first work in their bosom.” ¶ Skinner proposes: “The word for ‘former’ (רִאשֹׁנָה) if an adjective, ought to have the article, and moreover the thought expressed by this translation would be unsuitable, since it passes by in silence the recompense due to the sins of the children themselves. It must therefore be rendered as an adverb, as in Jeremiah 16:18 (‘and first I will recompense their iniquity’ &c.). So Revised Version.” ¶ Also, we need to consider that our former sins return to us if having left mystic Babylon for Zion we then decide to return to Babylon.

⁹ בִּגְדָּה. Clothing, garment or covering, see Strong, Vine, Gesenius.

¹⁰ See Webster, “to hand down.”

¹¹ “... by hiding mine iniquity in my bosom” (Job 31:33b).

vv. 8–10. Rawlinson suggests: “In Isaiah, and especially in ... ISAIAH 40–66, promises are almost always intermingled with threatenings. The threats extend to the bulk of the nation; the promises are limited to ‘a remnant’ ... Here the announcement that a remnant would be spared is introduced by a simile from men’s treatment of their own vineyards.” Skinner has: “In spite of the gross idolatries denounced in the preceding section there is that in Israel which makes it precious in the sight of Jehovah, and ensures for it a brilliant future.”

8 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, As the new wine is found in the cluster, and [one] saith, Destroy it not; for a blessing [is] in it: so will I do for my servants' sakes, that I may not destroy them all.

Thus saith the LORD, As the new wine is found in the cluster, and [one] saith, Destroy it not; for a blessing [is] in it: The Targum (ⲉ) has, “Thus saith the Lord, As Noah was found righteous in the generation of the deluge, and I said that I would not destroy him, for the purpose that I might raise up the world by him.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, as when a good grape is found in the cluster, they will say, ‘Destroy it not; for there is a blessing in it.’” Instead of [one] saith, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has one says to another. The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Thus saith the Lord: As if a grain be found in a cluster, and it be said: Destroy it not, because it is a blessing.” ¶ Birks explains: “The contrast lies, perhaps ... between an unripe cluster, and the same when fully ripened. New wine ‘is found in the cluster,’ belongs to it as the usual result, when the vintage comes. ‘And one saith,’ even while it is unripe, and the grapes are sour and worthless, ‘Destroy it not, for a blessing is in it.’ The wise vinedresser restrains every rash hand that would destroy the cluster, because at present worthless, by reminding them of the blessing when the full ripeness is come. So God would deal with His people, still beloved for their fathers’ sakes. With such rich promises of future blessing in store, they should be sorely chastened, but not crushed or utterly destroyed. At length, like the clusters of Eshcol,¹² they should yield, in a righteous generation, the precious new wine of the kingdom of God.” Kay explains it thus: “Destroy it not] Both the second member of the verse and ISAIAH 65:9 imply that this refers not simply to the cluster, but to it and the branch on which it grows. The vine-dresser, as he is about to cut down a degenerate vine, espies a full rich cluster on one part, and gives orders that the plant shall not be wholly destroyed (Luther, Marloratus); so it shall be now with the vines of Jacob and Judah (ISAIAH 65:9). The denunciations in ISAIAH 65:2–7 (compare ISAIAH 65:15, and ISAIAH 64:6–7) appeared to include the whole people. But it was not so: there should still be a holy ‘seed’ (ISAIAH 64:9, 23; cp. ISAIAH 6:13; Romans 11:5) ...” The Lord sees the potential of His people, scattered Israel, and does not wish her to be extinguished, but rather preserved for the latter days. Many exegetes focus on the rotten or bad grapes, along with good ones. From a viticulture perspective, I prefer the explanations of Birks and Kay. The expression regarding the new wine found in the cluster is not an implication that we are speaking of grape juice, but rather, that the vinedresser can already mentally sense the joy of the new wine (grape juice that has gone through the first fermentation) well before the grapes ripen. ¶ We have a similar situation in the allegory found in Jacob 5, of the tame and wild olive orchards. There the Master says, “I do it that I may preserve unto myself the natural branches of the tree; and also, that I may lay up fruit thereof against the season, unto myself; for it grieveth me that I should lose this tree and the fruit thereof” (Jacob 5:13b). When the Master threatened to cut down the trees, his servant pleaded for its preservation. A second person seems to talk, also, in this Isaianic verse, possibly a servant . . . , “and one saith, destroy it not, for a blessing is in it.” “Spare the vine (or the branch), do not cut it down, for there is yet life and sap in it, and it may grow, and bring forth much fruit.” ¶ The primary meaning of this verse is that of the preservation of the natural branches of Israel to be grafted-in during the latter days. But also, as a secondary signification when likening the scriptures unto ourselves, God sees each of our potential and has more confidence in us than we have in ourselves. Satan is busy destroying our self-worth and pointing the accusatory finger. Part of the pure love Christ is to see the potential in others—what the Lord sees in them—rather than what we may, on the surface, observe with our human eyes. If we are to be effective missionaries, it is requisite we see with these loving eyes. ¶ So will I do for my servants’ sakes, that I may not destroy them all. The Targum (Ⲯ) specifies עֲבָדֵי צְדִיקָא, “righteous servants.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “So will I do for the sake of him who serveth me; for his sake I will not destroy them all.” ¶ Luther says: “An objection precedes the question, as Abraham says (Genesis 18:23), ‘Wilt Thou indeed destroy the righteous with the wicked?’ To this objection God answers, ‘I will not do it.’ For God knows how to save the godly and confound the ungodly. ¶ In September 2001 I wrote in my journal, “My tangerine tree is all but dead.” Oh, how I loved that tangerine tree. It was my favorite fruit tree in my property and the fruit was so delicious. But this tangerine tree died. I had another tree, one that I despised, an orange tree that did not give fruit. My youngest son, Miguel, pleaded with me not to cut it off and I heeded. In time that tree grew and yielded some of the best oranges I have ever eaten. The pleadings of my son saved that orange tree. Despite its apparent worthlessness, the orange tree would come to yield wonderful fruit. Once again, the Lord knows each one of us and He has more confidence in us than we do, “... for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart” (1 Samuel 16:7).

¹² See Numbers 13:23–24.

9 And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains: and mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there.

And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains: The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “I will indeed bring forth the seed from Jacob namely, from Juda, and he shall inherit my holy mountain.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has possessor instead of inheritor. ¶ Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, explains that Jacob stands for the ten tribes while Judah for the two: Benjamin and Judah. Keith suggests: “This seed from Jacob and Judah, who are to inherit the land once more, are the ripe vine-clusters of the previous figure.” Or, the transplanted vine. These are, indeed, all of scattered Israel which will be gathered in the last days through the Bible and the Book of Mormon. Jenour offers a couple of suggestions including: “... does not this promise refer rather to the restoration of the Jews in the latter days? The words seem to imply, not merely that a few of them, like the apostles and evangelists, should be the means of raising up a spiritual seed from among the Gentiles, but that, in due time, the whole nation shall again obtain possession of the Holy Land, and dwell at Jerusalem?” ¶ The inheritor of my mountains refers to both the gathering of the Saints beginning with Ephraim to the Rocky Mountains as well as the gathering of Judah to the Holy Land. Delitzsch well says: “out of Jacob and Judah], i.e., the people of the two captivities (see ISAIAH 56:3).” The first captivity refers to that of the ten tribes or Ephraim; the second, that of Judah and Benjamin. Kay has, “bring forth a seed] sprung from Jacob, yet discriminated from the mass of the nation; the seed of God’s elect Servant (ISAIAH 53:10¹³): whence they also are called, Mine elect ones, My servants.” Rawlinson observes regarding the Holy Land: “An inheritor of my mountains] The whole of Palestine is little more than a cluster of mountains.” McFadyen has: “Throughout this chapter the faithful are frequently called my servants, and they are rewarded with secure possession of the mountain land of Palestine, in its length and breadth—from Sharon, the plain between Carmel and Joppa, to the valley of Achor near Jericho.” To these mountains, we can add the Rocky Mountains as mentioned above, in reference to the gathering of Ephraim and his companions. ¶ And mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there. The Targum (Ⲯ) specifies, “righteous servant.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And my chosen ones and my servants shall inherit and dwell

¹³ See Mosiah 15:10–14.

there.” Rawlinson has: “Mine elect] (comp. ISAIAH 43:20; 45:4). The same expression is used of Israel in 1 Chronicles 16:13; Psalm 89:3; 105:6, 43; 106:5. God ‘chose’ Israel out of all the nations of the earth to be his ‘peculiar people.’” ¶ Perhaps the inheritance speaks especially of the condition of the earth after it is exalted and only celestial beings live there.

10 And Sharon shall be a fold of flocks, and the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

And Sharon shall be a fold of flocks, and the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in. The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “And there shall be in the forest folds for flocks; and the valley of Achor shall be a resting place of herds.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, for the first clause, “And the plains shall be turned to folds of flocks.” ¶ The tone seems to be that of the Millennial Day. Kay observes: “The whole land shall be in peace; from Sharon (ISAIAH 33:9) in the west, to the valley of Achor (Joshua 7:24; Hosea 2:15) in the east.” ¶ For my people that have sought me. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “For my people which have sought my fear.” The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “For my people who have sought me.” Keith has: “Since the Lord has shewn rich grace even to Gentiles who had not sought Him, how much more will He bless His ancient people, whose are the fathers and the covenants, when they turn to Him in godly sorrow! (comp. Romans 11:24).” Rawlinson has: “My people that have sought me] or, inquired of me [גָּדַלְתִּי מִי] from the root גָּדַל—the same verb as that used at the beginning of the chapter [גָּדַלְתִּי מִי].” Do we wish to be counted among those who seek after the Lord?

vv. 11–16. After seeing the future glory of Israel, Isaiah turns back to the apostasy that would mean the scattering of Israel and Judah throughout the world.

11 ¶ But ye [are] they that forsake the LORD, that forget my holy mountain, that prepare a table for that troop, and that furnish the drink offering unto that number. ✓ ✓

✓ or, Gad

✓ ✓ or, Meni

But ye [are] they that forsake the LORD, that forget my holy mountain. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “But ye, O house of Israel, ye have forsaken the worship of the Lord, ye have forgotten the worship of my holy mountain.” The

LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “But as for you, who forsake me and forget my holy mountain.” ¶ Shalom Paul notes: “But as for you who forsake the Lord] The waw [ו] at the beginning of the verse indicates contrast. For forsaking the Lord as the opposite of seeking the Lord (the end of the previous verse), see ISAIAH 58:2; 1 Chronicles 28:9¹⁴.” Keith suggests: “We may assume that they refer to actual forms of idolatry in the days of the prophet, representing some kindred evils of the last days.” Regarding the holy mountain, it speaks of those who had neglected Temple and substituted it for idolatrous worship. Skinner’s words are interesting here, as he belongs to the critical school, because they acknowledge that the verse may well be speaking of the temple: “The phrase may denote either simple indifference to the welfare of Zion (cf. Psalm 137:5), or deliberate abstention from the Temple ritual. The second view implies residence in Palestine at a time when the Temple services were in full operation; hence the other is necessarily adopted by all who hold the prophecy to have been written in Babylon. It is perhaps impossible to decide which is right, although those who recognise a Palestinian colouring throughout the chapter will naturally prefer the second as the more forcible interpretation, and find in it some confirmation of their theory.” McFadyen, alluding back to ISAIAH 65:9, has: “In contrast with this happy destiny of the faithful will be the bloody doom of the idolaters who forget my holy mountain ...” ¶ That prepare a table for that troop, and that furnish the drink offering unto that number. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “That prepare tables for the idols, and mix goblets for their gods.” The LXX (Ⓜ) reads, “And who prepare a table for the Demon, and fill up a mixed potion for Fortune.” Instead of that troop, the Peshitta (Ⓟ) has fortune tellers (Lamsa) / Fortune (i.e., the pagan goddess of luck, BPE); instead of that number, bowls (Ⓢ). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “That set a table for fortune, and offer libations upon it.” ¶ Note the margin ||, Gad (גָּד) and Meni (מֵנִי). Gad was one of the twelve patriarchs: one of Jacob’s sons through Zilpah, Leah’s servant. But here it refers to an idol. In TDOT, we read that “All examples indicate that ‘fortune’ is to be assumed as the original meaning. The LXX and Vulgate, which translate the appellative by Τύχη and felix [my copies of the Latin Vulgate (Ⓟ) have Fortunae —GB] respectively (cf. Genesis 30:11¹⁵), confirm this. But beyond this גָּד also serves as a proper name for a Semitic deity or as an epithet of local deities.” Ottley has: “τῷ δαιμονίῳ ... τῇ τύχῃ] Heb. Gad ... Meni, two

¹⁴ But if abandon, אָבַדְתִּי אֶת־בְּנֵי (1 Chronicles 28:9b).

¹⁵ Leeser offers for Genesis 30:11, “And Leah said, Good luck hath come: and she called his name Gad.” See also the LDS 2009 Reina Valera for the Genesis quote as well as ISAIAH 65:11–12—both of which are very close to Leeser and other like translations.

heathen deities, probably Syrian, the star-gods Jupiter and Venus, the ‘Greater and Lesser Fortune’ of astrologers ... Gad means ‘Fortune,’ and Meni perhaps ‘number,’ and so ‘destiny’: cf. Jeremiah 33:13, Daniel 5:25. We might have expected Τύχη therefore to correspond to the former. Probably the two were regarded as near akin.”¹⁶ Leeser translates ISAIAH 65:11b, “that set out a table for the god of Fortune, and that fill for Destiny the drink-offering.” After listing a number of views on who Gad and Meni represented, Barnes says: “That two idols are intended here, there can be no doubt. For, (1) The circumstance mentioned of their preparing a table for them, and pouring out a drink-offering, is expressive of idolatry. (2) The connection implies this, as the reproof in this chapter is to a considerable extent for their idolatry. (3) ... [Regarding Gad, Fortune] It is agreed on all hands that some idol is here referred to that was extensively worshipped in the East; and the general impression is, that it was an idol representing Fortune. But whether it was the Sun, or the planet Jupiter, is not easy to determine. [Regarding Meni] ... It seems to be agreed that the word refers to the worship of either the moon or the planet Venus, regarded as the goddess of good fortune. It is not very material which is intended, nor is it easy to determine. ... The leading idea of the prophet is ... [that they had forsaken Yahweh] and [were] endeavoring to propitiate the favor of idol-gods.” ¶ Barnes has: “That forget my holy mountain] Mount Moriah, the sacred mountain on which the temple was built. That prepare a table] It was usual to set food and drink before idols – with the belief that the gods consumed what was thus placed before them ... In all ancient worship, it was customary to pour out a libation, or a drink-offering. This was done among idolaters, to complete the idea of a repast. As they placed food before the idols, so they also poured out wine before them, with the idea of propitiating them.” Skinner suggests: “The rites described are the lectisternia,¹⁷ well known throughout the ancient world, in which a table was spread, furnished with meats and drinks as a meal for the gods (Liv. v. 13; Herodotus 1:183; Ep. of Jeremiah, vv. 27 f.; Bel and the Dragon, v. w, cf. Jeremiah 7:18; 19:13; 44:17; 1 Corinthians 10:21) ... Gesenius remarks that the description of the complete lectisternium extends over both members of the parallelism, and infers that the two deities were worshipped together.” ¶ McFadyen well points out: “This deliberate worship of foreign gods, coupled with the practice of necromancy and the other mystic, superstitious, and illegal rites alluded to in ISAIAH 65:3 f., sheds a very lurid light on the religious conditions which Ezra, Nehemiah, and the reforming party had to face, and goes a long way to justify their severe and exclusive policy.”

12 Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose [that] wherein I delighted not.

Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “them” rather than you in the first instance. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “You I will deliver up to the sword; you shall all bow down to slaughter.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “I will number you in the sword, and you shall all fall by slaughter.” ¶ Leeser translates as: “Yea, I will destine you to the sword, and all of you shall kneel down to the slaughter.” Cowles suggests that as the people were attracted to idolatrous worship, they would be destined to punishment: “The terms he uses would remind them of their sin. Ye pour out your drink-offerings to a fancied Destiny; I Destine you to the sword.” Rawlinson well observes: “Not, perhaps, intended literally. Wicked men are God’s sword (Psalm 17:13), and deliverance into their hand would be deliverance to the sword ...” Skinner notes the paronomasia: “There is a play upon words between the verb for ‘destine’ (ⲙⲛⲁⲣ) and Meni in ISAIAH 65:11

(ⲙⲛⲓ).” ¶ Because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because I sent my prophets, and ye repented (literally, ‘returned’) not; they prophesied, and ye did not receive them (or ‘obey them’).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Because I called and you answered not: I spake and you would not listen.” ¶ Cowles suggests: “No calls from God availed toward reclaiming them to himself. Their depravity baffled every moral endeavor to save them.” This brings us back to ISAIAH 65:2b, where we read of the Lord’s tender invitation: “For I have spread out my hands all the day unto a people who walketh not in my ways.” ¶ But did evil before mine eyes, and did choose [that] wherein I delighted not. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But did what is evil in my sight; and chose the things in which I did not delight.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “And you did evil in my eyes, and you have chosen the things that displease me.” ¶ Man is given the moral agency to choose between that which is pleasing to God and that which is not right. Some philosophies suggest that there is no such thing as right and wrong, but surely these things exist.

¹⁶ Ottley, R. R. (Ed.). (1906). The Book of Isaiah according to the Septuagint (Codex Alexandrinus) (2:381–382). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

¹⁷ “Lectisternium (Lat. lectus, a couch, and sternere, to spread), a religious festival ceremony among the ancient Romans. It was celebrated during times of public calamity, when the gods were invited to the entertainment, and their statues taken from their pedestals and laid on couches” (M’Clintock, J., & Strong, J. (1882). Lectisternium. In Cyclopædia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature (5:318). New York: Harper & Brothers, Publishers).

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed:

Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: The Targum (ⲧ) specifies, “righteous servants” in contraposition to the wicked who would be hungry. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold my servants shall eat but you shall be hungry.” ¶ The contrast here is between those who in the latter days would return to the Lord—and those who persist in remaining in a state of apostasy. Elder George Q. Cannon explained: “Herein we possess advantages not possessed by other people; we have revelation to guide us, we have the word of the Lord in our midst; we are not dependent upon man’s wisdom, nor upon human plans, but we have the wisdom of eternity manifested through the servants of God to guide us. We have the opportunity of building up the Kingdom of God and of carrying out the designs of heaven according to His plan; and if we will do so we shall fulfil the word of the Lord given anciently, when speaking of and comparing his people with the people of the world. Said he, ‘My servants shall eat, and you shall be hungry: my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: my servants shall rejoice, but you shall be ashamed: my servants shall sing with gladness of heart, but you shall sorrow with sadness of heart, and howl with vexation of spirit. And ye shall leave your name as a curse to my chosen: for the Lord God shall slay thee, and call His servants by another name.’”¹⁸ ¶ Behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “righteous servants” in contrast to the wicked, who would be thirsty. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold my servants shall drink; but you shall be thirsty.” ¶ Speaking to the Samaritan woman by the well: “Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:13–14). These are invitations to discipleship.

¶ Behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “righteous servants” in contrast to the wicked, who would be ashamed. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold my servants shall rejoice; but you shall be ashamed.” Instead of ashamed, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has weep (Lamsa) / lament (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has confounded instead of ashamed. ¶ This rejoicing begins in this life and continues throughout eternity.

14 Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit.

✓ breaking

Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “righteous servants.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Behold my servants shall triumph with joy.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “Behold my servants shall praise for joyfulness of heart.” ¶ But ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But you shall scream for sorrow of heart, and howl for anguish of spirit.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And you shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for grief of spirit.” ¶ Once again, joy in this life and exaltation in the world to come is offered to the true disciples.

15 And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord GOD shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name:

And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For you shall leave your name for a loathing to my chosen.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “And you shall leave your name for an execration to my elect.” ¶ Kay explains it: “for a curse] Lit. ‘an oath;’ *s.w.a.*¹⁹ in the formula, with which the priest was to administer the water of jealousy; ‘the Lord make thee for a curse and for an oath (s.w.) among thy people.’ So would it be with unfaithful Israel (ISAIAH 57:8), when the ‘jealousy’ of the Lord should ‘smoke against’ them (Deuteronomy 29:20). Cp. with ISAIAH 65:16. Obs. In Numbers 5:23 the priest was directed to ‘write these curses in a book.’ The same words are used in Deuteronomy 29:20–21, 27, respecting the curses which were recorded by Moses against the national infidelity.” Cheyne suggests: “For a curse] i.e., as the centre of a formula of imprecation. Comp. Numbers

¹⁸ Elder George Q. Cannon, “Necessity of Union and Obedience to Counsel.” Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, 7 April 1867. JD 12:16b.

¹⁹ Same way as.

5:21; Zechariah 8:13; Psalm 102:8, and especially Jeremiah 29:22, ‘And from thee shall be taken a curse ... saying, Jehovah make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, whom the king of Babylon wasted in the fire.’ The formula is quoted imperfectly, like the first words of a song.” ¶ For the Lord GOD shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “slay with the second death” and “call His righteous servants by another name.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “As for you, the Lord will destroy you; but to my servants, a new name.” ¶ In the Doctrine and Covenants we read: “Then the white stone mentioned in Revelation 2:17, will become a Urim and Thummim to each individual who receives one, whereby things pertaining to a higher order of kingdoms will be made known; And a white stone is given to each of those who come into the celestial kingdom, whereon is a new name written, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it. The new name is the key word” (D&C 130:10–11).” See also ISAIAH 62:2. Kay has: “shall slay thee] s.w.a. ISAIAH 11:4; Hosea 2:3: ‘and slay her (unfaithful Israel) with thirst.’ another name] not taken from Jacob or Judah (ISAIAH 65:9), but from God Himself (Amos 9:12). LXX ὄνομα καὶνόν, identifying it with the ‘new name’ of ISAIAH 62:2.” The fact that this verse is so intimately associated with the new heavens and the new earth, help point out to the proposed exegetical view given here. ¶ This in no way contradicts—but on the contrary reaffirms—the need that we each have to take upon ourselves the name of Christ. Elder Milton R. Hunter beautifully taught: “There has been a growing tendency during the past few years for ministers of various Christian religions, writers and numerous others to deny the divinity of Jesus Christ. They put forth the claim that he was a great teacher and class him among the prophets, but they deny that he was literally the Son of the true and Living God. We, the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, revolt against such teachings, because we know different. We accept Jesus Christ as our Lord, as our God, as our king, as our Savior and Redeemer ...”²⁰

16 That he who blesseth himself in the earth shall bless himself in the God of truth; and he that sweareth in the earth shall swear by the God of truth; because the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes.

That he who blesseth himself in the earth shall bless himself in the God of truth. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “That he who blesseth in the earth shall bless by the God of the covenant.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Shall be given which shall be blessed on the earth: for they will bless the true God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “In which he that is blessed upon the earth, shall be blessed in God, amen.” ¶ Kay has: “That] So that (Genesis 13:16, s.w.) shall bless himself] in God; no longer in the imagination of his heart, Deuteronomy 29:19. the God of truth] A remarkable expression; lit. ‘the God of AMEN,’ of what is firm and true. Vulgate ‘in Deo Amen.’ The Targum points in the right direction when it paraphrases, ‘the God of the covenant;’ for AMEN was the word by which the assembled people on entering Canaan gave their formal assent to the conditions of God’s covenant (Deuteronomy 27:14–26; Joshua 8:33–34). The God, to whom that quality of covenant-keeping truth essentially belongs, is He in whom all shall ‘bless themselves.’ A comparison of Genesis 22:18 and Psalm 72:17 with the present verse shews that ‘the Seed of Abraham’ and the ‘Son of David’ are to be identified with this God of truth: a mystery completely realized in Him Who is ‘the AMEN, the Faithful and True Witness’ (Revelation 3:14; cp. Revelation 19:11).” Rawlinson likewise has: “In the God of truth] literally, in the God of the Amen; i.e. the God who keeps covenant and promise, to which the strongest formula of consent was the word ‘Amen’ (see Numbers 5:22; Deuteronomy 27:15–26; 1 Kings 1:36, etc.).” The righteous that live upon the earth and seek blessings will do so by turning to the Lord. ¶ Birks beautifully suggests: “The effect of the solemn judgment predicted will be deep reverence for God, as the God of truth. The restoration of Israel, the ingrafting of the olive branches after ages of unbelief, will put an open seal to the truth of all God’s prophecies, and the word of God be shewn to be ‘settled for ever in heaven.’” ¶ And he that sweareth in the earth shall swear by the God of truth. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “God of the covenant” rather than God of truth. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they who swear on the earth, will swear by the true God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲑ) has, “And he that sweareth in the earth, shall swear by God, amen.” ¶ In the latter days, sacred oaths or promises will be restored. Some of these through oath formulas, others by the raising of the arm and hand. For instance, when we raise our hands²¹ to sustain our prophets, seers and revelators—as well as others in the Church—this we do with the symbols of oath taking. ¶ Because the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, for the last clause, “And because they shall be hidden from before me.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For they will forget their former affliction and it shall not recur to their mind.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has distresses for troubles. In this wonderful prophetic statement the righteous are blessed with being able to completely forget their past sorrows.

²⁰ Elder Milton R. Hunter, “The Only Name Given Under Heaven,” Conference Report, October 1952, pp. 36–39.

²¹ See for instance, Oath Formulas in Biblical Hebrew by Blane Conklin (2011), Eisenbrauns, p. 13. One of the “authenticating elements,” explains Conklin, includes “raising of the hand.” Logos Bible Software. Book summary with this point is also mentioned in the Journal for the Study of the Old Testament © 2012 SAGE Publications, Book List © The Society for Old Testament Study. I was interested in this book on oath formulas, but it sadly uses transliterations rather than Hebrew text.

vv. 17–25. The new heavens and new earth are associated with the transformations that will take place beginning with the Second Coming of Christ, at the beginning of the Millennium and then when the earth is transformed into its final Celestialized state.

17 ¶ For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. ✓

✓ come upon the heart

For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For there shall be a new heaven and the earth shall be new.” ¶ In Ether we read about the gathering of Joseph, the Ten Tribes, as well as that of Judah; the New Jerusalem and the Old Jerusalem; as well as the new heavens and the new earth: “For as Joseph brought his father down into the land of Egypt, even so he died there; wherefore, the Lord brought a remnant of the seed of Joseph out of the land of Jerusalem, that he might be merciful unto the seed of Joseph that they should perish not, even as he was merciful unto the father of Joseph that he should perish not. Wherefore, the remnant of the house of Joseph shall be built upon this land; and it shall be a land of their inheritance; and they shall build up a holy city unto the Lord, like unto the Jerusalem of old; and they shall no more be confounded, until the end come when the earth shall pass away. And there shall be a new heaven and a new earth; and they shall be like unto the old save the old have passed away, and all things have become new. And then cometh the New Jerusalem; and blessed are they who dwell therein, for it is they whose garments are white through the blood of the Lamb; and they are they who are numbered among the remnant of the seed of Joseph, who were of the house of Israel. And then also cometh the Jerusalem of old; and the inhabitants thereof, blessed are they, for they have been washed in the blood of the Lamb; and they are they who were scattered and gathered in from the four quarters of the earth, and from the north countries, and are partakers of the fulfilling of the covenant which God made with their father, Abraham. And when these things come, bringeth to pass the scripture which saith, there are they who were first, who shall be last; and there are they who were last, who shall be first” (Ether 13:7–12, emphasis added). ¶ Elder Orson Pratt gives an overview of the changes to be experienced by our globe: “First its spiritual creation, secondly its temporal, in which its spiritual and temporal were combined. The next condition is that of restoring it from the fall back to a temporal condition, and then a still greater change [wherein] the new earth will look like unto a sea of glass, and those who are worthy of the celestial glory will inhabit it forever.”²² In other words, we have the (1) paradisiacal, before Adam and Eve partook of the fruit (terrestrial); (2) mortal, after Adam and Eve were expelled from the garden (telestial); (3) millennial, or the time marked by the Second Coming of Christ (terrestrial); and (4) post-millennial, when the earth is transformed into a sea of glass (celestial) conditions. Elder Orson Pratt, speaking of these two last phases explains: “We are told in this that the earth shall die, and pass away, but it shall be quickened again, for God shall quicken the earth upon which we live. It will become a new earth [says he regarding the millennial age—GB]; but will be prepared more perfectly than it was under the three other conditions in which it was placed [speaking of the celestial condition—GB].”

¶ The Brethren seemed mostly agreed that the focus of these Isaianic verses is on the millennial age. Elder Orson Pratt explained that the new heavens and the new earth have “reference to the creation that will be renewed, at the beginning of the millennium.”²³ President Joseph Fielding Smith, who spoke extensively about these verses, also said: “You can see that does not have any reference [these Isaianic verses—GB] at all to the earth when it is celestialized.²⁴ The new heaven and earth have nothing to do at all with this earth [i.e., the future celestialized one—GB] as it will be after it dies and is raised in the resurrection to be a celestial body because then there will not be any death at all. It is going to be restored as nearly as possible to what it was in the beginning. This is coming to pass [the Isaianic verses here quoted—GB] when Christ comes, and that’s part of this restoration.”²⁵ ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained the meanings of the expressions, times of refreshing as associated with a new earth: “This designated period, this times of refreshing, is to take place at the second coming of the Son of Man, in the day when the Lord sends Christ again to earth ... It is elsewhere spoken of by Jesus as ‘the regeneration when

²² Elder Orson Pratt, “The Millennium—The Final Change.” Mount Pleasant, 12 November 1879. JD 21:204–205.

²³ Elder Orson Pratt, “Heaven and Earth to Pass Away.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 1 August 1880. JD 21:327b.

²⁴ So also Rawlinson, leaning on Delitzsch: “... according to Delitzsch, represents the millennial state, not the final condition of the redeemed.”

²⁵ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952, pp. 36–38.

the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory’ (Matthew 19:28). It is the day ‘when the earth shall be transfigured, even according to the pattern which was shown unto mine apostles upon the mount,’ the Lord says. It is the day when ‘the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory’ (Articles of Faith 1:10). It is the day of the ‘new earth’ that Isaiah saw the earth which will prevail when wickedness ceases ...”²⁶ ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught about the exalted nature of some of the buildings constructed on earth: “Therefore, Latter-day Saints, when you return to build up the waste places of Zion, when you build up the New Jerusalem upon the place that he has appointed, whatever materials shall be used, by the blessing of the Priesthood, which God has ordained, these materials will endure forever: they will continue during the thousand years, without waste, and when they shall be caught up to heaven, when the earth flees away, they will still endure in all their perfection and beauty. When these cities shall descend again upon the new earth, in its immortal and eternal state, they will still be as enduring as the earth itself, no more to be subject to the curse, and therefore, will no more waste; death is gone—everything that is corruptible in its nature has ceased, so far as this habitable globe is concerned, and all sorrow and mourning are done away.”²⁷ ¶ Elder LeGrand Richards explained: “... Isaiah tells us that when that day shall come there shall be a new heaven and a new earth in which the lamb and the lion shall lie down together.”²⁸ ¶ CELESTIALIZED NEW HEAVENS AND NEW EARTH. This, as we have explained, will take place the terrestrial globe is transformed into a celestial orb. Elder Orson Pratt speaks of the final change of the earth at the millennium as the new earth: “When the thousand years are passed, the earth will be made new: it will then become a heaven, the habitation of the former and Latter-day Saints, as well as all they who prove themselves faithful who will be born during the Millennium. How long will they inhabit it? Forever”²⁹ President Brigham Young also spoke of the new earth in relation to the final celestialized globe: “The possession of all the gold and silver in the world would not satisfy the cravings of the immortal soul of man. The gift of the Holy Spirit of the Lord alone can produce a good, wholesome, contented mind. Instead of looking for gold and silver, look to the heavens and try to learn wisdom until you can organize the native elements for your benefit; then, and not until then, will you begin to possess the true riches. All the riches, wealth, glory and happiness that we shall ever possess in heaven will be possessed on and around this earth when it is brought up into the presence of God in a sanctified and glorified state; and the sanctified ones who enter through the gate and pass the sentinel into the New Jerusalem,³⁰ and into the presence of the Father and the Son, are the ones who will inherit the new heavens and the new earth in the presence of God, for here is the eternity, the glory and the power.”³¹ ¶ In the Book of Revelation we have—and note the great promise from Rain in Due Season contained therein: “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away” (Revelation 21:1–4, emphasis added, and compare with ISAIAH 65:17–19). ¶ Oswalt, leaning on Delitzsch, well says that these several periods “seem to be telescoped³² together.” ¶ And the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. The LXX (6) reads, “And they shall no more remember former things, nor shall they ever come again into their mind.” The Douay-Rheims (7) has, for the second clause, “And they shall not come upon the heart.” ¶ As in the margin ¶, the literal Hebrew speaks of the heart, but it encompassed the idea of the thoughts:

: וְלֹא תִּזְכְּרֶנָּה עַל-לֵב. LITV translates as: “and they shall not go up on the heart.” ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith tells us, “That is, the earth as it is now, this mundane earth covered all over its face with wickedness will not be remembered when this change comes. We will be glad to get rid of this condition, and we will not bring it up to mind. Remember, in speaking of the heavens he is not referring to the sidereal

²⁶ Bruce R. McConkie, “The Times of Refreshing.” Conference Report, October 1967, pp. 42–44.

²⁷ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Coming Millennium and Triumph of the Saints.” Eighteenth Ward Meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, 25 February 1877. JD 18:348b.

²⁸ Elder LeGrand Richards, “Laying a Foundation for the Millennium.” October 1971 General Conference. Also see October 1974 General Conference, “What after death?”

²⁹ Elder Orson Pratt, “Transformation of the Earth.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 November 1876. JD 18:295b.

³⁰ Rawlinson agrees with the LDS perspective regarding the New Jerusalem: “The ‘new Jerusalem’ is not the old Jerusalem renovated, but is a veritable ‘new Jerusalem,’ ‘created a rejoicing’ (ISAIAH 65:18; comp. Revelation 21:2).”

³¹ President Brigham Young, “True Riches.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 8 April 1862. JD 10:35.

³² The term telescoping, when speaking of the scriptures, means that the prophet looks toward the future—or past—and things seems to be closer to each other, as when using a telescope or binoculars, things that are far apart may seem much closer to each other. So Isaiah may well have seen both the millennium and the celestialized globe in the future as standing closer to each other in time.

heavens. He is speaking of that which pertains to our own earth, the heavens in which the birds fly.”³³

¶ SABBATH DAY. Johns Parker argues that the transfer of the Sabbath day from the 7th day of the week to the 1st day of the week [see notes under ISAIAH 56:2] was symbolic of a new order, alluded to in ISAIAH 65:17–19. Parker writes: “The (Jewish) Sabbath was the memorial day set apart for the commemoration of the work of creation. The prophet says ... the old creation ‘shall not be remembered nor come into mind.’” As Latter-day Saints we believe that so many events are types and shadows of the most important event in eternity, the expiatory sacrifice of our Lord and Savior.

18 But be ye glad and rejoice for ever [in that] which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

But be ye glad and rejoice for ever [in that] which I create: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, for the second half, “rejoice in the world of worlds (or, ‘in the most glorious world’), which I create.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “But in this they shall find joy and gladness.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “But you shall be glad and rejoice for ever in these things, which I create.” ¶ Barnes says: “Forever] It is not to be momentary happiness—like a bright morning that is soon overcast with clouds. The joy of God’s people is to endure for ever, and they shall have ceaseless cause of praise and thanksgiving.” ¶ An important note is provided by Rabbi Ibn Ezra that agrees with the teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, regarding בְּרָאָה [בְּרָאָה], to form: “From this passage it can be proved that the word בְּרָא does not mean ‘to create’ (‘to produce from non-existence into existence’) but ‘to form,’ ‘to renew.’” See Genesis 1:1, בְּרָאשִׁית בְּרָא אֱלֹהֵי אֶת הַשָּׁמַיִם וְאֶת הָאָרֶץ:

¶ For, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For behold I am about to make Jerusalem a subject of joy, and this people of mine a subject of rejoicing.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) also seems to have the Lord rejoicing over Jerusalem. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “For behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and the people thereof joy.” ¶ Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “Isaiah, in the 65th chapter, verses 17–25, by prophetic utterance, declares that there shall come ‘new heavens and a new earth.’ When that day comes Jerusalem shall be cleansed and there shall be joy in her.”³⁴ The earth will have two centers from which the Lord will guide His followers, Jerusalem of old as well as New Jerusalem or Zion.

19 And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, for the last clause, “And my people shall be glad in her.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And I will exult in Jerusalem and rejoice in my people.”

¶ Joy and rejoicing are different than temporary pleasure. These words speak of those who will be exalted and filled with enduring joy. Elder George Q. Cannon taught: “I ask again, what is your aim, or my aim? What do I desire? If I desire celestial glory, the highest law that God has revealed I will be willing to obey, and to observe every word that proceedeth from His mouth. I do not want to speak of myself, but if there is a law that God has revealed and it is necessary to be obeyed before celestial glory can be reached, I want to know it and obey it. All that I am on this earth for is to get celestial glory.”³⁵ President Lorenzo Snow testified: “Through a continual course of progression, our Heavenly Father has received exaltation and glory, and He points us out the same path; and inasmuch as He is clothed with power, authority, and glory, He says, ‘Walk ye up and come in possession of the same glory and happiness that I possess.’ In the gospel, those things have been made manifest unto us; and we are perfectly assured that, inasmuch as we are faithful, we shall eventually come in possession of everything that the mind of man can conceive of—everything that heart can desire.”³⁶ Our great purpose is to achieve such joy and exaltation: “Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy” (2 Nephi 2:25). ¶ And the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And there shall no more be heard therein, the voice of wailing nor the sound of a mournful cry.” The sadness and sorrows that can so easily bring people down in our imperfect world will be no longer. Isaiah goes on to explain some of the reasons for this:

³⁴ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1946, pp. 216–218.

³⁵ George Q. Cannon, Conference Report, April 1900, 55–56. (My daughter-in-law, Terry Billikopf, just sent me these two quotes from Elder Cannon and President Snow as I was reviewing this verse, today 28 September 2017.)

³⁶ President Lorenzo Snow, The Teachings of Lorenzo Snow, 3–4.

³³ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952, pp. 36–38.

20 In those days there shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days; for the child shall not die, but shall live to be an hundred years old; but the sinner [being], living to be an hundred years old, shall be accursed.

In those days there shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “There shall be no more thence a suckling of days, or an old man that shall not accomplish his days.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Nor shall there any more be there an untimely birth, nor an old man, who shall not complete his term.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “There shall be no more in her a child who dies in infancy nor an old man who has not filled his days.” ¶ Birks says: “There shall neither be early death nor premature decay.” Skinner quotes the Pseudepigrapha: “See Charles, Book of Enoch, pp. 26, 55, 98. Comp. Enoch 5:9: ‘And [the elect] will not be punished all the days of their life, nor will they die of plagues or visitations of wrath, but they will complete the full number of the days of their life, and their lives will grow old in peace, and the years of their joy will be many, in eternal happiness and peace all the days of their life’ (cf. also 10:17 and 25:4–5).” And once again we read the heartwarming words of the Prophet Joseph Fielding Smith here: “Ezekiel also speaks of this glorious day, and says that the Lord will make with the people ‘a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land:’ so that the people may ‘dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.’ Moreover they shall be blessed with rains in their proper season, and ‘the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the Lord, when I have broken the bands of their yoke’ (Ezekiel 34:25–27). In the Doctrine and Covenants we have been given further instruction in relation to this glorious and happy time of peace. What joy will fill the hearts of those who are worthy to receive it. They shall not be subject to the ills that now trouble us. We will have no need for hospitals; men shall live in health and vigor until they are old and there shall be no graves, for death shall come as a peaceful transition from the mortal to the immortal state. ‘And he that liveth when the Lord shall come,’ said the Lord to Joseph Smith, ‘and hath kept the faith, blessed is he; nevertheless, it is appointed to him to die at the age of man. Wherefore, children shall grow up until they become old; old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye’ (D&C

63:50–51).”³⁷ On another occasion President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “The Lord definitely fixes the time when this change will come and all corruptible things be removed. It is in the day when enmity shall cease on the earth and love shall take the place of hate even among the beasts and fowl as well as with mankind. It shall be a day when there shall be no sorrow for there shall be no death. Men on the earth will still be mortal, but a change shall come over them so that they will have power over sickness, disease and death. Death shall all but be banished from the earth, for men shall live until they are the age of a tree or one hundred years old (see D&C 63:50–51), and then shall die at the age of man, but this death shall come in the twinkling of an eye and mortality shall give way to immortality suddenly. There shall be no graves, and the righteous shall be caught up to a glorious resurrection. In that day the resurrected Saints will work hand in hand with the mortal Saints on the earth. It is the purpose of the Lord during that thousand years to have the ordinance work performed for all the dead who are entitled to receive it. It is the time of restoration and perfection, when all things pertaining to the Salvation of man will be fulfilled. Mortals must perform in the Temples the ordinance work which pertains to this mortal life. All who are raised in the resurrection also belong to another life, and therefore cannot be baptized, confirmed, ordained, endowed, or sealed for themselves, since all of these ordinances belong to this mortal sphere. Those who have passed through the resurrection will come with the needed records so that those in the flesh, or mortality, can perform the work for their dead. The Prophet Joseph Smith says: ‘Christ and the resurrected saints will reign over the earth during the thousand years. They will not probably dwell on the earth, but will visit it when they please, or when it is necessary to govern it. There will be wicked men on earth during the thousand years. The heathen nations who will not come up to worship will be visited with the judgments of God, and must eventually be destroyed from the earth’ (History of the Church, 20 December 1842). It would be inconsistent for mortals and immortals to dwell together. The resurrected Saints and Christ will visit as Christ did with his disciples for forty days after his resurrection. Their natural abode, however, must be on some celestial world until this world is finally celestialized. Those of the terrestrial order will be on the earth during the Millennium but the time must come, as expressed by Zechariah (Zechariah 14:16–20) and by Joseph Smith in above quotation, when all the heathens who will not repent must eventually be eliminated from the earth. The sinner being one hundred years old, shall be accursed (ISAIAH 65:20). We have seen that when Christ comes the wicked, all things corruptible, will be consumed. In other words all that pertains to the telestial kingdom will be removed from the face of the earth. The sinner spoken of in these references, is the unrepentant man, that is to say, the man who has not accepted the fulness of the Gospel. In the eyes of the Lord such a man, no matter how just or worthy he may be, is a sinner, or one still in his sins (see D&C 84:49–53.)”³⁸ ¶ For the child shall not die, but shall live to be an hundred years old; but the sinner, living to be an hundred years old, shall be accursed. The Targum (T) has, “For even the child that sinneth shall die an hundred years old; but he that is a sinner being an hundred years old shall be thrust out.” The LXX (L) reads, “For he who is a hundred years old shall be young; and the sinner, who dieth at a hundred years, shall be deemed accursed.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “For the child shall die a hundred years old; but a sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, for the first clause, “For the child shall die a hundred years old.” ¶ Elder Lorenzo Snow explained, “But in those days people must live perfectly before the Lord ... When we once get it into our minds that we really have the power within ourselves through the gospel we have received, to conquer our passions, our appetites and in all things submit our will to the will of our Heavenly Father, and, instead of being the means of generating unpleasant feeling in our family circle, and those with whom we are associated, but assisting greatly to create a little heaven upon earth, then the battle may be said to be half won. One of the chief difficulties that many suffer from is, that we are too apt to forget the great object of life, the motive of our Heavenly Father in sending us here to put on mortality, as well as the holy calling with which we have been called; and hence, instead of rising above the little transitory things of time, we too often allow ourselves to come down to the level of the world without availing ourselves of the divine help which God has instituted, which alone can enable us to overcome them.”³⁹ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “As to those who are born after the Millennium and who turn to unrighteousness, their state will be awful. We suppose they will continue to live on an earth where there is no death and that they will be numbered among those of whom Isaiah said: ‘The child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed.”⁴⁰ (ISAIAH 65:20.) Surely there shall be many sons of perdition in that day, for many shall come out in open rebellion against God, knowing perfectly that he is supreme and that they are fighting him and his plan of salvation.”⁴¹ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “The question naturally will arise, if the wicked are to be destroyed when Christ comes, then how can there be wicked men on the earth during the Millennium, as stated by Joseph Smith and Isaiah? It is quite evident that the ‘wickedness’ during that time will be among those who are heathen, or have not come into the Church, and their wickedness consists of failure to receive the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This is according to the Lord’s interpretation, as follows: ‘And by this you may know they are under the bondage of sin, because they come not unto me. For whoso cometh not unto me is under the bondage of sin. And whoso receiveth not my voice is not acquainted with my voice, and is not of me. And by this you may know the righteous from the wicked’ (D&C 84:50–53). Men will be free from the temptations of Satan; peace will be in the hearts of all men, and it is decreed that in time all will receive the truth, for the Gospel is to cover the earth as the waters do the sea ... We cannot help thinking ... that under such conditions of righteousness and influence of the teachings of heavenly beings, the time will not be very long before all people will forsake the ways of the world, and even the heathens will come unto the brightness of the Gospel light. During all these years men dwelling in mortality will have the privilege of associating with those who have received their resurrection. Our Lord and Savior will be a familiar figure among the righteous saints.”⁴²

³⁷ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 308–314.

21 And they shall build houses, and inhabit [them]; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them.

And they shall build houses, and inhabit [them]. The LXX (L) reads, “And they shall build houses and dwell therein.” ¶ Rawlinson, speaking of Rain in Due Season well notes: “The curse pronounced on apostasy in Deuteronomy 28:30 shall no more rest on God’s people. They shall have the fruition of their labours. No enemy shall be able to deprive them of their crops and houses.” ¶ And they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of ³⁸ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1946, pp. 216–218.

³⁹ Elder Lorenzo Snow, “Blessings of the Gospel Only Obtained By Compliance With the Law.” General Conference, Salt Lake City, 7 April 1879. JD 20:191.

⁴⁰ Rawlinson finds it “most remarkable” that sin is “represented as still continuing.” Thanks to the Prophet Joseph Smith we have a better understanding of the millennium and even of the final struggle of Gog and Magog.

⁴¹ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985.

⁴² Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951, pp. 308–314.

them. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruits thereof.” Lowth likewise correctly points out: “They shall not build, and another inhabit” The reverse of the curse denounced on the disobedient, Deuteronomy 28:30. ‘Thou shalt build a house, and thou shalt not dwell therein; thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather the grapes thereof.’”

¶ Nyman has: “The Lord paraphrased these verses in D&C 101:99-101 when he instructed the Saints not to sell their properties in Jackson County, Missouri, and promised that they would be permitted to dwell upon these properties if they would ‘bring forth fruit and works meet for my kingdom.’ During the Millennium, there will be nothing to prevent or impair the inhabitants of the earth from establishing permanent homes and vineyards for their entire lives.”

22 They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for as the days of a tree [are] the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy[✓] the work of their hands.

✓ shall make them continue long, or, shall wear out

They shall not build, and another inhabit. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “They shall not build, and others inhabit.”

¶ Allusion to Rain in Due Season where we read: “Thou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather the grapes thereof” (Deuteronomy 28:30). But now these curses will no longer be because of the righteousness of mankind and the binding of Satan.

¶ They shall not plant, and another eat: The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Nor shall they plant and others eat.” See, once again, Deuteronomy 28:30. What men plant they will be able to eat. ¶ For as the days of a tree [are] the days of my people. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For according to the days of the tree of that life, shall be the days of this my people.” Elder Orson Pratt, speaking of this verse, says: “Isaiah does not say what kind of a tree. It was simply a way the ancients had of comparing a great many things.”⁴³ The age of a tree was defined as a hundred years old, as has already been stated above.⁴⁴ ¶ And mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, “And mine elect shall wear (or, ‘make to continue’) out the work of their hands.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “For they shall wear out the works of their toils.” The Peshitta (Ⓔ) has something like, “And my elect shall eat the work of their hands.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And the works of their hands shall be of long continuance.” ¶ Once again, the work performed will not be spoiled by others. But this also shows that there will be work performed and that mankind will have the joy of working.

23 They shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they [are] the seed of the blessed of the LORD, and their offspring with them.

They shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth for trouble. The Targum (Ⓒ) has, for the last clause, “neither shall they rear up children for death.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “My chosen ones shall not labour in vain, nor shall they bring forth children for a curse.” Regarding the second clause, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has something like, “Nor give birth to children for a curse.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “My elect shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth in trouble.” ¶ AMP translates it: “They shall not labor in vain or bring forth [children] for sudden terror or calamity.” Birks says: “There is an allusion to the legal threatening, Leviticus 26:16⁴⁵ [Rain in Due Season—GB], which is now to be reversed. These righteous dwellers in the land will not ‘bring forth for terror,’ or calamity. Their children will never be exposed to sudden alarm, hurried into captivity, or cut off by the sword; but fathers, children, and children’s children, shall abide secure under the protecting care of the King of Israel.” ¶ For they [are] the seed of the blessed of the LORD, and their offspring with them. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Because they are a seed blessed of God, both they and their offspring.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has posterity instead of seed. ¶ Elder LeGrand Richards, regarding this comment about offspring, says, “That sounds like a continuation of the family, doesn’t it?”⁴⁶ Elder LeGrand Richards also taught, “If I were to ask those of you who are Christians what you love most in all this world, next to your love of God the Eternal Father, if you have Christian principles and you live them, you could not help saying that you love your wives and your children more than anything else. I have said that if I did not have an assurance that God intended that the companionship of husband and wife here in mortality should be projected into the eternal worlds, I would just about as soon believe that death would be a complete annihilation of both body and

⁴³ Elder Orson Pratt, “America a Choice Land.” Old Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 27 December 1868. JD 12:340b.

⁴⁴ See also President Joseph Fielding Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:461.

⁴⁵ “I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it” (Leviticus 26:16).

⁴⁶ Elder LeGrand Richards, “What After Death?” October 1974 General Conference.

spirit, but when the Lord placed Adam in the garden before death was known in the world, he said it was not good for man to be alone, and he gave him a helpmeet. And you know all through the scriptures and the words of the Savior, we are told that these twain shall be one flesh. If Jesus then really performed a great atonement to restore what was lost, then that means that in the great day of the resurrection, we will have our wives and our children. Isaiah understood that fully when he said he saw a new heaven and a new earth, and he tells us that in that new heaven and new earth, we should build buildings and inhabit them, and we should plant vineyards and eat the fruit thereof, that we should not build and another inhabit, nor plant and another eat, for every man should enjoy the works of his own hands and then he adds: ‘... they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their offspring with them’ (ISAIAH 65:23). I wonder if anything in this world could be more important than to know that we can live to enjoy the eternal world with our loved ones.”⁴⁷

24 And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.

And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And it shall come to pass, before they shall pray before me, that I will hear their prayer.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Therefore it shall come to pass, that before they call I will answer them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has hear for answer. ¶ Cowles suggests: “A more precise translation of this verse is, ‘And it shall be that they shall not yet have called, and I will answer; they shall be yet speaking, and I will hear.’” Rawlinson beautifully says: “God is always ‘more ready to hear than we to pray.’ In the ‘new Jerusalem’ he will be prompt to answer his people’s prayers almost before they are uttered. It is involved in this, as Delitzsch notes, that the will of the people shall be in harmony with the will of Jehovah, and that their prayers will therefore be acceptable prayers.” ¶ And while they are yet speaking, I will hear. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And before they supplicate before me, I will grant (or, ‘do’) their request.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And while they are yet speaking I will say, What is the matter.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “As they are yet speaking, I will hear.” ¶ Kay has: “yet speaking” Literally so in Daniel’s case (Daniel 9:20–23). I had a similar experience in the summer of 1991, just after I was called to be a seminary teacher. Linda & I and Brother Gary McDaniel took my seminary class up to Yosemite, before the start of school. As we were walking up the trail Brother McDaniel was overcome by an insulin shock and we almost lost him, were it not by the influence of the Lord. A number of events all combined at exactly the right moment, so his life could be spared. Brother McDaniel, earlier in the hike, shared with Linda that he was a diabetic. While I normally insist that an adult leader stay in front, one in the back, and in this case one in the middle, at the instant that this happened all three adults came together for an instant. Brother McDaniel’s eyes started rolling and next thing we knew he fainted and dropped to the ground. In an instant, Linda was administering sugar to him via drops of soda from Brother McDaniel’s backpack (by ‘mistake,’ he had miraculously packed a regular soda along with a sugar free one). Just as quickly, I pulled out my consecrated oil and began to administer to him. Through the power of the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood I blessed a man who was closer to death than to life, as he was pale white, cold and clammy. As I was performing this ordinance I was cold with fear. I was not far along into the blessing, truly while I was yet speaking, I heard people coming down the trail. Having pronounced the essential parts of the blessing, I closed as I did not want to make a mockery of the Priesthood in front of others. It turned out to be a French doctor and his wife. They encouraged Linda to continue to feed Gary McDaniel more sugar, which had burnt up through the strenuous hike. Brother Gary came to, and with the French physician and Linda’s help, went back to the bottom. I took the rest of the seminary class up to Nevada falls, once it was clear that he would be totally well. Later, Brother McDaniel bore his testimony that he could hear the words of the blessing as he was administered to. ¶ In the summer of 1993, we went to Disneyland, in Southern California, and then to the ocean with Steve & Donna’s family (my brother and sister in law). I could have done without Disneyland, but how I love the ocean. We found a spot to camp in San Clemente. Linda and Donna had to go shopping and left Steve and me in charge of the children. ‘Be careful of the ocean,’ Linda warned. I acknowledged Linda’s request. But internally I reacted, much like children often do when they are told to be careful, by brushing away any concerns. Steve stayed out in the beach with the younger children while I went in with David, Miguel and Bryce, Donna’s eldest son. We had much fun diving under the incoming waves and little by little we got braver. Soon we could no longer touch bottom but it did not matter as swimming in the ocean is so much easier, with the salt helping one stay afloat. At one point I told the boys it would be a good idea to turn around and swim back. Bryce asked, ‘What for?’ ‘Well,’ I thought, ‘what can I do if he will not obey? I must worry about my sons.’ David soon warned me that Miguel was experiencing trouble. I could not see Miguel, as I am so blind without glasses; I had to lean on David's vision to see what was going on. A great fear that Miguel or David could drown overcame me. But the rip tide was separating us from the beach and every effort to swim back was not yielding a positive result. (I later found out that one should not try swimming directly against a rip tide, but rather, swim with it and diagonally, until it loses its strength.) What would I tell my wife or my sister in law if one, or all, of the children that they entrusted to me perished? How foolish I had been. Because I was worrying about them I did not pay attention to my surroundings and a large wave fell upon me pushing me down into the water where it was dark and I had to really battle to make it out on time to catch a breath. I only had time to get a little air when the same thing happened again. I was exhausted and beginning to think I would perish in the ocean. I did not care for my life but that of my children. I felt so impotent now; I had put their lives in danger and was feeling the guilt and bitterness of my actions. How often do we consider how our physical or spiritual course might affect those we love? After receiving the great gift of a testimony of the Gospel of Christ we have a responsibility to hold on to the iron rod and endure to the end. Else, as sometimes happens, people occasionally take a vacation from the truths and values they cherish. But when they come back—assuming they have not drowned or died first—there may be people in their lives who could have grown strong in the gospel but did not. Those hurt through this spiritual tragedy are often the most cherished: spouse and children. It is my most ardent desire and prayer that I may live righteously; that I may endure to the end. But let me continue with my awful predicament. The ocean was furious. I was so worried about my sons that I cared about little else. It was evident we had drifted quite a ways out as people in the beach seemed so small. I felt quite dumb asking for assistance, but the moment came, when I thought my boys or I would die, and with all my strength I shouted 'HELP!' What a joke, with the sound of the waves no one could hear me. Suddenly, I saw a lifesaver, a man swimming towards me with a determined look in his eye. It is not possible he could have heard my plea for help as he was there in an instant. As he approached I begged him to take care of Miguel and not worry about me. Instead, he tackled me with both hands. The next moment we both found ourselves in the deep of the ocean, pushed down by the next wave. I thought this man would drown me. I did not want to expend my energy in trying to get rid of this lifeguard as I did not wish to lose energy and oxygen. Nor did I want him to fight me. When it was clear I would not try and drown him, and we had gone as deep as it seemed we would go, I had to bring both of us back to the surface with my hands and legs while he held on to me. When we got to the surface the lifeguard gave me the lifesaver and I thanked him a thousand times for his help. Without the help of this young man I believe I would have perished in the ocean because of my lack of experience. Meanwhile, I had no hint of what could have happened to David, Miguel or Bryce. Concern for the children was the uppermost in my mind. As it turned out, David and another lifeguard had helped Miguel, who was closer to the beach. Miguel later told me that he was tired of trying to get oxygen and that he spent more time under the ocean than on the surface. He explained that somehow he was able to get a breath of air under the water (and if I recall properly, I had understood him to say that an angel helped him breathe). A third lifeguard helped Bryce, who was not at all concerned with any of this and only panicked when he was informed that he was swimming over a dangerous submerged rock that had sucked people in. It appears we were all going in the direction of this rock when it occurred to me that we should turn back. I felt much joy to know all were safe, but also much agony to sense that I almost lost my sons or my nephew, and that it would have been my fault. How could I have ever faced Linda and told her how I had mishandled my stewardship? How would I have ever faced myself? I was quite depressed for about a day until several scriptures helped me think about this in a different way. One of them was ISAIAH 65:24, 'And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.' The lifeguard who helped me explained that even before we knew we were in trouble, they had called for more help from a coastguard boat. And even before that, it is clear that God knew we were in trouble, and sent help even before we thought to pray. After that, we set some very specific rules: if the lifeguard left his or her post, we would get out of the water immediately; if we drifted past a mark we had set, we would get out of the water and walk back to the other side before we would reenter. Likewise, the Lord has given us commandments and we will be spiritually safe if we stay within the boundaries He has given us.⁴⁸ God is continually aware of us and sends angels to help even before we realize we are in trouble. Truly, before we call the Lord will answer. We need not wait for the Millennium for this to happen.

⁴⁷ Elder LeGrand Richards, “I Tell You of Heavenly Things,” General Conference, 1 October 1962, pp. 108–109.

25 The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and dust [shall be] the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD.

⁴⁸ This is an excerpt I have adapted from my personal journal.

The wolf and the lamb shall feed together. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Then shall the wolves and the lambs feed together.” ¶ Kay has, instead of together, as one, אחד. Birks nicely has: “An allusion, once more, to the earlier prophecy, ISAIAH 11:6, 7, 9.⁴⁹ Thus the whole book is knit together by many secret links, and reveals, from first to last, the unity of design which marks the whole.” Cowles says: “With the exception of the middle clause, this verse is an abridgment of the passage in ISAIAH 11:6–9, and must receive the same interpretation.” Nyman wrote: “This verse is condensed in D&C 101:26, which merely states that the enmity of man and beasts and ‘of all flesh’ will cease during the Millennium.” So we have: “And in that day the enmity of man, and the enmity of beasts, yea, the enmity of all flesh, shall cease from before my face. And in that day whatsoever any man shall ask, it shall be given unto him” (D&C 101:26–27). ¶ Elder Charles W. Penrose taught: “Men shall then be found beating their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more, but every man in every place shall meet a brother and a friend. And this same spirit of peace will also produce a change upon the brute creation, according to the words of prophets who lived centuries ago, and the earth itself will be blessed, the curse be removed therefrom, and he whose right it is to reign will come and rule in the midst of his people.”⁵⁰ ¶ And the lion shall eat straw like the bullock. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And the lion shall eat straw like the ox.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “The lion and the ox shall eat straw.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught, “It is then that the enmity of the beasts of the field as well as that of all flesh will cease; no more one beast of prey devouring and feasting upon another that is more harmless in its nature; no more will this enmity be found in the fish of the sea, or in the birds of the air. This change will be wrought upon all flesh when Jesus comes; not a change to immortality, but a change sufficient to alter the ferocious nature of beasts, birds and fishes. In those days the lion will eat straw like the ox; he will no more be the terror of the forest, but will be perfectly harmless, and gentleness will characterize all the wild and ferocious animals, as well as the venomous serpents, so much so that the little child might lead them and play with them, and nothing should hurt or destroy in all the holy mountain of the Lord; all things becoming, in some measure, as when they were first created. For it will be remembered that animals did not devour one another until after the fall, neither was there any death, until after the fall. What did they eat, then? The Lord said, ‘To every beast of the field, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat.’ The grass, and the herbs, and every green thing were their food. And Adam and Eve ate fruits and vegetables, not animal flesh. The whole earth will be restored; and man will be restored; and not only upon man, but upon all flesh the Spirit of God will be poured out and they will eventually be restored to all that was lost by the fall of our first parents. Then the knowledge of God will cover the whole earth, as the waters cover the great deep. And then the animal creation will manifest more intelligence and more knowledge than they do now, in their fallen condition. Indeed, we have a declaration, by John the Revelator, that when this time shall come, they will even know how to praise God. He says, ‘And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever.’ What? The animal creation endowed with language? Yes, a language of praise, saying something concerning the Lamb that was slain, and about his glory and excellency. What a beautiful creation this will be when all these things are fulfilled.”⁵¹ ¶ And dust [shall be] the serpent's meat. The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “But the serpent shall eat dust as bread.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “And dust shall be the serpent's food.” ¶ Cowles, speaking of the serpent, says: “John the Revelator takes special pains to identify this crafty (shall we say, slippery) personage who is wont to steal some other livery in which to prosecute his malign schemes. ‘The great dragon, that old serpent, called the Devil and Satan, who deceiveth the whole world’ (Revelation 12:9) ... Paul also alludes to the same primal curse, ostensibly upon the serpent, but really upon Satan, when he said, ‘And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly’ (Romans 16:20). This is his paraphrase of the promise, ‘I will put enmity between thee and the woman, between thy seed and her seed; it [her seed] shall bruise thy head,’ the head of the serpent. To the same purport the prophet here says, Satan shall meet his threatened doom, the dust of the earth his meat. He shall ‘bite the dust.’ In the phrase of the author of Psalm 72:9, ‘his’ (the Messiah’s) ‘enemies shall lick the dust,’ trodden beneath his triumphant feet.” Henderson points us to the Book of Revelation: “And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season” (Revelation 20:1-3). ¶ Birks well says: “But here there is an addition, which refers back to the sentence, Genesis 3:14,⁵² and thus links the close of the book with the opening of the Law, as it is linked by its very first words with the message near its close, Deuteronomy 32:1, ‘And the serpent, dust shall be his meat.’ The Vision of Immanuel, and this closing message, allude thus to the two main features of the earliest promise, the gift of the Seed of Woman, and the sentence upon the old serpent. All his devices for evil will be so defeated and overcome, that the only fruit he will gain, from his persevering malice, will be disappointment, and utter and perpetual shame.” ¶ They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD. The LXX (6) reads, “They shall not hurt, nor shall they destroy on my holy mountain, saith the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has kill instead of destroy. ¶ Birks has: “‘All my holy mountain,’ as in ISAIAH 11:9, seems to denote the whole extent of [the Holy Land], the chosen mountain-range of the Lord’s inheritance. But when Israel shall thus blossom and bud, and the chosen vine yield its richest clusters, the face of the whole world will also be filled with fruit, ISAIAH 27:6.” Rawlinson points out: “They shall not hurt nor destroy] Repeated from ISAIAH 11:9, word for word. In neither case should we regard the subject of the sentence as limited to the animals only. The meaning is that there shall be no violence of any kind, done either by man or beast, in the happy period described.” This lack of violence points to the beginning of the Millennial period for at the end of it, we have the final, or second, war of God and Magog.

⁴⁹ “The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fating together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox ... They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea” (ISAIAH 11:6–9).

⁵⁰ Elder Charles W. Penrose, “The Work of Restitution of All Things.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 17 August 1879. JD 20:299b.

⁵¹ Elder Orson Pratt, “Interpretation of Scripture delivered.” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 23 June 1878. JD 20:18a.

FIRST POSTED: 24 April 2017

⁵² “And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:” (Genesis 3:14).

Isaiah 66

Temples are important but they must be operated by the proper Priesthood authority and maintained holy. A remnant of Israel shall be gathered back to the Lord and to the temple. The Book of Mormon would be vital in this gathering effort. Judah shall see the glory of the Lord in Jerusalem; Ephraim, in Zion. A final invitation and warning to come unto Christ is offered.

vv. 1–4. Temples are vital to our eternal salvation but principles of righteousness guide their construction and use. There are consequences for rejecting the Lord.

1 ¶ THUS saith the LORD, The heaven [is] my throne, and the earth [is] my footstool: where [is] the house that ye build unto me? and where [is] the place of my rest?

THUS saith the LORD, The heaven [is] my throne, and the earth [is] my footstool: The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “Thus saith the Lord, The heaven is my throne, and the earth, my footstool: what sort of an house will you build for me?” ¶ Birks has: “The heavens, &c.] There is an allusion to Solomon’s prayer at the consecration of the temple. Four times in succession heaven is there called the dwelling place of God.” Rawlinson says: “The Hebrews, while they earnestly desired to have a material emblem of the presence of God in their midst, were deeply impressed with the feeling that no temple could be worthy of him ... ‘Will God,’ said Solomon, ‘indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heavens of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?’ (1 Kings 8:27). And again, ‘Who is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? Who am I then, that I should build him an house, save only to burn sacrifice before him?’ (2 Chronicles 2:6).” ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff said: “The earth is the footstool of the Lord, and if we ever have any of it for our own the Lord will give it to us; and we ought to be just as faithful to our religion if we had ten thousand million dollars, as if we had not any at all. Eternal life is what we are or ought to be after, and that, whatever our circumstances and condition in life may be, should be our first object.”¹ Elder Neal A. Maxwell observed: “Jesus met irony constantly as He was taunted by circumstances. For instance, this earth is Jesus’ footstool but at Bethlehem there was ‘no room ... in the inn’ and ‘no crib for his bed,’ as ‘foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.”² ¶ Where [is] the house that ye build unto me? and where [is] the place of my rest? The Targum (Ⓒ) has, for the last clause, “And where is the place of the dwelling of my Shekinah.” The LXX (Ⓔ) reads, “And of what sort shall be the place of my rest?” Instead of each instance of where, the Peshitta (Ⓔ) has what (Lamsa) / which (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓓ) has, “What is this house that you will build to me? and what is this place of my rest?” ¶ Some think that the Lord is ridiculing the idea of a temple as His dwelling place when He visits the earth. Nägelsbach explains: “Doubtless there was found in ISAIAH 66:1b merely the thought that there is no place which, as a dwelling, corresponds in the least degree to the greatness of God, and that the Prophet warns against such rude childish notions ... that Jehovah really dwells in the most holy place of the temple as a man dwells in his house. The thought would readily suggest itself when this passage would be considered, that the new temple was not intended to be a place to contain God, but only to be the restoration of the old place where God revealed Himself.” ¶ The building of temples is an integral part of any gathering effort. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “What was the object of gathering the Jews, or the people of God in any age of the world? ... The main object was to build unto the Lord a house whereby He could reveal unto His people the ordinances of His house and the glories of His kingdom, and teach the people the way of salvation; for there are certain ordinances and principles that, when they are taught and practiced, must be done in a place or house built for that purpose. It was the design of the councils of heaven before the world was, that the principles and laws of the priesthood should be predicated upon the gathering of the people in every age of the world ... Ordinances instituted in the heavens before the foundation of the world, in the priesthood, for the salvation of men, are not to be altered or changed. All must be saved on the same principles. It is for the same purpose that God gathers together His people in the last days, to build unto the Lord a house to prepare them for the ordinances and endowments, washings and anointings, etc.”³ The Lord chastised the Saints for their casual attitude towards building a temple: “Wherefore, ye must needs be chastened and stand rebuked before my face; For ye have sinned against me a very grievous sin, in that ye have not considered the great commandment in all things, that I have given unto you concerning the building of mine house” (D&C 95:2–3). The Lord also warned against desecration of His temples, and I believe that this is what Isaiah was speaking about here: “And inasmuch as my people build a house unto me in the name of the Lord, and do not suffer any unclean thing to come into it, that it be not defiled, my glory shall rest upon it; Yea, and my presence shall be there, for I will come into it, and all the pure in heart that shall come into it shall see God. But if it be defiled I will not come into it, and my glory shall not be there; for I will not come into unholy temples” (D&C 97:15–17). When a temple is desecrated, it is as if there were none, so the Lord can well ask, “Where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?” Rawlinson explains that the people have not always been worthy of building a House of the Lord: “They, moreover, are unworthy to build him any house, which is the real ground of the refusal. There was no refusal, when the better part of the exiles, having returned, took the building in hand (see Ezra 3:8–13; 6:14, 15; Haggai 1:8–14; Zechariah 1:16; 4:9, etc.).” The time would come, in the latter-days, when temples would dot the earth; and the time will also come, when a temple will again be built in Jerusalem.

¹ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Parable of the Ten Virgins.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 12 September 1875. JD 18:120.

² Elder Neal A. Maxwell, “Apply the Atoning Blood of Christ.” October 1997 General Conference.

2 For all those [things] hath mine hand made, and all those [things] have been, saith the LORD: but to this [man] will I look, [even] to [him that is] poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word.

For all those [things] hath mine hand made, and all those [things] have been, saith the LORD: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “power” rather than hand, and the second clause, “and have not all these things been?” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “For all these things my hand hath made: and all these things are mine saith the Lord.” Instead of have been, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has belong to me (Lamsa) / are mine (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “My hand made all these things, and all these things were made, saith the Lord.” The Lord is reminding us that He formed and organized the heavens and the earth and universes without number. ¶ But to this [man] will I look, [even] to [him that is] poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “But it shall be my delight to consider the man, even him, who is of an humble and a contrite spirit, and trembleth on account of my word.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Upon whom therefore will I look down, but upon him only who is humble and quiet, and who trembleth at my words?” and to whom shall I look, The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “And where (Lamsa) / with whom (BPE) shall I dwell? But to (Lamsa) / with (BPE) him who is calm and humble, and trembles at my word. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “But to whom shall I have respect, but to him that is poor and little, and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my words?” ¶ Proper temples will be built by the pure in heart who love the Lord. Joseph Smith was the first prophet of this dispensation and truly a man who trembled at the word of the Lord. Every one of the Presidents of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints have been humble men, easily entreated by God.

3 He that killeth an ox [is as if] he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, ✓ [as if] he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, [as if he offered] swine's blood; he that burneth incense, ✓ ✓ [as if] he blessed an idol. Yea, they have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations.

✓ or, kid

✓ ✓ maketh a memorial of

He that killeth an ox [is as if] he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, [as if] he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, [as if he offered] swine's blood. Compare to ISAIAH 29:1. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “As for the wicked man, who sacrificeth to me a young bull: he is one who slayeth a dog: and though lie offereth me fine flour: it will be as the blood of swine.” Instead of dog's neck, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has dog; instead of oblation, the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has *meal offering*⁴ (Lamsa) / cereal (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “He that sacrificeth an ox, is as if he slew a man: he that killeth a sheep in sacrifice, as if he should brain a dog: he that offereth an oblation, as if he should offer swine's blood.” ¶ These words again point us towards the desecration of temples, and return us to ISAIAH 1: “To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the LORD: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats” (ISAIAH 1:11). So also Lowth who has: “These are instances of extreme wickedness joined with hypocrisy, of the most flagitious crimes, committed by those who at the same time affected great strictness in the performance of all the external services of religion. God, by the Prophet Ezekiel, upbraids the Jews with the same practices: ‘When they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it;’ Ezekiel 23:39. Of the same kind was the hypocrisy of the Pharisees in our Saviour’s time; ‘who devoured widows’ houses, and for a pretence made long prayers;’ Matthew 23:14.” Jenour additionally points us to Jeremiah: “Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not; And come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations? Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the LORD” (Jeremiah 7:9–11). ¶ Lowth, Horsley, Alexander and various others, feel that the elliptical expression as if (which is not in the original Hebrew text) constitutes a false ellipsis. Rather, they suggest that the very same individuals who killed a man (such as in human sacrifices to idols), blessed an idol, drank swine’s blood and so forth, where hypocritical enough to enter the Temple and carry out their priesthood duties, or otherwise bring sacrifices to the Lord, despite their unclean, unworthy and bloody hands. Each one of us has to remember to take the Sacrament worthily and enter the House of the Lord worthily, and recall the warning: “Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the LORD” (ISAIAH 52:11). Leaser translates this verse: “He that slaughtereth the ox, slayeth a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, breaketh the neck of a dog; he that offereth a meat-offering, offereth swine’s blood; he that burneth incense, blesseth an idol: yea, they have made choice of their own ways, and in their abominations doth their soul delight.” Alexander explains: “The first clause consists of four similar members, in each of which are coupled a form of sacrifice under the Mosaic Law and an offering which according to that law was inadmissible and even revolting. The ox and the sheep represent the animal sacrifices, the מִנְחָה or meat-offering and the incense those of an unbloody nature. The verbs connected with these nouns are likewise all selected from the technical vocabulary of the law. שָׁחַט and זָבַח both originally signify to slay or slaughter, but are especially applied to sacrificial slaughter in the Pentateuch. מַעֲלֶה is the participle of a verb which means to cause to ascend, and in the language of the ritual, upon the altar. מִזְבִּיחַ is another, of obscurer origin and strict signification, though its use and application are as clear as any of the rest.” The Biblical Illustrator has: “Four legitimate sacrificial acts being bracketed with four detestable idolatrous rites.”⁵ Dummelow suggests: “They who offer the due sacrifices, yet without a proper spirit, are no better than they who perform unclean or idolatrous acts.”⁶ Wesley likewise notes, “The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord.”⁷ ¶ Kay explains: “cut off a dog’s neck] seeking to procure expiation by means of an utterly unclean animal.” Gesenius clarifies that we find עָרַךְ in Exodus 13:13; 34:20; Deuteronomy 21:4, 6, that is found in connection to breaking the neck of sacrificial animals. Fausset writes: “dog’s neck] an abomination according to the Jewish law (Deuteronomy 23:18); perhaps made so, because dogs were venerated in Egypt ... Dogs as unclean are associated with swine (Matthew 7:6; 2 Peter 2:22).” ¶ A great number of exegetes speak of the end of animal sacrifices, and cite these verses as the horror that the Lord will experience from such sacrifices from Judah. This argument has little force because: (1) Where has Judah or Levi carried out sacrifices since the destruction of the Second Temple? Nowhere! (2) Will not Levi carry out sacrifices in a future temple in Jerusalem as shown in Ezekiel’s vision? Yes, we know from the Scriptures (Ezekiel 43:18–27) and the words of the Brethren (History of the Church 4:210–212; Doctrines of Salvation, 3:94] that animal sacrifices will be instituted again at the beginning of the Millennium, for a period. This will be part of the restitution of all things. (Also see notes under ISAIAH 60:7.) ¶ He that burneth incense, [as if] he blessed an idol. Yea, they have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations. The Targum (ܬ) has, “The offering of their gifts is the gift of violence. Yea, they delight in their paths &c.” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “Though he offereth incense for a memorial, he is as a blasphemer. As they have chosen their own ways: and their soul hath delighted in their abominations:” Instead of abominations, the Peshitta (ܫ) has idols. The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “He that remembereth incense, as if he should bless an idol. All these things have they chosen in their ways, and their soul is delighted in their abominations.” ¶ We hear the Lord’s rejection of unrighteous sacrifice in ISAIAH 1: “When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting" (ISAIAH 1:12–13).

³ Joseph Smith (with notes by B.H. Roberts), History of the Church, 5:423–24.

⁴ A general term for sacrifices arising from vegetable matter (Jewish Encyclopedia). ISBE specifies that they were not just any vegetable matter, but such things as cereal or its derivative flour, which required man's toil. In the AV, or KJV, meal offerings were called meat offerings.

⁵ The Biblical Illustrator.

⁶ A Commentary on the Holy Bible edited by J.R. Dummelow.

⁷ John Wesley’s Explanatory Notes.

4 I also will choose their delusions,[✓] and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose [that] in which I delighted not.

✓ or, devices

I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them. The Targum (ⲧ) has, "desire their destruction" instead of choose their delusions. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "I also will chuse their delusions, and pay them back their sins." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) reads something like, "I will also please myself in their delusions and recompense them according to their works." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Wherefore I also will choose their mockeries, and will bring upon them the things they feared." ¶ This is a hint to the coming punishment to those who reject the Lord and His invitation to turn to Him (see D&C 19:15 ff.). Jenour suggests: "I also will choose punishments] Or in other words, 'As they have chosen to follow their own perverse inclinations rather than to obey my will, I also will act towards them as if they were not my people, and will punish them with peculiar severity. I will choose punishments for them greater than those which I ordinarily inflict.' So our Lord declared, concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, 'Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world' Matthew 24:21." ¶ Because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: The Targum (ⲧ) has, "Because, when I sent my prophets, yea, they did not repent; they prophesied, but they obeyed not." The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "Because I called them and they did not answer—I spake, but they did not listen." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) reads something like, "Because when I called, none did answer; I spoke yet they heeded not." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, "Because I called, and there was none that would answer; I have spoken, and they heard not." ¶ One man told me, "I don't need God, and if I ever do I will worry about that then." See D&C 101:6 ff. ¶ But they did evil before mine eyes, and chose [that] in which I delighted not. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "But did that which is evil in my sight, and chose the things in which I did not delight." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second clause, "And have chosen the things that displease me." ¶ Mankind has been given moral agency to choose between the words of life or a rejection of the same. In ISAIAH 41 we read of the consequences of these decisions. In Doctrine and Covenants we read: "And unto him that repenteth and sanctifieth himself before the Lord shall be given eternal life. And upon them that hearken not to the voice of the Lord shall be fulfilled that which was written by the prophet Moses, that they should be cut off from among the people. And also that which was written by the prophet Malachi: For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. Wherefore, this shall be the answer of the Lord unto them: In that day when I came unto mine own, no man among you received me, and you were driven out. When I called again there was none of you to answer; yet my arm was not shortened at all that I could not redeem, neither my power to deliver. Behold, at my rebuke I dry up the sea. I make the rivers a wilderness; their fish stink, and die for thirst. I clothe the heavens with blackness, and make sackcloth their covering. And this shall ye have of my hand—ye shall lie down in sorrow. Behold, and lo, there are none to deliver you; for ye obeyed not my voice when I called to you out of the heavens; ye believed not my servants, and when they were sent unto you ye received them not" (D&C 133:62–71, emphasis added).

vv. 5–14. Here we read of the glorious gathering of Judah and Ephraim unto the Lord—from the remnant. In Doctrine and Covenants we read, "Behold, this is the blessing of the everlasting God upon the tribes of Israel, and the richer blessing upon the head of Ephraim and his fellows. And they also of the tribe of Judah, after their pain, shall be sanctified in holiness before the Lord, to dwell in his presence day and night, forever and ever" (D&C 133:34–35). Once again, we see the joy to be experienced by those who love the Lord and tremble at His word, in contrast to those who reject Him, or are contrary to Him. Judah shall join the fold when the Lord appears in Jerusalem and stands on the Mount of Olives. A nation shall be born in a day. All those who love Judah and Jerusalem shall rejoice and be filled with peace. Judah shall be comforted.

5 ¶ Hear the word of the LORD, ye that tremble at his word; Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the LORD be glorified: but he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed.

Hear the word of the LORD, ye that tremble at his word. The Targum (ⲧ) has, beginning with second clause, "O ye righteous! who tremble on account of the words of

His will.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “Hear the decisions of the Lord — ye who tremble at his word.” ¶ Birks notes: “The faithful remnant, the poor and contrite, in whom God takes delight, now receive words of encouragement.” Alexander explains that the act of trembling is associated with “reverently waiting for it.” That is, those who love the word of the Lord and are ready to follow it. ¶ Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the LORD be glorified: The Targum (⚡) has, for the last clause, “Let the glory of the Lord be magnified, that we may see your joy.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “Say, ‘O our brethren—to them who hate you and are abominable, that the name of the Lord may be glorified.’” The Peshitta (⚡) has, “Say to your brethren who hate you and who despise you for my name’s sake, Let the LORD be glorified.” ¶ Regarding the faithful remnant, Birks has: “They are to expect persecution for a little season from their unbelieving countrymen; but a speedy judgment on the persecutors will follow, while the sufferers shall receive a marvellous deliverance.” And not just countrymen, but from those who ought to show brotherly love but instead will persecute them in their false notions of religion. These are after the same type who thought they were doing God a favor when they crucified His Son. Horsley has: “Your unbelieving countrymen pretend that their persecution of you proceeds from a zeal for my honour, and they challenge you to obtain a display of my powers in your behalf, if you are indeed my servants. ‘Let him deliver him now if he would have him,’ was their language when our Saviour hung upon the cross.” The prophets were also subject to oppression. The Prophet Joseph Smith lamented: “During the space of time which intervened between the time I had the vision and the year eighteen hundred and twenty-three—having been forbidden to join any of the religious sects of the day, and being of very tender years, and persecuted by those who ought to have been my friends and to have treated me kindly, and if they supposed me to be deluded to have endeavored in a proper and affectionate manner to have reclaimed me ...” (JS—History 1:28). ¶ But he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed. The Targum (⚡) has, “But they shall be confounded.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “And appear to their joy, when they shall be ashamed.” The Peshitta (⚡) has, “And rejoice in your joy, and they shall be ashamed.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “And we shall see in your joy: but they shall be confounded.” ¶ In the Book of Mormon we further read regarding the sign that would be given before the first coming in the American continent—to the joy of the believers and the shame of the detractors: “But there were some who began to say that the time was past for the words to be fulfilled, which were spoken by Samuel, the Lamanite. And they began to rejoice over their brethren, saying: Behold the time is past, and the words of Samuel are not fulfilled; therefore, your joy and your faith concerning this thing hath been vain. And it came to pass that they did make a great uproar throughout the land; and the people who believed began to be very sorrowful, lest by any means those things which had been spoken might not come to pass. But behold, they did watch steadfastly for that day and that night and that day which should be as one day as if there were no night, that they might know that their faith had not been vain. Now it came to pass that there was a day set apart by the unbelievers, that all those who believed in those traditions should be put to death except the sign should come to pass, which had been given by Samuel the prophet. Now it came to pass that when Nephi, the son of Nephi, saw this wickedness of his people, his heart was exceedingly sorrowful. And it came to pass that he went out and bowed himself down upon the earth, and cried mightily to his God in behalf of his people, yea, those who were about to be destroyed because of their faith in the tradition of their fathers. And it came to pass that he cried mightily unto the Lord all that day; and behold, the voice of the Lord came unto him, saying: Lift up your head and be of good cheer; for behold, the time is at hand, and on this night shall the sign be given, and on the morrow come I into the world, to show unto the world that I will fulfil all that which I have caused to be spoken by the mouth of my holy prophets” (3 Nephi 1:5–13, also see 2 Peter 3:3–4a). There are a number of like signs that will be to the derision and shame of those who oppose the work—but a joy to those who wait with trembling and joyful expectation for the same. These signs include the establishment of an ensign to the world, the sending forth of the Book of Mormon as predicted in 3 Nephi 21; and the appearance of the Son of God when He stands on the Mount of Olives (Zechariah 14:4).

6 A voice of noise from the city, a voice from the temple, a voice of the LORD that rendereth recompence to his enemies.

A voice of noise from the city, a voice from the temple. The Targum (⚡) has, for the first clause, “A voice of a tumult from the city of Jerusalem.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “A sound of screaming from the city! a sound from the temple!” The Peshitta (⚡) has tumult instead of noise. ¶ Birks explains: “This verse answers closely to Zechariah 12:3–6; 14:3, announcing an appearance of the Lord in a time of Gentile apostasy, and of sore distress to Israel already in part restored, to accomplish the long delayed redemption of Zion. The ‘voice of noise’ is the war cry, used here, as in ISAIAH 42:14, for the terrible display of Divine anger. A type of it may be seen in 2 Kings 7:6.” What is the voice from the temple? It is the voice of the Lord, the Holy One of Israel. We read in the words of John the beloved: “And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father’s name written in their foreheads. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps” (Revelation 14:1–2). Perhaps, in part, the torrents of water spoken of below, in ISAIAH 66:12, will also be heard. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “Judah must return, Jerusalem must be rebuilt, and the temple, and water come out from under the temple, and the waters of the Dead Sea be healed. It will take some time to rebuild the walls of the city and the temple ... and all this must be done before the Son of Man will make His appearance.”⁸ See Zechariah 14:8 and Ezekiel 47. In Ezekiel we read: “And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east: and his voice was like a noise of many waters: and the earth shined with his glory” (Ezekiel 43:2). Also, from the Book of Revelation we have: “And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp twoedged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength. And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death” (Revelation 1:13–18). And in Doctrine and Covenants we have: “Hearken and hear, O ye inhabitants of the earth. Listen, ye elders of my church together, and hear the voice of the Lord; for he calleth upon all men, and he commandeth all men everywhere to repent. For behold, the Lord God hath sent forth the angel crying through the midst of heaven, saying: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight, for the hour of his coming is nigh—When the Lamb shall stand upon Mount Zion, and with him a hundred and forty-four thousand, having his Father’s name written on their foreheads. Wherefore, prepare ye for the coming of the Bridegroom; go ye, go ye out to meet him. For behold, he shall stand upon the mount of Olivet, and upon the mighty ocean, even the great deep, and upon the islands of the sea, and upon the land of Zion. And he shall utter his voice out of Zion, and he shall speak from Jerusalem, and his voice shall be heard among all people; And it shall be a voice as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder, which shall break down the mountains, and the valleys shall not be found. He shall command the great deep, and it shall be driven back into the north countries, and the islands shall become one land; And the land of Jerusalem and the land of Zion shall be turned back into their own place, and the earth shall be like as it was in the days before it was divided. And the Lord, even the Savior, shall stand in the midst of his people, and shall reign over all flesh” (D&C 133:16–25). ¶ A voice of the LORD that rendereth recompence to his enemies. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the first half, “A voice of the Word of the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “The voice of the Lord rendering a recompense to his adversaries!” ¶ These words here refer back to ISAIAH 66:5, to those who would not answer when the Lord called after them. But now Israel will walk in the light of the Gospel and those who walk contrary will receive the corresponding punishment. ¶ This is the theme of ISAIAH 66: joy to the faithful and recompense of punishment to those who are contrary. In Rain in Due Season we read: “And if ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me; Then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins” (Leviticus 26:23–24).

7 Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child.

She brought forth means that she gave birth, while travail means to have pain related to the birthing process. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Before distress cometh upon her, she shall be redeemed; and before trembling cometh upon her, like the pains of a woman in child-bearing, her King shall be revealed.” ¶ Pauli notes regarding this passage in the Ⲯ, “Notice this remarkable passage: Before Jerusalem was destroyed her King, Christ, was revealed.” This has reference to the siege of Jerusalem that will take place in the last days, and the Son of God will appear in glory will be revealed as He stands upon the Mount of Olives. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “That a woman hath brought forth before she travailed; that before her pangs came on, they are over and a male child born.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Before she was in labour, she brought forth; before her time came to be delivered, she brought forth a man child.” ¶ Redak, in Rabbi Rosenberg, points to Scriptures related to the day when Jerusalem will be surrounded on all sides by her enemies: “The intention is that the commencement of the salvation will be sudden and painless. Before it is complete and before all the exiles are restored to their land, however, there will be a short time of trouble, which can be likened to birth pangs. Comp. supra ISAIAH 26:20: ‘Hide but for a moment until the wrath passes.’ This alludes to the war of Gog and Magog. Zechariah, too, depicts ... tribulations, (14:2–7) ‘And the city shall be captured, and the houses shall be plundered ... and the Lord shall come out and wage war with those nations ... at the time of evening there shall be light.’ This is the birth after the birth pangs mentioned in the preceding verses.” Birks likewise refers to the time when Christ will gloriously appear and stand upon the Mount of Olives, which shall be split in two (as mentioned right after in Zechariah): “Zion is here compared to a woman, whose travail is scarcely begun when her child is born. In other passages the severity of the trial is taught, here its exceeding shortness, so as scarcely to deserve the name of travail ... The wonder is that a whole land shall bring forth, and a whole nation be brought forth, in one such brief hour of suffering. The man-child here is the ‘righteous nation, keeping the truth,’ ISAIAH 26:2, redeemed Israel, born to a new and manly faith in the true Messiah through bitterest sorrow for their own and their fathers’ unbelief, ISAIAH 62:12; Zechariah 12: 9–14.” We have encountered a theme about Judah being surprised she is not alone, but that the Lord has gathered of the other tribes, e.g., ISAIAH 49:21 (Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?); ISAIAH 54:1 (Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD); and ISAIAH 55:5 (Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the LORD thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee). Here, in ISAIAH 66:7, we seem to have a dual meaning. They may allude to the relatively fast conversion of the Lamanite nation, but the main significance maybe another. This verse seems to point to the conversion of Judah. While a large portion of those in Jerusalem will perish, the rest will be rescued by the Savior to whom they will turn.

⁸ Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 286.

8 Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? [or] shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, beginning with the third clause, “Is it possible that a country be made in one day, and a nation be created at once? But Zion shall be comforted, and shall be filled with the people of her captivity.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Who hath heard such a thing, or who hath seen the like? Did ever the earth bring forth in a day, or was ever a nation born at once? That Sion should travail and bring forth her children.” Instead of born at once, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has born in an hour. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Who hath ever heard such a thing? and who hath seen the like to this? shall the earth bring forth in one day? or shall a nation be brought forth at once, because Sion hath been in labour, and hath brought forth her children?” ¶ Elder Charles A. Callis, of the Twelve, shared these thoughts about Judah which bring tears of joy to my eyes: “Orson Pratt and Charles W. Penrose declared that prior to the glorious coming of the Son of God, the Jews are going to be beleaguered by the nations who threaten the very existence of the Jewish race. Then, according to Zechariah, down through the gates of heaven shall come the Lord Jesus Christ, the Captain and King for whom the Jews have wept and prayed so long, and he shall set his feet upon the Mount of Olives, and the Mount shall cleave asunder, and the Jews shall escape destruction. The God of heaven shall then, with the armies of heaven, have judgment upon the wicked, and the wicked shall be destroyed. When Jesus stands before the Jews, they will see the wounds in his hands and, recognizing their Lord and God, they shall say: ‘... What are these wounds in thine hands?’ And then Jesus shall break the hearts of the Jews by saying: ‘Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.’ And that nation then, and not until then, shall be born in a day. By the authorized servants of God they shall receive the baptism of repentance; they shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and become the children of God their Father and the servants of the great Jehovah. At that time a fountain shall be opened up unto the Jews and the inhabitants of Jerusalem a fountain for the cleansing of sin and iniquity, and that fountain shall be as it always has been, the Lord Jesus Christ.”⁹ ¶ Then Elder Spencer W. Kimball shared some writings in which Elder Wilford Woodruff in 1873 disclosed his testimony that “the Lamanites will blossom as the rose” but admitted that “the fulfillment of that prophecy is perhaps harder for me to believe than any other revelation of God that I have ever read ... [and given the reduction and oppression of the Lamanites] It looks as though there would not be enough left to receive the gospel; but notwithstanding this dark picture, every word that God has ever said of them will have its fulfillment, and they, by and by, will receive the gospel. It will be a day of God’s power among them and a nation will be born in a day” (JD 15:282). Elder Kimball also quoted the Prophet Joseph Smith and President Brigham Young—both speaking about the lack of coincidence in the ⁹ Elder Charles A. Callis, “Our Glorious Destiny,” Conference Report, October 1945, pp. 80–83, emphasis added.

Saints moving west and the need to preach the Gospel to the Lamanites.¹⁰ Finally, Elder Kimball quoted an experience of Elder Wilford Woodruff among the sons of Lehi: “The Isletas are one of the Pueblo groups down in New Mexico. I view my visit among the Nephites one of the most interesting missions of my life ... I say Nephites, because if there are any Nephites on this continent, we have found them among the Zunis, the Lagunas, and the Isletas, for they are a different race of people, altogether, from the Lamanites. I class the Navajo, Moquis (Hopis) and Apaches with the Lamanites, although they are in advance of many Indian tribes of America. I class the Zunis, Lagunas, and Isletas among the Nephites. [And after concluding a meeting with them, one of the Isletas Nephites arose] ... full of the spirit of the Lord and said, ‘Friends, why do you dismiss us and leave us this way? This is the first time we have heard of our forefathers and the gospel and the things we have looked for from the traditions of our fathers. If our wives and children are weary, let them go home. We want to hear more. We want you to talk all night. Do not leave us so.’”¹¹ Today, the Church among the Lamanite nations is very strong. Present-day members give this little thought, but the early Saints did not know how the Lord would fulfill such a promise. And the gathering is not just for the Lamanites, but for all the children of Israel wherever they may be scattered—even in the Spirit World.

9 Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut [the womb]? saith thy God.

✓ or, beget?

Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “I am God; I have created the world from the beginning, saith the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “I myself gave this expectation; yet thou didst not remember me, saith the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Shall not I that make others to bring forth children, myself bring forth, saith the Lord?” ¶ Alexander puts it: “The sense now put upon the figure by the general consent of interpreters is, that he who begins the work may be expected to accomplish it, to be both its author and its finisher.” Birks has: “This is God’s answer to the whispers of unbelief. The event, even to those who witness it, will be so strange, as to seem almost past belief, Psalm 126:1. But still the power, wisdom, and truth of God are engaged for its fulfilment. The whole history of the Jewish people, through long ages, has been like a slow and tedious gestation for this joyful birth at the last.” ¶ Elder Erastus Snow quoted this verse to show God’s ability to accomplish what He wishes to accomplish:

“‘Mormonism’ does not coerce, but all the time persuades, teaches, enlightens, instructs, and invites by the beauty, excellence, and virtue of those holy principles which God has revealed to us, gradually drawing the people together, cementing their feelings, and bringing them, by common consent, to act upon the principles of truth and righteousness. There is but one alternative for this people: it is our religion, our God, our liberty, or slavery, the Devil, and death. There is no drawing back. The wedge has been entered. Our God has led us forth and directed our course from the beginning to the present hour. ‘Shall I cause to come to the birth,’ saith the Lord, ‘and not bring forth?’ No.

Although the woman in travail and in pain to be delivered suffers anxiety, mingled with fear, yet soon her sorrow is forgotten, for joy that a man child is born into the world. So it will be with this people, and our enemies cannot hinder it. The Devil and all the hosts of hell cannot prevent the consummation of the desired object that God has in view. The kingdom of God is established, no more to be thrown down; and in it we shall live and reign, and every righteous man and woman who love God and his truth more than their own lives and the treasures of this world shall be exalted in the kingdom of God: they shall see the triumph of truth and righteousness, and the kingdom of God shining on the earth as the sun in the firmament.”¹² ¶ Shall I cause to bring forth, and shut [the womb]? saith thy God. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “I, even I have created all men; I, even I have scattered them among all the nations, also I will gather thy captivity, saith the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Behold did I not make her who beareth; and her who is barren? Said thy God.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Is it not I who causes to bring forth &c.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Shall I, that give generation to others, be barren, saith the Lord thy God?” ¶ Rawlinson says: “... should I, having done so much, interpose at the last moment, to shut the womb?” Leeser has: “... shall I who cause to bring forth, now prevent it? saith thy God.” That would be completely illogical. So, we can count on the Lord bringing forth these wonderful promises, of the birth of Judah at the end of days. We can rejoice as if it was an accomplished matter.

¹⁰ Kimball, Elder Spencer W., “The Work Among the Lamanites,” Conference Report, Oct. 1950, pp. 64–69. This is a very moving address by then Elder Kimball.

¹¹ Kimball, Elder Spencer W., “The Work Among the Lamanites,” Conference Report, Oct. 1950, pp. 64–69.

¹² Elder Erastus Snow, “Opposition of State Governments to the Saints,” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 29 November 1857. JD 6:92.

10 Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her:

Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that love her: The LXX (⚡) reads, “Rejoice Jerusalem! and sing praises therein, all ye who love her!” ¶ Birks suggests that these verses pertain to the return of the natural olive branches. See Romans 11:15–26a. In Romans Paul is warning the Gentile nations against pride and self-righteousness. In the Book of Mormon the Lord has made it clear that it matters not if we are Jew or Gentile, but if we will hearken unto the voice of the Lord: “Wherefore, he that fighteth against Zion, both Jew and Gentile, both bond and free, both male and female, shall perish” (2 Nephi 10:16). Also see 2 Nephi 26:33. The prophecies we are considering, then, are not those of predestination. Yet, the Lord can see what is going to happen in regard to the wild and the natural branches. Angel Moroni¹³ taught the Prophet Joseph Smith: “And he further stated that the fulness of the Gentiles was soon to come in” (JS–History 1:41b). One of the best ways to understand these words in Romans is to study the allegory of the olive tree in Jacob 5. ¶ Who are they who love Jerusalem? All those who love the Jews and realize that in due time the natural branches will be grafted back into the vine. ¶ Rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her: The LXX (⚡) reads, “Be exceedingly joyful with her, all ye who mourn for her!” The Lamsa Peshitta (⚡) has, “Rejoice in joy with her, all you who mourn over her.” ¶ And who are they who mourn for Jerusalem? All those who are filled with the pure love of Christ for Judah and are not imbued with feelings of superiority. Judah will be gathered and received into the bosom of the Lord. In ISAIAH 66:13 the Lord makes it clear that He is comparing the figure of a mother’s love to His own love for Judah.

11 That ye may suck, and be satisfied with the breasts of her consolations; that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance[✓] of her glory.

✓ or, brightness

¹³ In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “And now, verily saith the Lord, that these things might be known among you, O inhabitants of the earth, I have sent forth mine angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel, who hath appeared unto some and hath committed it unto man, who shall appear unto many that dwell on the earth. And this gospel shall be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people” (D&C 133:36–37). Angel Moroni brought forth the Gospel and the Book of Mormon.

That ye may suck, and be satisfied with the breasts of her consolations. The Targum (⚡) has, “In order that ye may delight yourselves and be satisfied with the food (or, ‘spoil’) of her consolations.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “That you may suck and be satisfied from the breast of her consolation.” The Lamsa Peshitta (⚡) has, “That you may suck and be satisfied with the comfort of her breast.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has filled instead of satisfied. ¶ Alexander has: “Those who have sympathized with Zion in her joys and sorrows shall partake of her abundance and her glory. ¶ The figure of a mother is continued, but beautifully varied.” ¶ That ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance of her glory. The Targum (⚡) has, “In order that ye may drink and overflow with the wine of her glory.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “That you may suck and be fed deliciously, at the commencement of her glory.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “And flow with delights, from the abundance of her glory.” ¶ Leeser has: “In order that ye may sip, and find pleasure from the abundance of her glory.” The general idea is that those who rejoice with Judah shall at the end also rejoice because they will be blessed. The scripture has: “And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed” (Genesis 12:3).

12 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream: then shall ye suck, ye shall be borne upon [her] sides, and be dandled upon [her] knees.

For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream: The Targum (⚡) has, in the second half, “peace, as the floods of the river Euphrates, and the glory of the nations, as an overwhelming stream.” The LXX (⚡) reads, “For thus saith the Lord, Behold I will glide to them like a peaceful stream, and like a torrent deluging the glory of nations.” The Peshitta (⚡) has something like, “For thus says Yahweh: Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, like an overflowing torrent; and they shall suck the glory of the Gentiles.” The Douay-Rheims (⚡) has, “For thus saith the Lord: Behold I will bring upon her as it were a river of peace, and as an overflowing torrent the glory of the Gentiles.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “I will extend peace to her like a river] literally, I will direct peace to her, like a river. The waters of streams are in the East directed hither and thither by the agriculturist. God would have given his people ‘peace, as a river,’ long previously, had they permitted him (ISAIAH 48:18) ... Like a flowing stream] literally, as an overflowing torrent. There is perhaps a contrast intended between the former and the latter times. In the former times Assyria had swept over Israel like an overwhelming flood to destroy her (ISAIAH 8:7–8); now the glory of the whole Gentile world [or rather, Gentile nations—GB] should similarly overflow and overwhelm, but only to enrich and exalt.” ¶ Judah is promised here that many of her blessings will come through the efforts of the Gentiles. All who love Judah will be comforted. This is an allusion to what was already taught: “Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breast of kings: and thou shalt know that I the LORD am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob” (ISAIAH 60:16). ¶ Then shall ye suck, ye shall be borne upon [her] sides, and be dandled upon [her] knees. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And ye shall delight yourselves: ye shall be borne [i.e., carried] upon the sides, and ye shall be nourished upon the knees.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “Their children shall be carried on shoulders, and shall be dandled on knees.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has something like, “And you shall be carried on the litters and be dandled upon the knees.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Which you shall suck; you shall be carried at the breasts, and upon the knees they shall caress you.” ¶ Once again, this verse speaks of the blessings that will be brought upon Israel by the Gentiles—also an important theme in the Book of Mormon. Nägelsbach writes: “And because the Prophet has here before his mind the image of maternal love and solicitude on the one hand, and on the other that of a child’s wants, he adds here, and ye shall suck. Herewith he points back to ISAIAH 66:11, where he had designated Jerusalem as the source of consolations. Here he tells us that the spring of that spring will be the LORD. But that maternal care is not restricted to the affording of nourishment. The children shall also be faithfully carried (על-צד) on the hip, after the common oriental custom, ISAIAH 60:4). They will also be lovingly played with, caressed, and rocked on the knees. The LORD here again ascribes to Himself maternal love and maternal conduct.”

13 As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.

As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, for the second clause, “So my Word shall comfort you.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, for the first clause, “As one whom the mother caresseth.” ¶ See also ISAIAH 40 regarding Judah and her companions: “Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the LORD’S hand double for all her sins” (Isaiah 40:1–2). Regarding אֶחָד, Rawlinson has: “As one] literally, as a man. Israel is now looked upon as grown up, and receiving comfort from God himself in Jerusalem.” Rabbi Ibn Ezra has: “‘So I will comfort you’—Note the positioning of the pronoun ‘I’ (אֶחָד) first for emphasis. Compare ISAIAH 51:12: ‘I, I am He who comforts you.’” Once again, it is the Lord Himself who will comfort Judah. Jenour notes: “St. Paul employs the same figure, 1 Thessalonians 2:7, ‘We were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children.’” Oswald says: “This is one of the few places in the Bible where God is directly compared to a mother, and most commentators agree that the comparison has been used to reinforce the depth of God’s concern and care for his children. When he gives them courage, strength, hope, and will (comforts them), these are not merely arm’s-length transactions. They are an expression of the intimate, personal involvement of a loving, personal God with his people.” ¶ And ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “And in Jerusalem you shall find consolation.” For it is in Jerusalem that the tribe of Judah will see their Lord and Savior appear to them after the tragic hour when she is surrounded on every side. It is Christ who is Jerusalem’s true comfort and the comfort of the whole earth.

14 And when ye see [this], your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like an herb: and the hand of the LORD shall be known toward his servants, and [his] indignation toward his enemies.

And when ye see [this], your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like an herb. The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “And you shall see it, and your heart shall rejoice; and your bones shall flourish like a green herb.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has “And when you shall see this, your heart shall rejoice and your bones shall flourish like tender grass (Lamsa) / green herb (BPE).” ¶ Rawlinson has: “In the time of calamity, Israel’s ‘bones’ have been ‘consumed’ (Psalm 31:10), and ‘waxed old’ (Psalm 32:3), and ‘burned with heat’ (Job 30:30). Now they shall enjoy a time of refreshing from the Lord. New life shall enter them, and health and growth shall follow. The nation shall be rejuvenated, and ‘flourish’ in more than its pristine strength.” Alexander has: “And ye shall see, and your heart shall leap (with joy) etc.] The object of address still continues to be those who had loved Zion, and had mourned for her, and whom God had promised to comfort in Jerusalem.” After Judah’s ‘warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned’ the time of great rejoicing in her Lord and King, even the Holy One of Israel, will become manifest. ¶ And the hand of the LORD shall be known toward his servants, and [his] indignation toward his enemies. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the power of the Lord shall be revealed to do good to His righteous servants; but a curse shall come upon His enemies.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And the hand of the Lord will be made known to them who fear him. And it will terrify them who are disobedient.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has “And the hand of the LORD shall be stretched out toward his servants, and he shall destroy his enemies (Lamsa) / adversaries (BPE).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, for the second clause, “And he shall be angry with his enemies.” ¶ While man seeks vengeance regarding his enemies, the Lord’s punishment is directed towards our reformation: “How oft have I called upon you by the mouth of my servants, and by the ministering of angels, and by mine own voice, and by the voice of thunders, and by the voice of lightnings, and by the voice of tempests, and by the voice of earthquakes, and great hailstorms, and by the voice of famines and pestilences of every kind, and by the great sound of a trumpet, and by the voice of judgment, and by the voice of mercy all the day long, and by the voice of glory and honor and the riches of eternal life, and would have saved you with an everlasting salvation, but ye would not!” (D&C 43:25).

vv. 15–24. The Lord shall send His messengers to gather all the nations unto Christ and His temples. Judah shall see the Glory of God in Jerusalem. The Book of Mormon shall be the sign used to gather Israel (see Ezekiel 37:15 ff.). Judah’s priests and Levites will be restituted. The millennial day is coming and each individual’s life will be judged according to their moral agency. Elder Orson Pratt taught: “We, as Gentiles,” explains Elder Pratt, “have cause to rejoice; that is, we who are numbered with the Gentile nations (for there may be many of the blood of Israel among us) ... In order to show still more clearly that the Gentiles are to be the characters that are to carry this ensign to the nations, we will refer you to the last chapter of Isaiah—‘For I know their works and their thoughts: and it shall come, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and see my glory.’ How is He going to do this work? He says, ‘I will set a sign among them.’ The same thing as spoken of in the passages already referred to—‘And I will send those that escape of them unto the nations’ (here go the missionaries)—‘to the isles afar off, that have not heard my fame.’ They will go among the idolatrous nations, to Hindostan, Siam, China, to the Sandwich Islands, etc. ‘And they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles’ (ISAIAH 66:18–19) ... The children of Israel will be gathered just as literally as they formerly brought an offering into the house of the Lord ... and we will have missionaries in every part of the nations of the earth afar off, and we will declare His glory among every nation, people, kindred, and tongue; and as fast as we get the people to believe in the standard the Lord has raised up, we will introduce them into the kingdom, baptize them for the remission of sins, and lay our hands upon them in the name of Jesus Christ, as he has commanded us, and they will receive the Holy Ghost, and be filled with mighty faith, and they will be armed with the power of God, in great glory ... and nothing will be able to compete with the work of the Lord; but it will progress and continue to roll on, until every nation hears, and every heart is penetrated, and the heavens and the earth shall come together.”¹⁴ ¶ About twenty years later, Elder Orson Pratt further taught regarding ISAIAH 66:18–20: “... Do this people desire to know what the sign predicted by the mouth of Isaiah means? Do you wish to know the nature of that sign? Let me refer you to the words of the everlasting God that have been uttered from the heavens, declared in this record brought forth in the last days, the Book of Mormon ... [As] uttered by the mouth of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, when he appeared personally upon this great western continent, and taught the ancient nations of America ... —that is, when this book, called the Book of Mormon, should be made known unto the Gentiles—‘that they may know concerning this people who are a remnant of the house of Jacob, and concerning this my people who shall be scattered by them in the latter days. Verily, I say unto you, when these things shall be made known unto them of the Father, and shall come forth of the Father, from them unto you. (3 Nephi 21)’”¹⁵

15 ¶ For, behold, the LORD will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire.

For, behold, the LORD will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “revealed” for come. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For behold! the Lord will come as a fire, and his chariots as a whirlwind.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “Behold, the Lord will come with fire” ‘Fire’ is a usual accompaniment of a ‘theophany.’ God descended on Sinai ‘in fire’ (Exodus 19:18), and led the Israelites through the wilderness by the pillar of the cloud and of fire (Exodus 13:21, 22), and filled the tabernacle with a glory as of fire (Exodus

¹⁴ Elder Orson Pratt, “The Ancient Prophecies.” Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 7 January 1855. JD 2:295–296.

¹⁵ Elder Orson Pratt, “Gathering of Israel.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 11 April 1875. JD 18:16–17. Emphasis added.

40:34), and ‘answered David from heaven by fire upon the altar of burnt offering’ (1 Chronicles 21:26), and in the same way answered Solomon (2 Chronicles 7:1) and Elijah (1 Kings 18:38). Isaiah almost always describes a theophany as a ‘coming with fire’ (see ISAIAH 10:16–18; 27:4; 29:6; 30:27, 30; 33:12, 14, etc.). The agency of fire in the judgment that will overtake the wicked simultaneously with Christ’s second coming, appears in 2 Thessalonians 1:8; 2 Peter 3:7–10.” ¶ In Joseph Smith’s own theophany he reports: “I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me ... When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!” (JS—History 1:16–17). In another account of the Prophet’s vision, from the hand of Elder William Smith, Joseph’s brother, we are told that “While engaged in prayer a light appeared in the heavens, and descended until it rested upon the trees where he was. It appeared like fire. But to his great astonishment, did not burn the trees.”¹⁶ Furthermore, when the Lord comes we know that the earth will burn with consuming fire: “And every corruptible thing, both of man, or of the beasts of the field, or of the fowls of the heavens, or of the fish of the sea, that dwells upon all the face of the earth, shall be consumed; And also that of element shall melt with fervent heat; and all things shall become new, that my knowledge and glory may dwell upon all the earth” (D&C 101:24–25). ¶ Rawlinson suggests: “Like a whirlwind] The whirring of the wheels of chariots, their noise, the swiftness of their pace, and the destruction that they cause, make this simile most appropriate.” Shalom Paul has: “His chariots are like a whirlwind] Cf. Nahum 1:3: ‘He travels in whirlwind and storm.’ The Lord’s chariot is alluded to in other biblical verses, e.g., Habakkuk 3:8; Psalm 77:19. For a similar image connected to an enemy invasion of Judah, see ISAIAH 5:28: “‘Their horses’ hooves are like flint; their chariot wheels like the whirlwind”; see also Jeremiah 4:13. 1QIsa^a (¶) וכסופה, instead of וכסופה, corresponds with the preceding באש.” ¶ To render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire. The LXX (¶) reads, “To execute his vengeance with wrath and his rebuke with flaming fire.” Instead of render, the Peshitta (¶) has pour out (Lamsa) / discharge the heat (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (¶) has, “To render his wrath in indignation, and his rebuke with flames of fire.” ¶ Birks points out that we read of similar judgments in ISAIAH 42:25; 17:13; and 11:4. The fire will burn all of the wood that has been separated from the true Vine. ¶ In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “Behold, it is my will, that all they who call on my name, and worship me according to mine everlasting gospel, should gather together, and stand in holy places; And prepare for the revelation which is to come, when the veil of the covering of my temple, in my tabernacle, which hideth the earth, shall be taken off, and all flesh shall see me together. And every corruptible thing, both of man, or of the beasts of the field, or of the fowls of the heavens, or of the fish of the sea, that dwells upon all the face of the earth, shall be consumed; And also that of element shall melt with fervent heat; and all things shall become new, that my knowledge and glory may dwell upon all the earth” (D&C 101:22–25). Also see Malachi 3:2; and ISAIAH 33:14b–15.

16 For by fire and by his sword will the LORD plead with all flesh: and the slain of the LORD shall be many.

For by fire and by his sword will the LORD plead with all flesh: The Targum (¶) has, “judge” for plead. The LXX (¶) reads, “For with the fire of the Lord all this land shall be tried, and all flesh with his sword.” The Lamsa Peshitta (¶) has, “For by fire will the LORD judge, and by it will he test all flesh.” The Douay-Rheims (¶) has, “For the Lord shall judge by fire, and by his sword unto all flesh.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Kodoshim, Zevachim 116a) well has: “The Lord sitteth as King for ever, he replied: the Holy One, blessed be He, has already sworn that He will not bring [another] flood upon the world. Perhaps, they ventured, He will not bring a flood of water, yet He will bring a flood of fire, as it is said, For by fire will the Lord contend?” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ In Doctrine and Covenants we read that the time will come when the Lord will continue to plead with mankind through natural and other disasters. See D&C 88:88–91. ¶ Elder Wilford Woodruff taught: “With fire and sword the Lord will plead with all flesh, and as the prophet has said respecting this event, ‘the slain of the Lord will be many;’ and these things will overtake the world in an hour when they expect them not, when they will be crying peace, but alas, peace will have departed from them ... I want to say to the Latter-day Saints: exercise faith in God, and exercise faith in his revelations, and read them and ponder over them, and pray earnestly that you may have a correct understanding of all that God has revealed, that you may grow in the light and knowledge of God, and see the importance of living your religion and of living uprightly before him.”¹⁷ ¶ And the slain of the LORD shall be many. The Targum

¹⁶ Elder William Smith (1883), William Smith on Mormonism, p. 8.

¹⁷ Elder Wilford Woodruff, “Fulfillment of Prophecy,” Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 30 June 1878. JD 19:360–361.

(ⲧ) has, “And the slain shall be many before the Lord.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Many shall be the slain of the Lord!” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “And the slain of the LORD shall be many.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt taught of the transition from the calamities associated with the Second Coming to the transformation of the earth during the Millennium, “But the earth is to undergo a change in which it will be sanctified and made glorious ... and all the armies of the wicked slaughtered. And when the prediction of Isaiah is fulfilled, that the slain will be from one end of the earth to the other, and the earth changed in its position, and a beautiful climate introduced, and all the dry ground made habitable, and the rough places made smooth, the valleys raised, and the mountains leveled down ...”¹⁸ Wordsworth points out: “the slain of the Lord shall be many” As Christ Himself says, ‘Those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before Me’ (Luke 19:27); and as is said in the Apocalypse, describing their future destruction: they ‘were slain with the sword of Him that sat upon the horse,’ —Christ (Revelation 19:21). Cp. Joel 3:2, 12–15.” Oswalt proposes: “One must remember that the slain here are those who fall as a result of the final effects of the world’s choice of sin over righteousness. Corpses fill the streets of the city not because God in some arbitrary and tyrannical fashion decides to obliterate his enemies, but because to live in defiance of God’s creation ordinances is to fill the world with cruelty and violence. God’s work is to remove the restraining forces and let the evil that the world has chosen run its terrible course. Finally, sin carries with it its own judgment, and virtue carries with it its own reward.”

17 They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens behind one ✓ [tree] in the midst, eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, saith the LORD.

✓ or, one after another

They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens behind one [tree] in the midst. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They who prepare and purify themselves in the gardens of idols, multitude after multitude.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They who consecrate and purify themselves for the gardens.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) has something like, “Those who consecrate and purify themselves in the gardens, one after the other in the midst.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲡ) has, “They that were sanctified, and thought themselves clean in the gardens behind the gate within.” ¶ Isaiah seems to be speaking of idolatry as it was prevalent in his day. In the latter-day this would be replaced by intellectual idolatry. So also Birks who suggests: “A comparison with ISAIAH 65:3 seems to shew that the historical groundwork of the rebuke is taken from actual forms of idolatry under Manasseh. But the context implies that these represent certain marked features of ungodliness in the last days.” ¶ Eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, saith the LORD. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they who, in the outer courts, eat swine’s flesh, and the abominations and the mouse, shall for this be consumed together, said the Lord.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) has something like, “Eating swine’s flesh, and reptiles and mice, shall together be extinguished, says the LORD.” ¶ Kay explains that perhaps this is in relation to: “idolatrous ceremonies, like those portrayed [i.e., engraven, see Leeser] in Ezekiel 8:10–11, where the ‘elders’ stood with incense before ‘every from of creeping things’ (among which the ‘mouse’ is placed in Leviticus 11:29) ‘and abominable beasts’ (s.w.a. Leviticus 11:41) ...”

18 For I [know] their works and their thoughts: it shall come, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and see my glory.

The Targum (ⲧ) has, for the first clause, “Their works and their thoughts are revealed before me,” and also adds people to nations and tongues. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “As I know their works and their reasoning I am coming to gather together all the nations and the tongues, and they shall come and see my glory.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) does not have the clause, “it shall come.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲡ) has, “Beginning with the second clause it renders it, “I come that I may gather them together &c.” ¶ Alexander explains: “To see the glory of Jehovah is a phrase repeatedly used elsewhere to denote the special manifestation of his presence and his power.” The phrase “I know thy works,” is also used in Revelation 3:15a of those who walk contrary to the Lord. Here it is their works and their thoughts. Once again we sense intellectual idolatry. David pleads with the Lord to strengthen him and help him improve: “Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting” (Psalm 139:23–24). ¶ I sense at least two meanings to this transitional verse, ISAIAH 66:18. Sometimes, when I inspect a movie I am editing, there are transitional moments in which we see two scenes superimposed together. We see the ending scene overlaid on the beginning one that follows. Both images appear together. ¶ When I look at this verse as the culmination of what has been said, it is possible to see a world that has turned against Israel and Jerusalem, but now they would be in for a surprise: the Lord had permitted the world to come against Jerusalem (Zechariah 14:2–4) but He would now show His glory before the world as He comes to her rescue. He will come to the rescue; He will stand on the Mount of Olives. He will do so in glory. So also Rabbi Ibn Ezra: “This passage refers to the war of Gog and Magog.” The Savior could anticipate the wicked thoughts and intents of the world regarding His people Israel. As we shall see, this concluding scene is picked up again in ISAIAH 66:21. Birks has: “Messiah’s answer to the scoffers of the last days—when they say, ‘Where is the promise of his coming?’ They shall see His glory in judgment on the profane, and long-delayed mercy to Zion.” These comments from Birks are interesting to us as Latter-Day Saints because in the Book of Mormon we could see similar attitudes from the scoffers towards the believers, as it related to the first advent of our Savior (see the above quoted 3 Nephi 1:5–13). ¶ In the next superimposed scene we see the Savior’s appearance associated with Mount Zion and the New Jerusalem. In the Messenger and Advocate we read, “ ‘A revelation of Jesus Christ unto his servant Joseph Smith, Jr. and six elders, as they united their hearts and lifted their voices on high; yea, the word of the Lord concerning his church established in the last days for the gathering of his saints to stand upon mount Zion, which shall be built, beginning at the Temple Lot, which is appointed by the finger of the Lord, in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri, and dedicated by the hand of Joseph Smith, Jr. and others, with whom the Lord was well pleased. Verily, this is the word of the Lord, that the city New Jerusalem shall be built by the gathering of the saints, beginning at this place, even the place of the temple, which temple shall be reared in this generation; for verily this generation shall not all pass away until an house shall be built unto the Lord and a cloud shall rest upon it, which cloud shall be even the glory of the Lord, which shall fill the house’ [D&C 84:1–5]. ‘For I know their works, and their thoughts: it shall come, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and see my glory.’ According to this quotation the glory of the Lord shall appear; but they must come to a certain place in order that they can see it. Our former quotation determines the place, and who dare dispute it? The Lord has said by the mouth of Isaiah; that he would perform his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act.”¹⁹

¹⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, “Changes in the Configuration of the Globe.” Twentieth Ward Meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, 3 December 1876. JD 18:318b.

¹⁹ September 1835, Cowdery, Oliver, et al., eds. Messenger and 19 And I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them unto the nations, [to] Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow, [to] Tubal, and Javan, [to] the isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles.

And I will set a sign among them, and I will send those that escape of them unto the nations. The Targum (Ⓣ) adds, “To the province of the sea.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And I will leave among them a sign, and those of them who escape I will send to the nations.” Instead of of them unto the nations, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has I will send among the nations (Lamsa) / I will send to the nations (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, beginning with the second clause, “And I will send of them that shall be saved, to the Gentiles.” ¶ Kay says: “set a sign”²⁰ the words used in Exodus 10:2,²¹ Psalm 78:43; 105:27, of the miracles which accompanied the redemption out of Egypt ... It has been held probable by some, that the final ingathering may be preceded by a miraculous manifestation of Christ, which shall be to Israel nationally what the vision near Damascus was to Saul.” If so, and it fits well with the reading, the appearance of Christ in Jerusalem, when He stands on the Mount of Olives seems to fit perfectly. But the gathering of her sister Ephraim (speaking of the ten tribes) will be preceded by another sign, that of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Alexander writes: “By a sign Grotius understands a signal, making אֹת equivalent to נֶאֱמַר in ISAIAH 5:26, 11:12, 18:3, 62:10.” In other words, the ensign to the nations. While such ensign to the nations is without a doubt part of it, the Book of Mormon is what is meant here, as taught by Elder Orson Pratt.^{22 23} As I read this scripture I also felt a confirming spirit testify that the Book of Mormon is the promised sign. The Book of Mormon will be used, as taught in Ezekiel Advocate: The Latter Day Saints’ Messenger and Advocate. 3 vols. Kirtland, Ohio: F. G. Williams & Co., et al., October 1834 to August 1837. Electronic text prepared by the Department of Church History and Doctrine, Brigham Young University, 1991, p. 189.

²⁰ In this case it is in the singular, sign, אֹת.

²¹ “And that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son’s son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs [אֹתַי] which I have done among them; that ye may know how that I am the LORD” (Exodus 10:2).

²² Pratt, Elder Orson. “Gathering of Israel, Etc.” Journal of Discourses 18:4, 11 April 1875, pp. 16–29.

²³ Elder Orson Pratt, “Gathering of Israel.” New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 11 April 1875. JD 18:19.

37, to gather Israel back to the Lord. ¶ [To] Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow, [to] Tubal, and Javan. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Pul and Lud, that draw the bow, and smite with it, to the province of Tubal, and Javan.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “To Tharsis and Phud and Lud and Mosach and to Thobel and Greece.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Into the sea, into Africa, and Lydia them that draw the bow: into Italy, and Greece.” ¶ Rawlinson has: “These shall be sent (as missionaries) to the distant nations ... Of these nations, Tarshish (Tartessus) was at the furthest limit westward, Pul and Lud, or rather Phut and Lud, at the furthest limit southward, Tubal and Javan at the furthest limit northward. Pul, which occurs nowhere else in Scripture as a geographic name, is almost certainly a wrong reading for Phut, which occurs in Genesis 10:6, and also three times (Jeremiah 46:9; Ezekiel 27:10; 30:5) in connection with Lud. Phut designates an African nation, probably the Nubians, whom the Egyptians called Pet, and who were noted as bowmen.” ¶ [To] the isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “and to the far distant isles. They who have not heard my name nor seen my glory—even they shall proclaim my glory among the nations.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “To them that have not heard of me,” instead of that have not heard my fame. ¶ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “To read Isaiah (with understanding!) is to know that the Messianic gospel was for all men; that none were to be denied its blessings ...”²⁴ The ends of the earth would hear the Gospel of Christ preached. Furthermore, the work for our departed in the temples of the Lord is one of the most glorious principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, along with missionary work for the living. As a youth I knew that someday I would belong to a missionary oriented church.

20 And they shall bring all your brethren [for] an offering unto the LORD out of all nations upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, ✓ and upon mules, and upon swift beasts, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD.

✓ or, coaches

And they shall bring all your brethren [for] an offering unto the LORD out of all nations upon horses, and in chariots. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And they shall bring your brethren from all the nations, as a gift for the Lord with horses and chariots.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has gift rather than offering. ¶ Alexander observes: “The survivors [i.e., remnant—GB] sent forth to the nations are then described as bringing back the converts to the true religion as an offering to Jehovah. Their return for this purpose is described as easy, swift, and even splendid, all the choicest methods of conveyance used in ancient times being here combined to express that idea.” ISAIAH 66:20 is intimately related to the gift brought to the Lord’s temples by the missionaries, which is mentioned in ISAIAH 18:7. ¶ The Lord further admonished: “Let us, therefore, as a church and a people, and as Latter-day Saints, offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness; and let us present in his holy temple, when it is finished, a book containing the records of our dead, which shall be worthy of all acceptance” (D&C 128:24). ¶ Rawlinson has: “They shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord” When the distant Gentiles [see ISAIAH 18, better, Gentile nations—GB] have been converted, they shall bring to Christ the Jews of the dispersion, who dwell with them in the remote parts of the earth (comp. Zephaniah 3:10²⁵).” Kay has: “The Hebrew order is: They shall bring all your brethren out of all the nations for an offering. By the analogy of the language in Numbers 18:28–29, this may mean, ‘Your brethren from among all the nations.’” ¶ And in litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Yea, with songs,” for swift beasts. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “In litters borne by mules with umbrellas over them.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “and in coaches” instead of “and upon swift beasts.” ¶ We have noted the similarity of these verses with those of ISAIAH 18. Birks interestingly comments: “The word, כִּרְכֻרִית, ‘swift beasts,’ AV, by others, ‘dromedaries,’ may be from the same root as curru, currus, circulo [circulo in Spanish, i.e., circumference—GB], and denote thus ‘rolling carriages.’ One striking characteristic of modern times consists in the rapidity of distant journeys, and the new inventions by which men ‘run to and fro’ through the earth.” See similar notes in ISAIAH 18:2, about speedy vessels to be used in preaching the Gospel to scattered Israel. Lowth suggests regarding and in litters [כִּרְכֻרִית]: “There is a sort of vehicle, much used in the East, consisting of a pair of hampers, or cradles, thrown across a camel's back, one on each side; in each of which a person is carried. They have a covering to defend them from the rain and the sun." Then Elder Wilford Woodruff also applied these Scriptures to the gathering of the Saints to Zion: "And when that first handcart company came into the city [Salt Lake City], I, indeed, thought of the old prophet, for if they did not come with litters it was as near as possible to it, and I now believe that from this time forth handcarts will be used more than horses, mules, and oxen."²⁶ ¶ To my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, "Into the house of the sanctuary of the Lord" for the last clause. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "To the holy city Jerusalem, said the Lord; as the children of Israel brought up their sacrifices for me with songs of praise to the house of the Lord." ¶ Once again, this is very similar to the last clause of ISAIAH 18:7, "the mount Zion" (ISAIAH 18:7). Both mount Zion and my holy mountain Jerusalem have reference to the House of the Lord. ¶ Moroni taught: "Now I would that ye should remember that God has said that the inward vessel shall be cleansed first, and then shall the outer vessel be cleansed also" (Alma 60:23). Those who will come to the Lord will have cleansed their inner vessel and be ready to be a proper and acceptable offering before the Lord. This involves a lifelong effort.

²⁴ McConkie, Bruce R. The Promised Messiah, Utah: Deseret Book Company, pp. 503–505.

²⁵ Much like ISAIAH 18 we there have: “Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the LORD, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy. For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering” (Zephaniah 3:8–10).

21 And I will also take of them for priests [and] for Levites, saith the LORD.

The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "And of them I will take priests and Levites, said the Lord." With this verse we seem to again return to the ending scenes before the beginning of the Millennium. After Judah is converted, she will once again have of her own peoples who will be ordained to operate in that sacred temple to be constructed in Jerusalem as described by Ezekiel. Levi will be among the tribes who are now mingled with Judah. At that time the sons of Levi will again offer such sacrifices: "Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness" (JS—History 1:69, also see D&C 128:24). Brother Oliver Cowdery explains it similarly: "Upon you my fellow-servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer this Priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the Sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness!" (JS—History Note: 6). ¶ During the Millennium, animal sacrifice will be reinstituted for a period. This may well be necessary to help Judah, and her allied tribes, come to a better understanding of the original purposes associated with these sacrifices—that is, to point to the expiatory offering of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Elder Orson Pratt said: "... I will take of them for priests and Levites, saith the Lord." Indeed! Is the Lord going to have priests and Levites after gathering Israel from all nations? Yes. 'I will take of them for priests and Levites, saith the Lord.'"²⁷

22 For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD, so shall your seed and your name remain.

For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "For as the new heaven and the new earth, which I make, shall remain in my presence, saith the Lord." The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, for the middle clause, "Which I will make to stand before me." ¶ Once again, there shall be two separate new heavens and new earths. The first, associated with the Millennium, and the second with the final state of the Celestialized earth. The latter will last forever and the idea is that just as it will everlasting, so is the following promise. ¶ So shall your seed and your name remain. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, "So shall your seed and your name be established." The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, "So shall your seed stand, and your name." ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained: "Here, then, is a restitution or restoration predicted in the last chapter of Isaiah that the Lord will gather the House of Israel from all lands to His holy mountain Jerusalem, and that He will then take of them for priests and Levites. Furthermore let us see what the following passage says concerning the continuation of this lesser Priesthood of Levi: 'For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I shall make, shall remain before me, so shall your seed and your name remain;' or in other words your priesthood, the priesthood which I have conferred upon the seed of Levi, shall remain just as eternal as the new heavens and the new earth."²⁸

²⁶ Elder Wilford Woodruff, "The Facilities Afforded by the Handcart Movement for the Gathering of Israel." Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, 6 October 1856. JD 4:100.

²⁷ Elder Orson Pratt, "Mormonism." Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 24 February 1869. JD 12:360.

²⁸ Elder Orson Pratt, "Mormonism." Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, 24 February 1869. JD 12:361–362.

23 And it shall come to pass, [that] from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, [✓] shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.

✓ from new moon to his new moon, and from sabbath to his sabbath

And it shall come to pass, [that] from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, from the second clause, “at the time of the beginning of each month, and at the time of each Sabbath.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And it shall be, that month after month and sabbath after Sabbath.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And there shall be month after month, and sabbath after Sabbath.” ¶ These words seem to speak of the perpetuity in which Judah and Ephraim shall worship before the Lamb. In Doctrine and Covenants we read: “Behold, this is the blessing of the everlasting God upon the tribes of Israel, and the richer blessing upon the head of Ephraim and his fellows. And they also of the tribe of Judah, after their pain, shall be sanctified in holiness before the Lord, to dwell in his presence day and night, forever and ever. And now, verily saith the Lord, that these things might be known among you, O inhabitants of the earth, I have sent forth mine angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel, who hath appeared unto some and hath committed it unto man, who shall appear unto many that dwell on the earth. And this gospel shall be preached unto every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people. And the servants of God shall go forth, saying with a loud voice: Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; And worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters—” (D&C 133:34–39, emphasis added). Note, also, how the Lord is anxious for those who have been converted to strengthen their brethren. ¶ Shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “All flesh shall come to worship before me, in Jerusalem, said the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, “And all flesh shall come to adore before my face, saith the Lord.” ¶ The children of Israel were commanded to so worship: “And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God” (Deuteronomy 26:10b). That all flesh that remain upon the earth would worship the Son is also prophesied in the book of Psalms: “The meek shall eat and be satisfied: they shall praise the LORD that seek him: your heart shall live for ever. All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee” (Psalm 22:26–27).

24 And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second half, “The sinners, who have rebelled against my Word.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And they shall go forth, and see the carcases of those men, who have transgressed against me.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, for the first half, “And they shall go out, and see the carcases.” ¶ הַפְּשָׁעִים בִּי, “transgressed against me.” Gesenius explains: “פָּשַׁע—(1) TO FALL AWAY, BREAK AWAY from any one ... properly TO BREAK a covenant entered into with him ... Specially to turn away from God.” In other words, to become apostate. Birks has (emphasis added): “The whole prophecy closes with a solemn contrast between the blessings to the righteous, and the shame and misery of the rebellious and profane. Earth, redeemed from the curse, will become the scene of holy and perpetual worship ... Israel is to be restored, the earth is to be redeemed, and earthly blessings, most rich and various, are to be enjoyed, in the promised restitution of all things. But these earthly blessings of Israel, when the wilderness of Zion becomes as Eden, and her desert as the garden of the Lord, though glorious in the extreme, point onward and upward to the higher glories ...” ¶ For their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the first clause, “For their souls shall not die.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “For their worm shall not die and their fire shall not be quenched.” President Brigham Young explained: “Let the Elders of this Church go forth and preach that every person who does not become as they are will have to suffer the wrath of God ...”²⁹ The worm that shall not die is a reference to the spiritual pain that the departed spirits who turned against the Lord will feel. The Lord explains: “And surely every man must repent or suffer, for I, God, am endless. Wherefore, I revoke not the judgments which I shall pass, but woes shall go forth, weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, yea, to those who are found on my left hand. Nevertheless, it is not written that there shall be no end to this torment, but it is written endless torment. Again, it is written eternal damnation; wherefore it is more express than other ²⁹ President Brigham Young, “The Three Glories.” Bowery, Great Salt City, 26 August 1860. JD 8:155a.

Scriptures, that it might work upon the hearts of the children of men, altogether for my name's glory. Wherefore, I will explain unto you this mystery, for it is meet unto you to know even as mine apostles. I speak unto you that are chosen in this thing, even as one, that you may enter into my rest. For, behold, the mystery of godliness, how great is it! For, behold, I am endless, and the punishment which is given from my hand is endless punishment, for Endless is my name. Wherefore—Eternal punishment is God's punishment. Endless punishment is God's punishment. Wherefore, I command you to repent, and keep the commandments ..." (D&C 19:4–13a). ¶ Lowth has: "These words of the Prophet are applied by our blessed Saviour, Mark 9:44. to express the everlasting punishment of the wicked in Gehenna, or in Hell ... Our Saviour expressed the state of the blessed by sensible images; such as Paradise, Abraham's bosom, or, which is the same thing, a place to recline next to Abraham at table in the kingdom of heaven: see Matthew 8:11 ... for we could not possibly have any conception of it, but by analogy from worldly objects. In like manner, he expressed the place of torment under the image of Gehenna; and the punishment of the wicked, by the worm which there preyed on the carcasses, and the fire which consumed the wretched victims:—marking however, in the strongest manner, the difference between Gehenna and the invisible place of torment; namely, that in the former the suffering is transient—the worm itself, that preys on the body, dies; and the fire, which totally consumes it, is soon extinguished;—whereas in the figurative Gehenna the instruments of punishment shall be everlasting, and the suffering without end; for there 'the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.'" ¶ And they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And the wicked shall be judged in hell, till the righteous shall say concerning them, we have seen enough." The Targum (Ⲯ) has some interesting notions in this verse about the truthfulness regarding the resurrection and perpetuity of the soul for both righteous and wicked. Also, about the judgment role to be played by the judges in Israel, especially the Twelve Apostles. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, "And they shall be a spectacle to all flesh." The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, "And they shall be a loathsome sight to all flesh." ¶ This clause reminds us of how people will look upon Satan when they pass onto the spirit world: "They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, and consider thee, saying, Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms" (ISAIAH 14:16). Rawlinson says: "The Jewish rabbis regarded it as anomalous that any portion of Scripture should conclude with words of ill omen. When, therefore, this chapter was read in the synagogue, or the last of Ecclesiastes, or Lamentations, or Malachi, they directed that after the reading of the last verse, the last verse but one should be repeated, to correct the sad impression that would otherwise have been left upon the mind. But Isaiah thought it salutary to leave this sad impression (comp. ISAIAH 48:22; 57:21)." I suppose I am much like these Jewish rabbis and would have loved the book to finish on a more cheerful note. One of the most powerful chapters from the Book of Mormon, for me, is Alma 41. It too, ends in a similar way: "For that which ye do send out shall return unto you again, and be restored; therefore, the word restoration more fully condemneth the sinner, and justifieth him not at all" (Alma 41:15). Our Lord says: "Say nothing but repentance unto this generation; keep my commandments, and assist to bring forth my work, according to my commandments, and you shall be blessed" (D&C 6:9). As a prophet of God, it was Isaiah's charge to invite us to turn unto Christ and live. We read that Isaiah was found "among the great and mighty ones who were assembled in this vast congregation of the righteous ..." (D&C 138:38, 42). Of Isaiah's mission we also read: "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me. And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but they understood not; and see ye indeed, but they perceived not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and convert, and be healed. Then said I, Lord, how long? And he said, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate. And the Lord have removed men far away, for there shall be a great forsaking in the midst of the land. But yet in it there shall be a tenth, and they shall return, and shall be eaten; as a teil tree, and as an oak, whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves; so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof" (ISAIAH 6:8–13, JST). So, like my Jewish Rabbi ancestors, I will also end on a happy note. For how can we not rejoice as we dwell on all that the Lord has done for us? "Brethren, shall we not go on in so great a cause? Go forward and not backward. Courage, brethren; and on, on to the victory! Let your hearts rejoice, and be exceedingly glad. Let the earth break forth into singing. Let the dead speak forth anthems of eternal praise to the King Immanuel, who hath ordained, before the world was, that which would enable us to redeem them out of their prison; for the prisoners shall go free. Let the mountains shout for joy, and all ye valleys cry aloud; and all ye seas and dry lands tell the wonders of your Eternal King! And ye rivers, and brooks, and rills, flow down with gladness. Let the woods and all the trees of the field praise the Lord; and ye solid rocks weep for joy! And let the sun, moon, and the morning stars sing together, and let all the sons of God shout for joy! And let the eternal creations declare his name forever and ever! And again I say, how glorious is the voice we hear from heaven, proclaiming in our ears, glory, and salvation, and honor, and immortality, and eternal life; kingdoms, principalities, and powers!” (D&C 128:22–23). Amen, amen and amen!

FIRST POSTED: 7 May 2017

וְהִתְהַלַּכְתִּי בְּתוֹכְכֶם וְהָיִיתִי לָכֶם לֵאלֹהִים וְאַתֶּם תִּהְיוּ-לִי לְעָם

—Leviticus 26:12